McMASTER STUDENT ADDRESSES CIRCLE

Paul Matthews, From India, Delights Murray Street Baptist Audience.

Paul Matthews, of Madras, India, who is now in his second year at McMaster University, held his audience tensely last evening when he spoke at the Thank offering meeting of the Young Women's Mission Circle of Murray Street Church.

"Two of the outstanding characteristics of missionaries in India are service and self-sacrifice. Missionaries are willing to give service and to sacrifice for that service. Open the door, but don't stand in the doorway, is their motto," said the speaker.

"The missionary motive is centred in Christ. First we must have the soul's experience with Christ; secondly we must realize the world's need of Christ, and lastly we must receive the necessary education. Then we hear the greatest command that has been ever given: 'Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel, and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world.'

"There are three 'nots' for those who are giving their lives for the missionary effort. Be ye not called Rabbi; be ye not called Father; be ye not called leader, but rather be ye called servants, for the Son of Man came not to be ministered unto but to minister. The motive of every missionary should be, I have Christ and they have not."

Mr. Matthews stated that since coming to Canada and looking back on the facts that faced him, he realized the responsibility which is upon him—as a missionary returning to his native land. It is only since coming to Canada that he has definitely decided to return to that foreign land as a missionary.

Miss Ethel Garbutt, president of the Circle, who presided, stated that she had been told the task of introducing the speaker was easy when the chairman was confident that he would fulfil all the expectations of the audience. This was her case, she said, that she was introducing a speaker who would, she was sure, fulfill all the requirements of the audience.

Miss Clara Doughty, in extending a vote of thanks to Mr. Matthews on behalf of the Circle, said as the speaker was leaving the platform she thought of the verse: "East is east, and west is west, but never the twain shall meet," but before he concluded she was confident that, "Jesus shall reign where're the sun doth his successive journeys run."

The devotional part of the meeting was taken by Mrs. George Post, reading a number of Thanksgiving verses and following with praper. Mrs. W. Liddell favored the audience with a solo, "My Father Watches Over Me," with Arthur Collison as accompanist.

FIRST STORY OF THE ARMISTICE

MARSHAL FOCH TELLS DETAILS OF WAR'S END

Germans Pleaded For Immediate Cessation of Hostilities On November 7.

REVOLUTION WON.

President Wished Five Hours More of War, But Foch Won His Point.

(Suecial Cable to The Examiner. Copyright.)

LONDON, England, November 19.—Marshal Foch, in an exclusive interview granted the Paris correspondent of The London Sunday Chronicle, has revealed for the first time what transpired when he faced the German representatives who came to him ten years ago seeking to negotiate the Armistice and end the World War.

The famous Marshal likewise disclosed his personal thoughts at the moment he faced the German representative at Rethondes on November 7.

"So that's the German Empire. Eh bien, she is beaten. I must be firm and cool, without brutality or spite,' he muttered to himself as the seekers of peace saluted him.

"My train was at the Rethondes siding on the evening of November 6,' Foch explained. "The next day a German train came in slowly next to mine. General Weygand, my aide-de-camp, informed me the German plenipotentiaries had called to see me. Matthias Erzberger stepped forward and introduced his companions, General Winterfield, Oberdorf, and a naval officer whose name has escaped my memory. An interpreter translated.

"Gentlemen," I said, 'have you authority to sign? We must see your credentials.' They showed their papers, which were signed by the German Chancellor for the time being, Prince Max of Baden. We considered them sufficient.

"We have come," Erzberger said, "to receive communication of the terms upon which you would make an armistice."

I replied, "I have no communication to make. If you have anything to ask me, do so."

"He tried to make some explanation, but I asked him, 'Do you want a cessation of hostilities?'

"Yes," he replied, "we do."

"Well then," I said, "I will let you know the terms on which the Allied Governments have empowered me to stop fighting."

When the terms were read I told them, "Gentlemen, you have 72 hours to answer."

"For God's sake, M. Le Marshal," Erzberger explained, "let's not wait 72 hours. Let us suspend hostilities now. Our army is a prey to anarchy. Bolshevism is threatening us. Bolshevism can sweep through Germany, through Middle Europe, even threaten France."

"I shrugged my shoulders. 'I do not know in what state your army is,' I replied. 'I only know the position of mine.'

"The German envoys then withdrew. During the next three days they transmitted to me a mass of written communications. On the morning of November 10 I sent word to the Germans to remind them that the next day I would have to sign the terms I had proposed. They received

Jamaica Women Die At Age of 112 Years

KINGSTON, Jamaica, Nov. 19.—The recent death here of two persons, both at the age of 112 forms a curious coincidence. Mrs. George Maxwell died in the parish of Manchester after having been bedridden for several months. She was survived by her husband.

Mrs. Priscilla Irons died in Claremont. She enjoyed comparatively good health up to a few days before her death. Before her marriage she was Priscilla Brown. She retained vivid recollections of slavery days before the abolition of slavery in 1838.

She had 10 children, all of whom pre-deceased her, but half a hundred grandchildren and great-grandchildren survive her. Miss Sarah Fuller, of New York, is one of her granddaughters

MANY DEATHS IN HEAVY GALE

Thirty-six Reported Dead in England Alone and Three On Continent.

RHINELAND SUFFERS.

LONDON, November 19. (A.P.) — The terrific gale which swept western Europe for two days, raged over the continent on Saturday night with a known death toll of 39, and with 12 other persons missing in its broad path of destruction.

Of the three deaths reported on the continent, one occurred in Antwerp, one in Coblenz, and one at Bethune, France. A family of 12 was given up as lost at Amsterdam when a report was received that the wreck of their boat had been seen in the Zuyder Zee.

Nineteen persons were killed in England either by wreckage torn loose by the wind or by stumbling in front of vehicles while bucking the storm with heads down. Seventeen were drowned at Rye when a lifeboat capsized. Telephones, telegraph and train services were demoralized. The Channel steamers on Friday night required from eight to thirteen hours for a voyage normally made in less than two, with resulting suffering for the passengers.

Shipping Demoralized.

Germany was one country to feel the violence of the storm Saturday. The Rhineland was visited by a fierce wind and torrential rain which caused many injuries. A woman was killed and seven persons injured in the collapse of a house at Coblenz. A tug from Hamburg brought in the English steamer Linaria, which had lost its propeller in the rough seas. Many other vessels reported their distress to that port.

The gale ravaged the coast of Denmark and a number of small craft were reported sunk. Ferry service with Germany was suspended Lloyd's reported both Amsterdam and Rotterdam were battered by the gale, with resulting collisions between steamers in both ports.

The Swedish cargo steamer Scandeuvia, was towed into Boulogne by two tugs and the French radio stations picked up other calls from distressed shipping.

THREE DROWNED.

AMSTERDAM, Holland, November 19. — Canadian Press. — Three members of the crew of fourteen carried by the Swedish vessel "Malmoe," were drowned to-day when the ship went aground near Ameland Island.

ROTARY HEARS FINE TALK ON EUROPEAN TOUR

Rotarian Fred Roy Gives Some Impressions of His Recent Visit.

RECOMMENDS PARTY.

Scottish War Memorial the Most Impressive Thing He Saw in Europe.

A breezy summing up of some of the features of his European trip that had made the deepest impression upon him was given by Rotarian Fred L. Roy, in a most interesting talk at today's luncheon of the Peterborough Rotary club.

Rotarian Roy carried his hearers in rapid-fire fashion from Montreal down the St. Lawrence, across the Atlantic to Belfast and other points of interest in Ireland, to the Burns country, the Trossacks, Glasgow, and Edinburgh in Scotland; then to London, Amsterdam, Zeebrugge, Brussels, Arras, Vimy Ridge and Paris, with features of note in all these places etched in effective style by the speaker.

It was his first visit to Europe. Rotarian Roy said, and to all who were contemplating a trip overseas, he recommended going as a member of a tour party, this ensuring a maximum of comfort, an absence of personal responsibility, and the certainty of seeing the things that were worth while seeing.

The most impressive thing he had seen on the entire trip, the speaker declared, was the Scottish National War Memorial, erected in the grounds of Edinburgh Castle, and he read some of the most striking inscriptions he had seen there. All the famous Scottish regiments were remembered as well as Scots serving in the Air Force and in all parts of the Empire, and of Scots women generally.

Rotarian Roy referred to the large number of Rtarians in Great Britain and to the great part they were playing in bringing about a closer understanding between the United States and the Old Country.

President W. R. Morris expressed the thanks of the club to the speaker for his splendid address.

Rotarian J. H. Seels reported the successful launching of the Campbellford club on Friday night, when the ceremonies were attended by a Peterborough delegation. The speaker was satisfied that the Campbellford club would be heard from before the year was out.

Staff Captain Art. Smith, former member of the Peterborough club, was a visitor to-day, and was given a warm welcome. He is at present living in Ottawa.

A delegation from the Peterborough Rotary Club will visit Oshawa on Thursday to attend the formal opening of the new Rotary Hall.

PETERBOROUGH MEN LIVING IN WEST

Detective Sergeant Meagher, On Visit To Calgary, Meets Old Friends.

Detective Sergeant William Meagher, returning recently from Calgary, brought with him good tidings of former Peterborough residents whom he encountered, while in the Prairie Provinces. Mr. Meagher was entertained, while in Calgary by Jack McFadden, who is now operating a large clothing store, while Magistrate Walter Davidson also extended kindest hospitality.

At Drumheller, Alta., Bill Crowley, formerly a star rugby and hockey player, was encountered and he, too, was anxious to learn of Peterborough, his old home. Two other ex-Peterborough men, Jim Snyder and Fred Clark (who ran a fur store here) were found prospering in Saskatoon, and wished to be remembered to old friends in the East.

Father Bonna, pastor of Paw Paw Church. Thirty-five passengers of the bus were catapulted from their seats and showered with broken glass.

Old Clock Pepped Up Electric Power Used

ROUEN, France, Nov. 19 (A.P.) —The oldest clock in France received the shock of its 800 years' existence when electric power was installed and the citizens of this ancient city were no less shocked when they heard a snappy three-minute curfew instead of the customary 15-minute tolling.

Built in 1174 during one of Rouen's most famous seiges, the clock in the old belfry had been repaired under instructions of William the Conqueror, who decreed that every night a man should ascend the two hundred or more steps and personally slam the sledge hammer curfew on the large bell.

Other dynasties came, the revolution brought down many belfries, Napoleon ruled, then the Republic and still William the Conqueror's edict prevailed and night after night the man went up those steps.

THIRTY HUMAN SKELETONS ARE FOUND ON FARM

Excavated By Men Working in Government Sand Pit Near Cornwall.

IN PERFECT PRESERVATION.

Believe Pioneer Cemetery Unearthed—May Be 100 Years Old.

CORNWALL, Ont., Nov. 19 (Special to The Examiner).—Thirty human skeletons, many in a perfect state of preservation, were uncovered by workmen engaged in excavating a Provincial Government sand pit on the farm of W. Bockus, Ornabruck Township, during the past week. The bones were transferred from their original graves and reburied in aother part of the property.

The sand pit is located on Lot 13 of Ornabruck Township on the south side of the Provincial Highway and almost directly opposite Woodland's School. Twenty men under the direction of W. T. O'Neil, Superintendent of Roads for the Department of Public Highways, have been removing the sandy soil for road building purposes, and during operations early this week were startled when their shovels brought to light a perfect human skeleton. The discovery was followed by others, and in all thirty complete sets of bones were revealed.

Pioneer Cemetery

Describing the discovery, Superintendent O'Neil stated that his men had apparently come across a pioneer cemetery, and that the skeletons in his opinion, must by 75 to 100 years old.

Orders were issued to workmen to handle the remains with the greatest care and to re-bury them. As each set of bones was uncovered a careful search was made for traces of coffins, clothing, buttons or other objects which might give some clue to the identity of the dead, but without success.

Oldest residents of Ornabruck Township who have flocked to the Bockus Farm to see the graveyard are unable to throw any light upon the mystery surrounding the skele-

Duchess of York Has Scotch Cook

LONDON, Nov. 19.—The Duke and Duchess of York, already known as a simple, "homey" couple, have further pleased their countrymen by overlooking illustrious chefs from foreign lands to appoint a woman cook with the good Scotch name of Macdonald to preside over their kitchen.

Mrs. Macdonald is the only plain cook who has joined with the many chefs and restaurant managers in contributing menus and recipes to a book issued by the Empire Marketing Board, which advertises British products on British markets.

Mrs. Macdonald's menu has a distinctly Scottish flavor, consisting of Scotch broth, fried filets of sole, noisettes of vension, roast partridge, chocolate pudding and bacon savory.

YOUNG CHILD COMPLAINS OF ILL-TREATMENT RECEIVED FROM NURSES IN HOSPITAL

Marion Schoenherr, Five-Year-Old Daughter of Ottawa Fireman, Braves Driving Rain Storm Unclothed Rather Than Stand Ill-Usage.

CHILD SUFFERING FROM SCARLET FEVER; LEAVES BUILDING BY FIRE ESCAPE

Nurses Had Deprived Her of Edibles and Other Delicacies Sent By Her Friends—Parents To Take Matter Up With Authorities.

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 19.—(Special to The Examiner).—Naked and suffering from scarlet fever, Marion Schoenherr, five year old daughter of Lieut. P. Schoenherr of the Ottawa fire department, faced a driving rain storm rather than the treatment she claimed was given her by nurses of the Isolation Hospital, and at six p.m. Saturday, descended the fire escape from the third story of the institution, to which she was admitted on Tuesday.

Shivering and picking her way carefully down the slippery fire escape the girl stepped into the mud in Strathcona Park, and started for home.

Before she left she removed her night dress undershirt because she said the latter was unclean. She was unable to put the nightie back on.

Upon reaching the park she made her way toward the Rideau River and realized she was going in the wrong direction. She finally found her bearing and made her way to her home at 619 Chapel street.

At the corner of Templeton street and Blackburn avenue the youngster was met by Fred Kritsch who accompanied her the rest of the way, after a woman wrapped a coat around her. The child had walked three blocks before meeting anyone.

Slapped By Nurses

To her parents, the girl said the nurses had slapped her on the knuckles and deprived her of edibles sent by her parents and friends. When interviewed the parents registered indignation and announced their intention of taking the matter up with the hospital authorities.

Thirty minutes after girl had reached home hospital attendants teleed Mr. Schoenherr to determine if the girl had gone home, and when informed she had, offered to send for her. The father, however, refused to allow her to return to the hospital. The girl claimed that on several occasions she had been struck over the knuckles by a nurse and that a picture book and box of crayons her father had brought had been taken from her.

When questioned by her parents, as to whether she had received other gifts such as fruit and ice cream they had sent, the child acknowledged receiving only the ice cream.

Hospital authorities contend they do not know anything of the alleged ill-treatment and thought the story of the child was absurd.

BYNG REGIME MAKES CHANGES 3RD DEGREE METHOD ABOLISHED

New Chief of Police Believes in Confidence of the Public.

NIGHT MOTOR PATROLS.

To Cope With Outbreak of "Smash and Grab" Robberies.

LONDON, November 19. — (By Henry Somerville.) — Developments are rapid in Scotland Yard under the Byng regime. The new police chief has not waited for the report of the Royal Commission before providing safeguards against the practice of third degree methods. He is getting up what is called the interrogation department which will take all statements from witnesses and suspected persons. The statements will not longer be taken by the police in charge of a case. The new department will be supervised by four solicitors and every person examined will be clearly told whether they are regarded as suspects or purely as informants. Any statement they make which may be used to their own detriment will have its bearings explained to them and they may change their statements before appending their final signatures. The full details of the new procedure are not settled yet but Lord Byng is working on the principal that if the public has confidence in the police, they will give the fullest information and assistance.

Byng also is arranging night motor patrols of police in London streets. There has been an increase in "smash and grab." Thefts from windows of furriers, costumers and other stores. The night policemen on duty have not been able to deal with this form of theft. The motor patrol will wear plain clothes.

WHO'S WHO?

A visitor at the Kiwanis Charter Night Friday evening was evidently quite impressed by the fact that the guests rose, en masse, when the speaker of the evening, J. W. McFadden of Toronto, preceded by Frank Dawson, who had met him at the station, entered the dining room of the Empress Hotel.

"Do they always stand up when Frank Dawson comes in?" he asked in surprise, surveying the figure of the well-known Kiwanian with an added tinge of respect. It was explained to him that the gesture was a mark of respect to the visitor, not his escort.

IMPRESSIVE SERVICE.

His Lordship Bishop O'Brien and Clergy Celebrate Pontifical High Mass.

The nineteenth anniversary of the dedication and opening of the Church of the Sacred Heart was solemnized on Sunday with a dominant note of thanksgiving recurring in the day's devotions. This sentiment was particularly expressed by His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, who celebrated pontifical high mass in the morning, and at its conclusion addressed the congregation, which during the first four years of the parish, the second Catholic parish in Peterborough, he had shepherded as its pastor. At the altar Bishop O'Brien was assisted by Rev. J. J. O'Brien, who has been in charge of the church for fifteen years, and by Rev. Father Maloney, curate, and Rev. Leper Cured Goes Back To Mountain Home After Worrying Authorities Of Carolina

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—John Early, the leper, has recovered, the United States Public Health Service announced to-day, and has been discharged This, it is asserted, "is another triumph in modern medicine."

"In scientific parlance his leprosy is arrested, which means that for more than a year miscroscopic tests of his blood and tissues have been negative for the leprosy bacillus," and health service explained.

"He is well, although bearing on his face and body the scars of the disease. He goes forth during November, 1928, to mingle with his fellowmen to live among his kindred, back to his little farm in the mountains of North Caroline to be welcomed by his friends. Although 54 years of age he is rugged of constitution and is expected to round out a full period of useful and happy old age."

Early has been a problem to State and nation for a quarter century. At times he has slipped out of the hands of the authorities and roamed the country. His cunning, industry and will power gave him a nationwide notoriety. Last year he escaped from the National Leper Home at Carterville, La., and made his way to his old home in Western Nor th Carolina, where for a time he dared those who sought to send him back to the institution provided for him and others suffering from leprosy.

For several years Early was treated here by United States health service experts, but in 1921 he was transfered by special arrangements to Louisiana, where he has been since, except when dodging about the country.

Peterborough Old Boy In Rochester Volunteers To Organize Local People There For Re-union

This indication of interest outside the city should be an incentive to citizens to take an active part in the arrangements here, commencing with the public meeting in the Council Chamber to-night.

Forty-One Persons Perish During Storm Over British Isles—Much Damage Done

LONDON, England, Nov. 19.—(Canadian Press).—With Forty-one persons killed in the storm which swept over England, there was no sign to-day of a recurrence of the gale. Communications were being restored and the damage repaired.

With the re-opening of communications it became known that five more were to be added to the death toll, as a result of the wreck of a small Liverpool schooner, John Woodier, a youth, was the only one of the crew to escape. He managed to clamber onto a bit of rock that jutted out of the sea when the schooner was dashed to pieces on the rocks. After 48 hours without food, he was sighted and rescued by a pilot boat.

Crew Of Doomed Ship Fought Losing Battle

WATER POURED INTO 'VESTRIS' THROUGH HALF DOZEN LEAKS SHIP'S OFFICERS TESTIFY

Losing Battle To Stem Flow Described at Hearing Saturday.

RESUMES TO-DAY.

Have Not Answered Regarding Request For Assistance Previous to S.O.S.

NEW YORK, Nov. 19 (Associated Press).—The curtain of mystery concerning what had happened to the liner Vestris causing her to sink off the Virginia Capes a week ago to-day with the loss of 110 lives, had been drawn aside yesterday to reveal a picture of a crew fighting a losing battle to save a ship into which sea water poured through half a dozen leaks.

The story of the battle to keep the sinking ship afloat until help could arrive has been partly told at the hearing being conducted by United States Attorney Tuttle at which two of the ship's officers testified Saturday and which Mr. Tuttle plans to resume to-day.

Had Not Despaired.

When the investigation which began Friday to fix responsibility for the disaster, was recessed over the week-end Saturday, Chief Officer Frank Johnson, senior surviving officer of the ship, and James Adams, chief engineer, had testified that water poured into the vessel through leaking coal ports which could not be reached because of fuel in the bunkers, and through a leak in a "half door" in the side of the ship which could not be properly closed.

Despite the rate at which water poured into their vessel and their inability to stop the leaks, both officers said they did not despair of saving their ship until almost the moment when she turned completely on her side and sank.

The question whether the Vestris had asked for aid or whether her master, William Carey, had informed his owners or their agents of the ship's plight before the S.O.S. crackled through the ether last Monday forenoon had not been answered when the hearing was adjourned on Saturday.

"They Were Wrong."

Testimony has been conflicting regarding when it was discovered that something was wrong with the ship. First Officer Johnson Saturday said it was Sunday night. When reminded that the radio operators had testified that they noticed a list in the ship as early as midnight of Saturday, the first officer said "they were wrong."

Johnson also said Captain Carey had been wrong when in his wireless message to the owners after the S.O.S. he described the sea as "moderately rough."

Adams, the Chief Engineer, told in his testimony how he had succeeded in stopping two leaks in the ship and of his efforts to keep his steam pumps working against the flood of water flowing in from the leaks which could not be reached. He said that at 11 a.m. Monday he had informed Captain Carey that he thought he could keep the ship afloat, and that the master had told him he expected two destroyers by night.

The ship went down shortly after two o'clock in the afternoon.

Two Boys Drowned In Bay Off Toronto; Canoe is Overturned

Four Youths Clinging To Capsized Boat, Battle Against Cold Waters On Saturday Night

TWO FIGHT WAY TO SAFETY OF BEACH— LIE UNCONSCIOUS ON SHORE ALL NIGHT

Four Were All Good Swimmers and Members of Boys' Naval Brigade—Attempting Crossing From Mainland To Island.

TORONTO, Nov. 18.—Within 150 yards of Centre Island, four teenage boys fought early Saturday evening as grim a death struggle as has ever been waged against the waters of Toronto Bay.

Two of them, unequal to buffeting of the water, perished in the storm they had dared in a canoe. The other two, after fighting their way to shore, lay unconscious on the beach all night and are now confined to their beds with shock and exposure.

George Wallace Hodge, aged 19, and Reynold Goodrich, aged 18 were drowned. Lifesavers did not recover their bodies until late Sunday afternoon.

The survivors are J. W. Medland, 18-year-old son of William J. Medland, and Elliott W. Langley, Jr.

Members of Naval Brigade

All four boys were members of the Boys' Naval Brigade and had decided to spend Saturday evening together at the Langley family Summer home, at 188 Lake Shore, Centre Island. In spite of the rain, Medland and Langley attempted to take Hodge and Goodrich from the mainland to the Island in a canoe. Swamped by a wave within 200 yards of Mugg's Landing, at the extreme west end of Centre Island, they were plunged into the water.

According to the account given police, a squall blew up suddenly in the rain as they neared Centre Island, and 200 yards off the ferry docks, the flimsy, heavy-loaded craft was swamped by a roller that broke over one side. All four came to the surface, it is said, and, good swimmers, each was able to stroke through the water back to the canoe.

Drifted With Canoe

Perhaps bewildered, the boys did not attempt to right the canoe, police were told, and instead drifted with it. After some minutes drifting, they felt their feet touch bottom, the survivors said. Feeling that they could make shore, Medland and Hodge began wading in, but they had not gone more than six paces when they found that they had gone beyond their depth.

It was only a sandbar they had struck, all then realized. Goodrich and Langley, still clinging to the canoe in the driving drain, had seen, with anxious eye, their companions struggling as their feet left bottom. They now saw the two who had started for shore turn back and grasp again the upturned canoe.

The boys had now been in the water several minutes. Already teeth were chattering, hands quivering, with the intense cold. How much longer they endured that cold, with the safety of the beach in plain tantalizing sight, Langley and Medland do not know, they told the police.

Their next memory they said, was that of awakening on Mugg's Landing after dawn Saturday morning. The canoe, they said, was grounded at the water's edge near where they lay.

GEORGE BERRY SUFFERS LOSS

Barn and Part of Last Season's Crop Destroyed By Fire.

STARTED IN THRESHER.

BAILIEBORO, Nov. 19 (Examiner Correspondence).—A fire starting in a threshing machine, thought to be caused from an overheated hub, completely destroyed the fine barn of George Berry, residing about a mile west of Centreville on Saturday evening at six o'clock.

Mr. Berry had been threshing alsike in the barn from morning until noon when they moved the engine to another barn, where the grain mill was, and threshed grain until evening.

As Mr. Berry was milking his cows about six o'clock, he smelled smoke, and, rushing to the barn, he discovered that the inside of the clover mill was in flames. The mill was directly beside a large mow of oats, and the fire spread so quickly it was impossible to either stop the fire or save the new clover mill owned by Ben Olan of Cavan. Although help gathered very quickly, they were unable to get the mill from the barn, which contained a large mow of oats, Mr. Olan's new clover machine, and ten bags of alsike that had just been threshed were destroyed by the flames.

Mr. Berry, when he discovered the fire, rushed into the barn and tried to save the bags of alsike. He succeeded in saving two bags, but was badly burned in his attempt.

The mill had not been operated from noon that day, and the overheated part must have been smouldering all afternoon.

The barn was partly covered with insurance.

AWAITING DEATH OR RESCUE

With oblivion waiting over the side on raging seas and while crashing rigging threatened destruction, passengers on the ill-fated Vestris were caught by a cameraman seeking places in life boats. The difficulty of the operation is depicted in the photograph above which illustrates the dangerous cant of the ship and the disorder resulting from shattered spars and ropes. The picture was taken a few minutes before the vessel disappeared shows passengers and crew with life belts. The life boat is shown on the extreme right.

DOCTORS SHOW PLEASANT WAY TO RELIEVE COLDS INSTANTLY

Advise Home Use of Hospital Method to End Head Colds, Coughs and Chest Colds

Tempting Taste, Instant Relief—Then Cold Soon Disappears When Treated This Way!

Quick, sure relief—then the joy of waking up without the misery and risk one takes by neglecting a cold during this changeable weather.

This experience has been enjoyed by vast numbers of people in Peterborough, Lindsay and vicinity. For doctors are now recommending home use of a pleasant hospital method that goes straight to the seat of a stubborn cold and drives it out of the throat or bronchial tubes.

Surprised to See How Quickly His Cold Left

Edward H. Garrett, for example, neglected his cold until congestion had spread so far he feared pneumonia and called his doctor. Examination showed that his nose tubes and chest were congested with cold and he was running a temperature. On the doctor's advice then he took a good laxative followed by half-hourly doses of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral—a mixture of wild cherry, terpin-hydrate and other ingredients used in treating even the most extreme hospital cases.

Relief began instantly! With the first pleasant swallow he felt its comforting, healing warmth—from his nose passages deep down into his chest. In a few hours his fever was gone, congestion started to clear up and in another day or so, the doctor reports, all trace of the severe cold had disappeared.

Child's Cold Got So Bad Mother Called Doctor

Awakened by the harsh coughing of her eight-year-old son, Albert Jr., Mrs. A. H. Webster called their doctor. When he arrived the child breathed with difficulty and the thermometer showed fever. He immediately gave pleasant doses of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral and in a little while the child had stopped coughing and was sleeping naturally. By morning the fever was gone, the doctor reports, and in another day or so the boy was out playing—as well as ever.

Note: Other cases reported daily—all certified by attending physicians.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral quickly penetrates and heals inflamed linings of the air passages. Absorbed by the system it helps allay congestion and drive out the cold from the nose passages, throat and chest.

Just a few pleasant spoonfuls of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral now and you, too, will feel like a different person to-morrow. At all druggists—60c and twice as much in $1.00 hospital size.

TO-NIGHT'S OLD HOME WEEK MEETING.

The organization meeting in connection with Peterborough's Old Home Week, to be held to-night, should be largely attended in view of its importance.

The work of staging a successful week of this nature cannot be left until a few weeks or even months before the date selected.

If it is to be made what it should be the committees will have to begin their labors almost at once, especially those members whose mission is to locate and get into touch with old boys and girls who are likely to come to Peterborough for the re-union.

Everybody home in 1929, is the slogan that will have to be put over if Peterborough's Old Home Week is to be a complete success, and the first step toward that end is obviously an enthusiastic start and the enrollment of a body of real workers who realize that there is much to be done and are ready to do it as a contribution toward a community enterprise.

The Diamond Jubilee celebration showed what could be done when Peterborough worked as a unit.

It is to be hoped that much the same spirit will be in evidence at to-night's and subsequent meetings of the Old Home Week organization.

Don't forget to-night's meeting; it is important that th e affair should get away to a flying start.

CAMPBELLFORD'S ROTARY CLUB.

The formation of a Rotary Club in Campbellford will be a good thing for Peterborough's neighbor.

Our experience here with service clubs is that they offer much, not only to their members, but to the communities in which they are situated, by reason of the worth-while enterprises they promote in the interest of the unfortunate and the under-privileged and the support they give to all community undertakings.

There is every reason to feel that what has been successful in the larger centres will give equally fortunate results in smaller communities, and so Campbellford will undoubtedly have cause to bless the day upon which Rotary was established there, and Campbellford citizens who have identified themselves with the movement will realize that they are connected with an organization that offers a real opportunity for service.

The service clubs may be sneered at by those who refuse to study what they are aiming at and what they are accomplishing, but in most cases such organizations have justified themselves by a fine record of altruistic achievements that have added to the happiness of the centres in which they are located.

THE EXHIBITION ATTENDANCE.

The fact that the gate receipts at the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition fell off to the extent of $2,442 and that there was a substantial decrease in the grandstand attendance, should give concern not only to the directors but to the public generally, for the Exhibition is a community enterprise, the success of which means much to Peterborough and district.

The bad weather during the early part of the week was partially responsible for the decrease, but not altogether, for it must be remembered that the attendance on the last day of the Exhibition when the weather conditions were good was considerably short of that registered on the final day in 1927.

What then was the cause?

Certainly not the Exhibition itself, for it is readily admitted that in point of exhibits, grandstand programs and all-round excellence this year's fair was superior to any in the history of the event.

The man on the street declares that a readjustment of admission and grandstand charges is the tonic needed to carry the Exhibition to a new attendance record.

His views are worthy of consideration, for it is upon the man on the street and his family—or, in other words, the public—that the Exhibition must depend for its sinews of war.

WELL DONE, P.C.I.

Congratulations are in order to Coach C. S. Browne and the members of his victorious Peterborough Collegiate football team, who have won the Central Interscholastic championship and thus become the first holders of the splendid trophy donated by Dr. Frank Neal.

The lightest senior team the Collegiate Institute has ever fielded, this year's squad will be remembered in school history as one of the gamest that has worn the garnet and grey. By sheer courage and determination this plucky band of youngsters, aided by the football science imparted to them by Mr. Browne's successful coaching, has swept into the discard much heavier teams under ground conditions that favored the more bulky opposition.

P.C.I. have played smart, fast, clean and courageous football, and Peterborough owes them a vote of thanks for most worthily representing this city in a sport that when played as they play is a delight to every red-blooded Canadian.

When veiled professionalism has permeated so much of what we mistakingly call amateur sport, it is a pleasure to be able to congratulate a team of youngsters who not only buy their own football equipment, but pay for their own meals when on a trip an d then give every last ounce in their young bodies to bring victory to their school.

Real amateurs and genuine sportsmen are those P.C.I. players and, win or lose in the Ontario series, they have earned community commendation.

THE RADIO JUMBLE.

The long-awaited reallocation of radio wave lengths, which became effective on Sunday, has evoked no enthusiasm in this district, to say the least. The feeling of listeners-in seems to be that if the radio commissioners of the United States had deliberately applied themselves to the task of spoiling reception in this section of Ontario they could not have made a better fist of it. The powers- that-be that control radio broadcasts in Canada and who have a working agreement with the commission in the United States will be expected to give ear to the complaints that heterodyning interference of some United States stations is ruining Canadian programs, but that does not seem to be the major complaint of the fans. The chief grievance, we gather, is that certain American stations that for years have been considered "old reliables" and through which the feature hook-ups were best secured have either been lost to listeners-in in this district or their efficiency lessened. And this is a matter over which the Minister of Game and Fisheries, the chief radio official of Canada, has no control. It is understandable that Canadian stations cannot compete with the big studios of the United States in the presentation of the high-priced stars of the theatre, concert stage and opera. And it is understandable, too, that Canadian fans prefer to tune in on those feature broadcasts, rather than listen to the ordinary run-of-mine artists contributing to Canadian programs. We may deplore this attitude, but it's human nature and it is something in which the element of patriotism doesn't enter. The door would seem to be wide open to Canadian stations. If the radio officials at Ottawa effectively nip in the bud the unwarranted interference with Canadian wave bands and the proprietors of Canadian stations improve the quality of the broadcasts, it will follow, we think, that the loss of certain favored U. S. stations will not be so keenly felt.—Hamilton Spectator.

ILLUMINATIVE STATISTICS.

Apropos of the curious articles by General Reilly and others in American magazines about the showing made by the United States army in France during the World War, and which—owing to their attempts to belittle he British doings—have produced such a trenchant commentary by a Canadian officer, Major Drew, in MacLean's Magazine, a volume recently published in England, the "Memories and Recollections," of Mr. Asquith—we beg pardon, the Earl of Oxford and Asquith,—contains an interesting exhibit This is a sketch-map sent to Lord Oxford from France by Sir Douglas Haig, commanding the British armies, showing the positions of the Allied and German forces in France on September 29, 1918, just before the breaking of the Hindenburg line, and the collapse of the German army.

The map is stated in Lord Oxford's book to be a photographic reproduction of the map daily revised at British headquarters in France to show the battle position of every army division on both sides on the western front.

General Reilly has been ringing the changes about the dominating position of the American army towards the close of the war. Sir Douglas Haig's map of September 29 shows, as already intimated, the place of every division on the fighting front of each of the allied armies, and of every division of the German armies opposed to them.

By the map it is shown that on September 29, 1918, on the battle front from the English Channel to Switzerland there were actually opposed to each other on the fighting line or immediately in reserve 204 infantry divisions of the allied armies against 207 German divisions. There were also a few cavalry divisions on each side.

In the extreme north, close to the English Channel, 2 French and 13 Belgian divisions are shown, opposed by 8 German divisions. Next south, the British army, comprising 64 divisions aided by 2 American divisions, face 79 German divisions. Then the main part of the French army occupies the rest of the front south to Switzerland, except for a space in the neighborhood of Verdun occupied by American divisions. The American divisions are shown to number 21, which aided by 7 French divisions were opposed to 19 German divisions. The balance of the French army, 95 divisions, faced 101 German divisions.

In short, on the battle front on the eve of the German collapse, a vastly greater British force was engaged than American force, and engaged with far greater numbers of the enemy in proportion.

But more than this. Sir Douglas Haig's map differentiated among the German divisions. Some of these are marked "asault divisions," which were composed of the best fighting men of the German army, while others are marked "ordinary divisions" and "Landwehr," the latter the less formidable of all. And the majority of the German assault divisions are shown massed opposite the British front. Opposite the British are shown 24 German assault divisions. Opposte the Americans and the French divisions with them are shown 5 such divisions.

This sketch-map by Haig was, of course, not sent with any thought of invidious comparisons. Mr. Asquith was not then in office. The map was sent to Mr. Asquith by the British commander-in-chief as simply an interesting matter for a private friend.

The war is long over. Its details might well be left to impartial historians. But if jaundiced attempts are made to belittle the part that the British Empire played, it is not well that they should be accepted in silence. Major Drew and MacLean's Magazine have done a desirable and great public service in exposing such falsehood about the war in regard to the British effort as General Reilly and others of his temper have sought to convey.—Ottawa Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Don't forget to-night's Old Home Week organization meeting. There should be a representative attendance.

United States dry agents are being ordered to the Southern States. Judging by the vote in the recent election, their services shouldn't be needed down there.

Reading the reports of the Vestris inquiry, the impression will not down that the publicity given United States Attorney Tutle in the proceedings is not exactly distasteful to that official.

Divining rods are being used in South Africa to locate home-brew, but nothing so intricate is needed in this country when any one who wants to turn his home into a brewery can obtain permission to do so.

Little is being heard about the Brien charges just now, but the subject should be a live one when the Legislature meets in January.

Will there be two elections, Federal and Provincial next year, only one or none at all? Your guess is as good as anybody else's on this question.

However, the extraordinary process by which monkeys made men of themselves was considerably slower than the reverse system.—Arkansas Gazette.

At that, the average American isn't any more familiar with the Monroe doctrine than he is with the words of "The Star-Spangled Banner."—Chicago Evening Post.

Sir Harry Lauder is a record breaker. At a Rotary Club meeting in Aberdeen, after singing a song, he took up a collection of $110.—Owen Sound Sun-Times.

MORE CONGRATULATIONS.

To the Editor of The Examiner, Peterborough:

TRENT RIVER, November 16. — Am writing to congratulate you on the unexcelled Armistice number, and readily agree with the words of Mr. Miller, it was worth a year's subscription. It seems wonderful to think so many beautiful illustrations of those who served overseas, and the memorials throughout the district could be collected in such a short time. The subscribers of your valuable paper certainly get their money's worth in that edition, and am sure each one will keep it in memory of a peace dearly bought by a hard-won victory. Sincerely,

A Thought

PALS.

I'm going to be a better pal to folks
than I have been before,
I'm going to try to help them when they're sad and maybe sore,
I want to add a smile at least to cheer
them on their way,
And to make their burdens lighter that they carry day by day.

How it cheers me when I'm worried,
and I'm blue from care and woe,
Just to have somebody smile at me,
and only say "Hello."
How it helps to soothe my aching heart, and makes me realize
The shadows in my face have gone—there's gladness in my eyes.

So I know how much it helps the other fellow now,
When I smile and say "Hello" to him
as nice as I know how,
And when he lifts his head and smiles
a cheerful "Howdy-do,"
It makes us both feel just like pals—
it will do the same for you.

—Olive Irene Brockett.

GOD'S MINUTE.

Being then made free from sin, ye became the servants of righteousness.—Rom. 6:18.

Heavenly Father, we thank Thee for the rest which has come to our bodies in sleep. During the long hours of the night Thou hast been watching over us. Thou art always mindful of us, not only in the night, but also in the workaday. Help us, dear Father, to be as mindful of Thee as Thou art thoughtful of us. Forbid that we forget our God. May we not become so occupied with worldly affairs that we have no time or place for Thee.

As we talk to Thee, our sins rise like mountains from the deep. We are ashamed of our weaknesses. We confess everything, and plead for Thy forgiveness. Leave us not in our humiliation, but take us by the hand and lift us up. Give us the assurance that our sins are pardoned, and help us to live this day as the blessed Jesus lived every day.

We pray for the discouraged and distressed; Lord, give them cheer. We pray for all the people who are living in darkness; Lord, give them light. We pray for those who fight against themselves, against each other and against God; Lord give them peace. We ask it all in the name of Jesus, for Thy glory, and for our good. Amen.

BALLAST TANKS AND BATHS NEW AIDS FOR THE SEASICK

Two new methods of combating seasickness recently have been brought to the aid of travelers who suffer on ocean voyages. One is the invention of "antiseasickness tanks" installed on the large steamers of the Hamburg-American line. They are in the form of great blisters along the waterline of the ship. Sea-water, rushing into these tanks through portholes, adjust the ballast automatically and reduce the ship's roll, according to Popular Science Monthly.

The other is a new method of treating seasickness, discovered by an English physician, Dr. R. A. Bennett. It consists of a salt water bath at a temperature of about 90 degrees, to be aken when waves of sickness begin to be felt. The patient is instructed to lie in the water with his eyes blindfolded. While the bathtub moves with the ship, the water in the tub responds to the motion only slightly, so that the immersed patient remains fairly motionless. The blindfold serves to shut out the sense of motion.

CATTLE, GRAIN AND PRODUCE

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Nov. 19 (Canadian Press).—Selling out on the part of traders who had been looking for immediate new farm relief developments did much to press wheat values downward yesterday. In this connection, President Coolidge's address to the National Grange Friday night furnished no apparent fresh motive for buying, and prices gave way to a moderate extent as to result Saturday in a market that on the whole was by no means a large scale affair, and was, therefore, easily influenced.

Closing quotations on wheat were easy, ¼ to ½c net lower, corn finished ⅝ to ⅞c off, oats unchanged to ¼c up, and provisions unchanged to a setback of 50c.

Numerous wheat traders had of late incorrectly assumed that in speaking to the National Grange, President Coolidge would take occasion to outline more definitely than heretofore plans for farm relief legislation. Considerable recent buying has been on the basis that this course would be followed, and when the attempt to anticipate a hoped-for advance in prices failed of success, more or less selling Saturday was naturally a sequel, commission houses and pit speculators were the chief sellers, with December delivery showing the most weakness.

Firmness of the Liverpool wheat market despite prospects of heavy world shipments helped somewhat to counteract the general downward trend of wheat values here. Besides, Kansas advices were at hand telling discovery of Hessian fly eggs in abundance on new wheat in Northern Kansas. Meanwhile, although the Winnipeg wheat market displayed relative strength, export demand Saturday for wheat from North America appeared slack, no sales of consequence being heard of. Incidentally, too, dispatches from Argentina said weather conditions there were more auspicious and the wheat harvest becoming central.

Corn at first showed a decided upturn in price on account of continued wet weather throughout the corn belt. Later, however, prospects of clearing conditions had a tendency to weaken the market, and there was also much notice taken of the fact that arrivals of corn at Chicago Saturday totalled 298 cars, against 145 cars a week ago and only 70 cars on the corresponding day last year. Moreover, messages from the seaboard intimated that but little corn export demand was in evidence. Oats displayed a firm undertone notwithstanding downturns in corn and wheat. Virtually no rural offerings of oats to arrive were received.

Scattered buying steadied the provision market in the face of weakness of hog values.

STERLING EXCHANGE.

MONTREAL, Que., Nov. 19 (Canadian Press).—Sterling exchange rates were quoted here Saturday as follows:

Demand $4.84⅝ to ⅝.
Cables $4.84⅞ to $4.85.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., Nov. 19 (Canadian Press). — The export trade in grain here Saturday was fair and a moderate amount of business was done in barley and oats for November and December-January shipment. On spot sales of No. 3 Northern wheat were made at 6¼c per bushel over the Winnipeg November option, and No. 5 wheat at 10 to 10¼c per bushel under the option, c.i.f. Montreal.

Owing to the advance in the November oats option at Winnipeg the spot market for Canadian Western oats was stronger and values marked up two cents per bushel.

Prices for all grades of Spring and Winter wheat flour were firmly maintained under a good demand from local and foreign buyers.

A stronger feeling developed in the market for standard grades of rolled oats and prices were advanced 10 cents per bag. This was attributed to the strength that prevailed in the raw material situation. The trade in all lines of millfeed continued good and values were unchanged.

The butter trade was moderately active, and the underton to the market was steady. Receipts were 1,333 packages.

The cheese market was firm under a moderate demand. Receipts were 4,878 boxes.

A fair amount of business was transacted in fresh and storage eggs and values were steady. Receipts were 777 cases.

Potatoes were in good demand and prices were unchanged. New Brunswick Green Mountains sold at 65c per bag of 90 lbs., in bulk, and Prince Edward Island grades at 78c to 83c, in bags.

To Briggs these simple people had had beauty which flowed around him with a quality that was benign. A great simplicity had come into his heart. Briggs wanted Valerie. Valerie wanted Briggs, but Valerie herself lost him. How?

THE Overland Limited did a rather unprecedented thing. Shooting out of the desert and into the golden glow of California, it jumped a track, landing a mail car and a freight car into a ditch and miraculously avoiding so much as the casualty of a broken arm for any member of the crew or passenger list.

It was the sort of accident that causes every one, a little white and shaken, to sit by afterwards and remark, "Well, we have something to be grateful for. Think of what might have happened."

That was true enough. The overland Limited, more by a prank of circumstance than anything else, escaped being heralded in the daily press with one of those gruesome lists of "among the dead and missing."

In Drawing Room A of the foremost sleeping car, Mr. Ogden Briggs, en route from a winter in Cannes, France, to his colossal home in Beverly Hills, California, held what was for him a most unusual introspective sort of survey.

If Ogden Briggs, instead of escaping with a slight bump on the forehead when the engine left the rails, had found himself in "among the dead" lists of casualties, the four-million-dollar estate, not including the chateau at Cannes, the Beverly Hills home and a Renaissance stone front in New York's East Sixties, would have been promiscuously divided among the next of kin.

Too Much Alive to Think of Death

Incredible as it may seem, Ogden Briggs had no will. For the reason that so many men fail to draw up that significant document.

In the midst of life, he was too full of vitality to contemplate death. Besides, although Ogden Briggs would not have admitted it to himself, he feared death. Detested the idea. Did not believe in the immortality of the soul.

Except now, something had happened to disturb his equilibrium. It had been a hair-breadth escape. He felt a sort of reverence for he did not know what.

Miracle was around him.

In the four hours that it took the Overland Limited to resume its journey, Ogden Briggs was beset with a nervousness and strange exhilaration as he wandered over the country side.

At sunset, as he was passing a fuschia-covered Spanish bungalow, nestled into the heart of a grove of eucalyptus trees, he fell into conversation with a blond boy hanging over its wicker gate. Briggs asked for a drink of water. He was given it at the side entrance to a little dining-room where the family was just about to draw up to summer evening supper.

The spectacle of that little group, with fuschia climbing about the doors and windows, sitting down to the simplicity of a cool summer supper of iced tea, cottage cheese, thin slabs of pink ham and strawberries, was like a glimpse into some incredible, simple arcadia.

Here Was Beauty Simple Beauty

There were a blond mother of the blond boy, a middle-aged father with a pinkish goatee, and a girl with a head the color of the sunset that flared across the horizon. After the sophistication of the Riviera, the regalia of travel on the world's largest ocean liner, days of the New York blare, the beauty of this simplicity smote Briggs, as it were, across his very heart.

Probably the reverential mood, induced by his narrow escape, had something to do with it. When these simple folk, tucked away in the fragrant beauty of this quiet woodland retreat, asked him to share the simplicity of their supper with them, it seemed to Briggs one of the memorable happenings of a life time crowded with pretentious pomp.

Valerie was the girl's lovely name. The rightness of that name! She wore a cotton dress, the precise blue of her eyes and an organdy sash that tied around into a big bow in the back, like a little girl's.

To Briggs, who sent one woman alone, a slender beauty who wore jade earrings and had slitted eyes with heavy eyelids, as many as ten dozen hothouse camelias a week, this slip of a Valerie was suddenly, to his chastened eyes, the perfection of perfection. These simple people had beauty which flowed around him with a quality that was benign. And suddenly Valerie was more desirable than anything in life.

They dined off a red-and-white checked table cloth in a room where a mother Maltese cat and her four suckling kittens slept in an old rocking-chair and where a half-completed little cotton slip, the adorable size of Valerie, lay across a sewing machine and where the sole ornaments were two brown China pug dogs gracing the ends of the mantel piece.

These good people said grace when they sat down and the head of the house, who looked like an artist, but was actually a dirt farmer, stacked the plates up before him as he emptied each one of them and carried them over himself to the sink after the meal was finished.

There was a honey-suckle-scented half-hour on the side veranda before Ogden Briggs had to rush for his train, which was whistling in the distance. The group saw him off from the lower edge of the garden. The blond mother wrapped him up a jar of the fresh fig marmalade he had asked a third helping of, and the violet eyes of Valerie smiled him a good-bye that he carried away in his heart like a dear bruise.

Plainly, from the attitude of these simple people, a great man had come into their midst. To Ogden Briggs, a great simplicity had come into his heart. For the three weeks that followed, no camelias arrived at the threshold of the lady with the slitted eyes and the heavy, waxed lids.

Then one day, he sent a wire to the little house on the edge of the desert in a grove of eucalyptus and invited himself to dinner the following Sunday.

He was like a boy. His Hispano-Suiza whizzed him all too slowly through the garden stretches of lower California. Briggs had found something too precious to risk losing.

He arrived again at sunset. The fuschia was out in its blaze of lavendar and the blond boy was swinging on the wicket gate.

There was something a little changed about him. Nothing much, but instead of overalls, he wore a stiff suit of store tweeds and a collar that bit into his neck. It made of him a gawk, where he had been a bare-footed youngster of the soil.

The blond mother greeted him, this time at the door to the front parlor, and somehow, something about her was gone, too. Actually, it was a trifling change, but it seemed to matter. She was shrouded in something stiff and black like bombazine that seemed to upholster her. The old maternal lines that the plain blue cotton stuffs had given her, were gone. She was just a stiff-figured country woman on a holiday. The father, too, who had worn a shirt that fell away and revealed his tan throat and breast, was in store tweeds, pretty horrible ones.

And Valerie. She was in some kind of white cotton lace dress that hung in hanks about her figure, making it seem lanky. There were imitation pearl blobs in her ears and a string of them around her throat, and Valerie's sunset-colored hair was caught up and frizzed in tight-looking screws that danced about as she walked.

What a Mistake Valerie Made!

Dinner was served on a white crocheted tablecloth, with a hired girl in for the occasion. There was chicken done in a heavy glue of gravy and doughy dumplings and the company paraphernalia of viscid pastries. All the family looked to Valerie for pointers. She superintended the hired girl. She was obviously the motivating spirit of all the pretense. Valerie was determined that the guest-of-honor, who to her might have ridden into the scene out of one of her dreams, should not find her family "simple simons".

The first time a knight in armor had walked in on them unawares. The second time, in her frizzed bangs, her cotton lace hank of a frock and her pearl blobs, Valerie was determined to prove worthy of the miracle that had befallen her.

Poor Valerie!

Poor Ogden Briggs!

When Ogden Briggs tore himself away from the agony of that pretentious, gluey, third-rate meal with which the simple folk had tried to impress him, his Hispano-Suiza whizzed back to town like a streak across country.

When he reached town, his first step was to send a hamper of twelve dozen camelias to a certain young lady with jade earrings and slitted ey

A. Sanderson, of Marmora. The ceremony was performed by Rev. C. J. Beckley, of the United Church, in the presence of a few of the immediate relatives and friends of the contracting parties.

The bride, looking lovely dressed in pale blue satin and tulle, with white hose and shoes, was given away by her father and was unattended.

After congratulations were received a lunch was served.

MISSION CIRCLE SOCIAL EVENING

Thanksgiving 'At Home' Is Attended By Over Two Hundred Guests.

REV. WILLIAMS SPEAKS.

MILLBROOK, Nov. 19 (Examiner Correspondence).—The Thanksgiving At Home, sponsored by the Golden Link Mission Circle of the United Church, and held in the Sunday School auditorium on Wednesday evening, was attended by well over two hundred guests, and was a gathering unique in its way, and likely to have results of far-reaching importance in the lives of the young people connected with the church.

The honorary president, Mrs. V. C. Lambert, took the chair and on behalf of the Circle, welcomed the large gathering, and after a chorus, "Be a Helper," by about twenty of the girls, the brief worship period was conducted by the president, Miss Jean L. Burnham; the hymn in which all joined heartily, "Sweet Hour of Prayer," and the Bible lesson read from the third chapter of Colossians, after which the president led in prayer. The items on the program which followed were: Piano solo, Miss Ella Elson; reading, "Aunt Marthy Goes Visitin'," by Miss Bertha Lang; debate, "Resolved that the good-natured untidy woman is better than the tidy crank"; affirmative, B. B. Dawson and Miss Wilma Fallis; negative, R. Larmer and Reginald Willis.

The judgment as to the winning side was left to the audience, the affirmative being awarded the popular vote; the debaters meanwhile standing with their backs to the people, so they would not be embarrassed by knowing who was voting in their favor or the reverse.

The pastor, Rev. W. W. Jones, then addressed the gathering, presenting especially the subject of a Young Peoples' League, in connection with the local church. So clearly and effectively was this matter brought home that, when a standing vote was taken, after the pastor had pledged himself and his official board, to the utmost sincerity and support, practically all the young folk in the large audience, within the ages mentioned for membership, rose to their feet, thereby promising to ally themselves with this organization.

An interim nominating committee was named by Mr. Jones, consisting of Mrs. Lambert, Miss J. L. Burnham, Miss Wilma Fallis, Will Byam and Kenneth Fallis, which will meet at the parsonage in the immediate future and submit a slate of officers for election at the initial meeting when the league will be formed.

Rev. G. A. Williams Speaks

Rev. George A. Williams, a returned missionary from Formosa, was called upon, and delivered an inspiring address on "The Challenge of the Church to Its Young People," immediately after a quintette, "The Whippoorwill's Song," had been given by Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Johnston, Mrs. Jones, and Mr. and Mrs. M. McDowell.

Expressing his pleasure at being present, and listening to the debate by the young people, Rev. Mr. Williams went on to state that there are more than one million young people in the United Church of Canada, and if they are once linked up to God for service, no one could possibly estimate the power going out from their lives —"enough to transform the whole world."

Painting a vivid picture of what an increasing population is sure to mean to Canada, the speaker urged, with telling force, the challenge of the world's need, personal experience on the mission field in the Far East having made very real to him the mountain of human suffering to be encountered once you get away from the so-called Christian lands." Contact with lepers in Formosa, where this loathsome disease is very prevalent, had led him to long for such power as Jesus had when He said, "Be thou clean," and the leprosy departed. "But if we have the spirit of Jesus, we will be willing to do something of what He did when He was here on the earth."

The challenge of the opportunity for service was the next point considered, the speaker mentioning the thrill which comes to one engaged in his Master's business, on the distant mission fields, and in the home area as well. Mentioning the amazing number of different nationalities in our country, the appeal was made: "Let us win the cream of their capabilities for Jesus Christ, and Canada may well lead the world along all lines."

Challenge to World.

The challenge to world service was the final heading, the obligation to carry the best of our civilization to all the primitive people round the world being stressed. A personal experience among the head hunters, a hill tribe of Formosa, of cannibal practices, made real the thrill in missionary endeavor of which Rev. Mr. Williams spoke convincingly during his interesting address.

"This is the day of the advertising specialist. Who is going to advertise Jesus Christ? It's the young man's and the young woman's joy to-day. The work fields are so short-handed that we cannot meet the opportunities knocking at our door. What are you going to do about it? I pray you, enter into a partnership with the King of Kings in a work that will stand forever."

Prayer by Rev. Joseph Wilks closed this part of the gathering, and afterward music and a contest provided entertainment, the service of refreshments bringing a most enjoyable occasion to a happy close.

Misses Francis Jones and Estelle Hetherington were the accompanists of the evening.

BROKEN

CHAPTER XXXV.

THE STORY THUS FAR:

GILES CHITTENHAM returns to London from the United States—where he has contracted a secret and unfortunate marriage with SADIE BARROW—to hold wind up the affairs of his younger half brother, RODNEY ARDRON, who has recently killed himself for love of the notorious flirt, JULIE FARROW. In Switzerland he meets Julie Farrow, through his friend, LOMBARD, and makes love to her with the intention of spurning her in revenge for her treatment of Rodney. But, after he realizes that he really loves her, he finds that she is a cousin of the Julie Farrow whom his brother loved. He tells her the truth—that he is already married. She plunges into a gay, wild life trying to forget him. A rich, older man, SCHOFIELD, wants to marry her. Chittenham hears that his wife is in London. He meets the other Julie, who tells him she has not long to live. Then she leaves London. He has a talk with his Julie, but finds her hard and apparently heartless. He decides to divorce Sadie and then, if Julie will have him, marry her. Lombard tells Chittenham that unless he gives him money he will tell the world about Chittenham's marriage to Sadie, and that he and Julie spent the night together at St. Bernard. In the meantime, Julie tells Schofield she will marry him. Chittenham, finding her in her apartment just after getting news that her Cousin Julie has died, gets her to admit that she loves him.

"I suppose I'm really doing a dreadful thing," Julie said painfully. "It has always seemed a dreadful thing to me—to let a married man make love to you. I thought it was dreadful of Jewel—poor Jewel!—when she used to laugh at me and call me old-fashioned—but I'm worse than she was, because I'm even quite willing to let you divorce your wife." She tried to laugh, and it seemed to Chittenham as if something of the girl he had known in Switzerland were slowly creeping back, as if something of her light-hearted happiness were already being recaptured.

He made a swiftly passionate movement towards her.

"Julie—do you really love me, my dear?"

The hot color rushed from her chin to her brow.

"Will it sound very horrid of me if I say that I wish I didn't?" she whispered. "No—no, stay there. I want to talk to you. It's still all so unreal—I feel so muddled—as if it's just a dream that I can only faintly remember. Tell me, why did you come back this evening?"

"Because I heard that you were to marry Schofield."

"Oh!" Her eyes fell. Poor Lawrence! She had forgotten him completely. "Who told you?" she asked.

"My mother."

"And you believed it?"

His eyes softened.

"At any rate, I do not believe it any longer. You are going to marry me."

Julie looked away from him. She wanted to say: "But it is true that I have promised to marry him, quite true!"—only the words would not come. It is surprising how little a man counts in a woman's life if she does not love him. It was not for Schofield's sake that Julie hesitated to speak, but for Chittenham's. She, too, felt that this moment was too great to mar with even the smallest shadow. In the last half hour she felt as if years of unhappiness and bitterness had been lifted from her shoulders, and there was a glint of laughter in her eyes when next she looked at Giles Chittenham.

"And, now—what do we do now?" she asked softly.

Chittenham held out his arms.

"Come here and I will tell you."

She went to him readily enough, and for a little while everything was forgotten in kisses and the foolish words of lovers which yet hold all the wisdom of the world.

The chiming of a clock brought them back to earth.

"It's twelve o'clock," Julie said guiltily.

"And you have never been up so late in all your life before, have you?" Giles teased her gently.

Julie sighed.

"It's weeks since I went to bed before three or four in the morning," she admitted.

"That's all over and done with now."

She was silent, and he urged again, gently.

"It's all over, isn't it, Julie?"

She nodded, and then asked:

"Giles, did you hate me very much last night?"

He would not meet her eyes.

"Hate you? When?"

"Last night—at your mother's."

"It hurt, Julie—it hurt horribly."

"I wanted it to. I wanted to hurt you, to make you ashamed of me."

"It made me ashamed of myself. It made me ashamed of the way I had behaved to you."

"Did Mrs. Ardron say anything about it?"

"No."

Julie sighed again.

"She thought I was awful, I know. I think she would have liked to order me out of her house. She doesn't like me, Giles."

"She doesn't know you—not the real you."

"She avoided shaking hands with me when I left—there was a dreadful cold look in her eyes. I'm wondering if I dare go to her house again tomorrow."

"I shall take you myself."

"Will you?" She looked up at him with pathetic happiness. "The last weeks are almost like a bad dream now," she said after a moment. "If only you knew how I hated drinking too much and being up all night."

"My poor little girl!"

She pushed him from her.

"It was your fault," she said feverishly. "I was weak enough to let it be your fault. I suppose I haven't any pride, or I should just have gone on and got over it."

"I'm glad you didn't, Julie."

"And will you come with me tomorrow really?" Her eagerness died suddenly. "You ought not to, we both know that. Oh, I wish things were all right, and we could just be engaged in the good old-fashioned way! I'm not meant to be modern really. I should love to have lived in the days when you had to come and ask my father if you could be engaged to me—there was so much more romance and dignity about it than there is today. Nobody ever asks anyone's permission it's all just fixed up anyhow."

"I don't care how it's fixed up if only I get you in the end."

With sudden impulse, Julie raised his hand to her lips and kissed it, then with revulsion of feeling she almost angrily pushed it from her.

"I didn't mean to do that—I'm not slavish really. I wish I didn't love you—I never wanted to love anyone—no, I don't mean that!" She put her arms round his neck, and looked at him with eyes that were misted over with passionate tears.

"I do love you, I do! You won't leave me again, Giles—you won't break my heart all over again?"

"I broke my own too, Julie."

He took her face between his hands, and kissed her passionately.

"Nothing shall ever part us any more," he whispered against her lips.

But she was not satisfied.

"Giles, supposing she won't divorce you?"

"I am not afraid of that."

"But supposing she won't?" Julie insisted feverishly.

"Need we suppose any such thing?"

"I want to suppose everything. I want to know what the worst is that we may have to face."

Chittenham looked away from her, and there was a hard line about his mouth.

"If such a thing happened—it would be for you to say," he answered at last.

"What do you mean?"

He looked at her sadly.

"That then there would be only one way in which we could belong to each other, Julie."

She did not pretend to misunderstand him, but the hot blood rose to her soft hair and her eyes fell.

"Would you care enough for that—if there was no other way, Julie?"

For a moment she was silent, then with a swift gesture she turned to him, hiding her face against his breast.

It was two o'clock before Giles thought of leaving the flat.

"Such a scandal!" he teased Julie. "Neither of us would have a shred of reputation left if our best and dearest friends knew how abominably we have been behaving."

Julie made a little grimace.

"I haven't any best and dearest friends except Bim," she answered, and then abruptly: "Giles, what do you think of Sadie?"

"Sadie?" He was glad that as her cheek was resting against his shoulder, she could not see his face. It seemed an ill omen that at this moment she should speak of his wife. He avoided a deliberate answer.

"What a question! I hardly know what to say," he said lightly.

"I only asked because she has spoken about you several times. I think she rather likes you."

"Nonsense!"

His voice sounded almost angry and Julie looked up at him in surprise.

"Don't you want her to like you? She and I are great friends. I prefer her to anyone I have met since—" she stopped with a shrug of her shoulders.

"Since you and I met on the top of the world," Giles added to her. "Tell me, Julie, what made you, well—" he smiled—"like me—quite at the beginning, I mean?"

She gave a little shamed laugh.

"I don't know. How can I know? It didn't happen a bit, as I always thought falling in love would happen."

"Tell me what you mean."

"I can't explain. You made me feel angry at first. I thought you were just laughing at me and it hurt. And then—you put your hand on mine—perhaps you don't remember?"

"Of course, I remember. And then?"

"Then I knew, and I was afraid."

"Afraid of me?"

"No, but of the future. I think I felt that it would bring trouble to me—loving you, I mean." She frowned at the memory, then smiled. "But it's all over now, isn't it—all the worst part, I mean?"

SANITARY COTTON

When there are kiddies in the family (and it isn't always the kiddies) it is hard to keep the box of absorbent cotton closed and sterile. The cotton is gotten in haste and is left out of its wrappings and forgotten. A Mason jar is nice to hold absorbent cotton and stands more chance of being closed after using.

THE MIRROR OF THE MODE

By Mary Marshall.

Light-weight woolen challis makes a practical jumper when chosen in an attractive design of navy blue on tan and worn with a pleated skirt of navy-blue silk.

There are women who boast that they cannot endure the feeling of anything woolen against their skin. They haven't worn a costume with a woolen bodice for ever so long and possibly they feel that their inability to do so without discomfort indicates a finer skin or more delicately poised nervous system than that possessed by women who have no such objections.

Usually I think their distaste for wool next the skin comes from recollections of coarse serge school frocks they had to wear in overheated school rooms when young—and the scratchiness usually wasn't due to the wool so much as to the coarseness of the material or the cotton mixed with the wool.

I had some such objections to woolen blouses myself until a few seasons ago, when I found a lightweight crepe wool sports jumper frock quite as soft in texture and as easy to wear as georgette or crepe de chine.

So I am convinced that in every woman's wardrobe there is place for an overblouse or two of some one of the fine, light-weight but warm woolen materials. Wool voile, wool crepe, fine flannel, challis might be suggested.

Recently I have seen figured challis of colorful designs that might be admirably combined with skirts of solid color, and there is something a little smarter about the figured blouse and plain pleated skirt than the frock entirely made of figured material. In planning such an ensemble you might have the skirt match the coat with which it is to be worn with the figured challis picking up the same color in part of the design. And since one skirt usually serves longer than one blouse and since the climate here is so often variable I suggest a single pleated skirt with two complementary blouses—one of silk and one of challis.

LIBRARY NOTES

SOCIOLOGY.

LaMarck long ago said that it is easier to discover a truth than to have it accepted by society. He was in reality the first to propound the doctrine of evolution and, as happens to most originators of a doctrine, his theories fell on deaf ears. He died in want. The world has gone ahead a good deal since his death some hundred years ago, and the question that he raised has developed from a little rippling stream to a raging torrent. To-day the world is divided on the question of evolution and brain is pitted against brain in the effort to prove or disprove its truth. In the same way many a question belonging to that vast field called Sociology is proving in these days to be a bone of contention rather than a help in the alleviation of the human lot. It is not necessary to particularize these; they are too well-known to need comment. We possess in our Library close on a thousand books dealing with every phase of sociology. This term, coined by Comte in 1838 to express the science of the associated life of humanity, embraces, of course, the widest field that is possible in human thought. The selection that is offered to our readers is fairly representative of its many ramifications. Political Science, Political Economy, Education, Commerce, Popular Customs, and the thousand and one topics that are embodied in these titles, all find a place on our shelves under the heading of Sociology. Socialism is a branch of the stem, as are Anarchism, Nihilism, Bolshevism, and the various cults that spring up at odd times in the world's history. So wide is its latitude that if you want to read about elves, monsters, fairies, or ogres, you will find something about them under this heading. It is a far cry from ogres to gypsies or to the status of women but they are all included under the heading of Sociology as are questions of commerce and of church and state.

Generally speaking, Sociology is looked upon as a dry subject, but it should not be so considered. Anything that offers to throw light on knotty problems of human life should not be deemed uninteresting. But the fact remains that the sociological section is about the least patronized of the various sections in the adult department of the library. It is very different in the juvenile section, where, of course, fairy tales form a very favored part of the reading.

The Public Library offers very many advantages to its patrons in providing reading matter dealing with topics of everyday concern. We get regularly the Ontario Gazette, and the Canada Gazette, also the Labor Gazette, and a wide range of Provincial and Federal publications, dealing with all manner of subjects from the Patent Office Record down to the latest method of dealing with pigs or pumpkins.

It is a pity that more interest is not taken in this science. As has been very truly observed, it is really the master science because "the social process is primarily evolving in the individual, not the qualities which contribute to his own efficiency in conflict with his fellows, but those qualities which contribute to society's efficiency in the conflict through which it is gradually rising towards a more organic type."

THE WHATNOT

A Place for Little Bits of Everything of Local Interest

By MARION

"OH, SHE'S all right." Did you ever hear someone give this as an expression of his opinion of someone else in discussion? One might say, "Oh, she's a darling," or "She's a peach," but when you hear a man say, "Oh, she's all right," you may depend on him to stick to it, because he will put certain emphasis on it, and usually a man's, "Oh, she's all right," is more dependable than a woman's, "Oh, she's a peach," or "a dear."

Personally, I would rather have anyone say, "Oh, she's all right," about me, than to have them say for the time being that I was a peach or a darling. Usually, I'm not saying always, though, men stick to the opinion they form of a person, especially girls, while a woman gushes over a person who has entertained at bridge and who made a charming hostess—and in a few days she has completely forgotten her disposition.

Then again, have you ever sat in a car at the curb with a couple of men and heard them discuss every woman and girl that passed? I have, and it is certainly interesting! I felt like getting out myself and walking past to get their personal opinion of me—or my clothes, as I suppose that was what they really were discussing instead of the real person.

First their skirts would be too long, then one would come along with a shorter skirt—usually a younger person, and it would usually meet with their approval. If something unusual in the way of an outfit appeared, they would be sure to tell the woman occupants of the car just what they would like in the same outfit. It surely is quite amusing! And often one gets a more personal view from the men folk that way than if you asked them some other time.

But then, it is all the way they feel, isn't it? If they don't feel like telling you what you ask, they think they have a perfect right to withhold their idea—did you ever notice it? There are some men in Peterborough who would never notice what their wives were wearing—even if they had a new frock or hat every week. Then there are others—which would you rather live with—the one who doesn't really care what you have on as long as you are respectable looking, or the one who looks you over when you are ready to go out, informing you that he likes your new outfit or he doesn't like it

What do you think about it? What impression has your contact with men given you about them expressing their opinions? There are some we wish would express theirs a little more, and then there are others we wish would keep quiet.

Quite often when coming to the office in the morning, I walk with some of my girl friends, and hear their tale of woe because they have, in their last minute rush of dressing, donned a pair of hose with a hole in the heel. There seems to be quite a number of girls in Peterborough who have the same trouble, I wonder if they have ever tried rubbing the feet of new hosiery with paraffin? This should be rubbed on until a white appearance is seen.

This hosiery business is most trying. You don a perfectly good pair of hose, possibly for the first time, and step in next door, and lo, and behold that —— pup which they are so excited over, seems to like the taste of your new hose.

Slowly but surely you see a little white streak wending its way down the front of your hose.

But, of course, we can't express our personal opinion of that pup right there, we must wait until we are safely outside and beyond hearing.

But wouldn't we like to? Oh, dear, yes, many times we feel that way—but it does no good. We must say what charming manners that little darling has, and why, of course, it didn't matter about the stocking, it was only one of a cheap pair anyway.

This may be a sort of outburst, but I can't help it, for not long ago, I saw the same little run wending its way down MY stocking from the teeth of a friend's dog.

I happened to call on a friend of mine the other day just as she was in the middle of housecleaning—and you know how you feel when you run into the midst of that job! She told me she was busy moving her stair carpet. I couldn't imagine what she meant by that, she might be turning it upside down but I couldn't see what difference that would make, for it would only land in the same place again for the feet to tread on. So I asked her, and in replying she told me that she always bought her stair carpet about three-quarters of a yard longer than was needed, and then she could move it up and down, thereby prolonging its life quite a little bit.

And then, while speaking of rugs and carpets, she went on to tell me that if your rugs curl at the edges or if they have become ruffled by cleaning, a mixture containing one pound of glue and a gallon of water can be painted on the back of the rug. This solution is dissolved over hot water and put on with a large brush. The rug should, of course, be left on its face until thoroughly dry.

I have heard, too, and discussed with a number of women, this heart rendering thing of having your pies overflow in the oven. Some apparently can not find any method to correct this mistake—and it surely is a mistake, isn't it, when you come to take the pie off the plate and find it won't budge, and even then, the bottom is sure to be only half cooked.

Try inserting a piece of uncooked macaroni in the top crust. This is an improvement on the paper funnel sometimes used, and would, of course, be withdrawn after the pie has been baked.

In addition to the Christmas help telling how to make Christmas gifts at home, I am this week offering printed instructions, with sketches, for a baby bunting bag. Don't miss these free helps.

THE WORK TABLE

One mother has taken a discarded card table and covered it with plain black oilcloth. She keeps this in the play room and what fun the children have when they want to play games, paint, cut out paper dolls, etc. The oilcloth will wipe off easily and if scratched, it is not serious, as it may be replaced very cheaply.

SUES FOR ESTATE.

Mrs. Hedessa Leland, formerly Baroness von Dawn, of the old regime in Russia, who is the plaintiff in a sensational action in Detroit to recover part of the estate of her second husband, F. B. Leland, one-time candidate for the Michigan governorship. Mrs. Leland, whose first husband was Morley S. Wickett, former Toronto alderman, was denounced in court by opposing counsel as "a fortune hunter, adept at accumulating money through matrimony," which allegation the plaintiff emphatically denied.

OLD CATHEDRAL.

Fire broke out in the Cathedral of Tournai, one of the finest Romanesque churches in Belgium, on Thursday night. The old cathedral, which was built in the twelfth century, contains a number of pictures by Rubens and other masters and a famous vestment, presented it by Thomas A. Becket, of England.

MARION'S MAIL

Address correspondence to Marion, at The Examiner Office.

"Dear Marion:

I received your helps some time ago but neglected to write. Thanks ever so much for the trouble.

I saw in Saturday's edition someone wanting information on getting rid of moths. If they get into rugs, put a wet cloth over the rug and iron. The steam will kill them.

I was interested in 'Dreamer's' letter. I am also a dreamer and can day dream for hours dreaming about my future.

I remain,

Sincerely yours,

Bonarlaw. SALLY."

Welcome to our circle, "Sally," and thanks for the help, for that will mean trouble for the moths. I hope that your future is as bright as your dreams picture it.

"Dear Marion:

I enjoy the Women's Page very much and as I received some of your helps I thought I should write and thank you.

To Mrs. H.: I cleaned my babies' white kid shoes with gasoline, bon ami and also a commercial liquid known as Pearl White which I got at a drug store.

Here is my recipe for pie crust, it isn't extra good but it is generally light and flaky. I use about 3 saucerfuls of flour, 1 or 2 heaping tablespoons of lard, pinch of salt and about one or one and a half teaspoons of baking powder.

Hoping she will have good luck, I remain,

Warkworth. Mrs. G. T."

Thanks, Mrs. T., for the answer to Mrs. H.'s SOS, and for the recipe which will be appreciated by many readers. Write soon again.

LYRICS OF LIFE

IF YOU WOULD GO AWAY

Perhaps if you would go away
Upon a little visit, say
A month or so, and let them run
The house, and do what you have done,
And see to meals, and make the beds,
And mend the clothes they tear to shreds,
My, how the family would miss you,
And when you came, would run to kiss you!

Perhaps if you away would go,
Not very long, a month or so,
Perhaps they'd heed, perhaps they'd mind,
And wouldn't do the things unkind,
Perhaps they'd hang things on the rack,
And never say one mean word back,
Would just fall over one another
To say you were the nicest mother!

Perhaps if you would go away,
And then would just come back some day,
You'd find the children grown so good
You'd fairly sing, I know you would.
If you should find, when you returned,
A little wisdom they had learned,
My, how your arms would clasp them to you!
You don't doubt that a minute, do you?

In fact, I think if you should go
Away, not long, a month or so,
Perhaps they wouldn't seem to you,
A lot of things that children do,
Not near as bad. When home you came
The children might be just the same,
But how you'd hug them and you'd kiss them!—
For, goodness gracious, how you'd miss them!

THE STAR CHASER.

I've heard of heroes and ace in my span,
But the one of which now I think
Is the queerest of all—a light-headed gink,
I call the electrical man.

This fellow had found an electrical ray
Said he, "I will visit a star,
The brightest of all and believe what I say
I'll meet you in heaven, by gar."

"I wish him luck in a casual way,
And tell him I hope that he will
He lingered a little and ventured to say
It hadn't been done yet and still—

Well, he started by gar, to reach his bright star
And I saw in the heavens that night,
A sizzling plane that was speeding afar
Away to the comet light.

It paused for a moment as far as I see
And bid a farewell to the earth
It laughed a last laugh at gravity
And speeded again in its mirth.

And up they leisure in low air pressure
Full blown in the elements thin
And to his despair he heard the plane swore
His head was swelling again.

They laughed did the two, as they ran down a star,
And excited a comet in chase,
But the best of it was when they tickled old Mars
And ventured a wind in his face.

Some stars that I know are nine million miles
Down their diameter so,
But the old suicide in a heavenward glide,
Reduced them a million I know.

And so they meander the starry verandah,
And skid on an air space and sigh,
It's awfully wet on the milky way
But maybe we'll land bye and bye.

But the finicky ray ended every way,
To land on an ethereal plain,
And starr lion cursed the two a-flyin'
And gritted his sharp teeth in vain.

Now the gods in the sky were all wondering why,
This crazy machine was up there,
A-disturbing the moon and perturbing the tune,
Of the choir of the nymphs so fair.

I must finish this thing and I'll do so by jing,
In a fit of rage quoth Mars,
And he pulled out his chariot hung up the moon
And put a stop to the stars.

His eyes turned concave, but an order he gave,
And he dashed in the blue with his teams,
But the renegade plane in madness insane
Evaded in vain it seems.

"Do you know man," Mars said, "you're in region so dead,
The moon doesn't spoon here at night,
And there's no stop signs on the roads ahead,
'Cause you're stop dead all right."

O heaven by praised, I've searched night and day,
I started the blame thing all right,
By by gar, I don't know where we are,
And I can't see the brakes for light.

I've been through regions of green clad legions
And devils that swore in their sleep,
And my wings have spread o'er the snowy bed
Where the dove of peace still sleeps.

I've startled the sages of Venus for ages
I've passed for a shooting star,
But I cannot stop for your speed cops
For I'm off for realms afar.

And so off he flew where no one knew
And where no one like me can think,
That's why all your heroes I class as zeroes,
Compared with the 'lectrical gink.

SINGLE DIAL SET ADDS ONE TUBE

Stromberg - Carlson Company Puts New Addition on Single Tuning Control.

Generally speaking, the use of single dial tuning has necessitated the addition of one tube that performs little or no function other than to couple the antenna with the tuning circuits of the radio receiver. Thus an ordinary 5 tube receiver becomes a 6-tube receive when single dial tuning is employed; a 6-tube set becomes a 7-tube, and so on. The greater the number of tubes, of course, the more current must be supplied by the power plant and, naturally the larger the power plant must be.

The Stromberg-Carlson Company has made an interesting development in designing the coupling stage of its single tuning control receivers so that it amplifies as well as couples the antenna to the tuning stages. The company engineers report the first stage produces approximately half the amplification of the ordinary radio circuit. This stage is designed with its resonant point between 550 and 600 meters. The resonant point is placed here for a very definite reason. It is well known that there is a general falling off of amplification of the higher wave lengths. The best that engineers have been able to do is to strike a balance so that the lower and higher wave lengths will be received with somewhere near uniform volume. By having its resonant point above the high end of the wave band the amplication of this coupling stage increases as the receiver is tuned to the higher wave stations. In this way greater amplification is secured where it is most needed and an unusually horizontal amplification curve is obtained through the entire wave band.

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

FRACTURES AND BROKEN BONES

Fractures of broken bones should always be treated by a doctor or surgeon but, as usually neither is at hand at the time of the accident, it is important that the layman knows how to recognize a broken bone and how to set it that the injured person may be transported safely

A broken bone may be recognized by the presence of severe pain and deformity of the part from its normal shape, being sometimes bent where no bend should be. The muscles about a broken bone usually contract, making it hard or impossible for the injured person to move the part. In addition there may be a grating, crepitous sound as the result of the two ends of the broken bone rubbing together, or a broken piece of bone may actually appear through the skin.

Unless the doctor has the necessary x-ray equipment, he has to trust to his sense of touch for restoring the bones to the proper position, but because the shape of some of the bones is not always easily distinguished and because some patients have so much flesh the latter is not always an accurate method. Whenever it is possible doctors employ the x-ray. With this method the exact position and shape of the break can be easily ascertained. It is even possible to observe cracks or splits in the bone that could not possibly be determined with the fingers. With the use of the x-ray, too, the doctor can see if he has succeeded in restoring the bone to its proper place.

There are five general types of fractures; the incomplete or "greenstick" fracture, where some of the bone fibres have been broken but most of them merely bent; the complete fracture, where the bone is broken in two; the compound fracture where the bone is not only broken but a part sticks out through the skin; the impacted fracture where the two ends of the bone are driven into each other; and the comminuted fracture where the bone is shattered into small pieces.

The first handling of the injured person is most important because if one is not careful a simple fracture may be come a very serious compound fracture which is much more dangerous

The broken ends of bones are sharp and the muscles, being contracted, tend to pull them past each other so that arteries, veins, or nerves may be cut by any movement.

A splint should be applied as soon as possible to the sides of the fracture lengthwise of the injured bone. This will prevent a movement of the break during the transportation of the injured person to a place where he can be cared for.

Splints may consist of any stiff material such as strips of wood, small branches or bundles of twigs, umbrellas, rolled up cardboard, etc. The splint should extend for some distance above and below the broken bone to make a good support. The type of splint varies according to the position of the fracture and one has to exercise one's ingenuity in most cases. For instance, in the rib fractures the best splint consists of long strips of adhesive applied to the skin running parallel to the ribs, and in a fracture of the foot, the best splint is to place the foot on a pillow and tie the pillow around the foot with rope or heavy cord

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Sweating Feet.

Question: Vexed Reader asks: "What causes sweating of the feet at the least exertion and dryness of the mouth immediately after lunch and dinner?"

Answer: Excessive sweating of the feet may be caused from tight fitting shoes or from not washing the feet often enough. Those who are toxic are liable to sweat excessively at times. The shoes should be changed frequently and allowed to dry out thoroughly before being used again. Dryness of the mouth must come from some inflammatory condition present in your alimentary canal.

Whiskey and Diabetes.

Question: Mrs. W. E. B. writes: "We have a friend who is suffering from diabetes. He has been told to drink whiskey as it destroys the sugar. I have no faith in whiskey so would like your opinion on this subject."

Answer: I consider the whiskey treatment for diabetes to be fundamentally unsound in principle although it is used by a great many diabetic specialists. Liquor undoubtedly stimulates the flow of digestive juice with some people and this may have an effect upon the secretion of pancreatic fluid which the body uses in the digestion of starchy foods, but as I have demonstrated conclusively that starches and sugars are unnecessary for the human body, it is the height of folly for any diabetic to use any drug or remedy to promote the digestion of the carbohydrates when the best and the simplest plan is to live mostly on proteins, non-starchy vegetables and fruits. Of course, all vegetables contain some starch, and all fruits contain sugar, but the diabetic can usually convert this small amount of starch and sugar with the need of drugs or stimulants.

Why We Do What We Do.

AS GRAY MATTER

By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph.D.

(Author, The Springs of Human Action)

Have you ever seen human brains? Of course you have never seen your own brain and must accept its existence on faith. But possibly through some accident to a fellow worker you may have seen what the inside of the head looks like.

Under much less harrowing conditions you may have seen the whole of the human brain displayed in a glass jar at a medical school or in a museum or in the psychological laboratory.

The brain proper which fills the cavity of the skull is made up of two hemispheres with a large cleft in the middle. These two brains are united by large nerves crossing at the base of the brain or the under side where there is a hole in the skull for this purpose. The continuation of this forms the middle brain and the spinal cord.

In most persons, the left hemisphere projects half an inch farther backward than does the right. This is associated with the fact that most persons are right handed, and that the speech is in the left hemisphere. On this account, some persons believe that we think only with our left hemisphere, but for this belief there is no good evidence.

The technical name for the large brain, including the two hemispheres is cerebrum. The cerebrum weighs on the average of about three pounds. It is also called the cortex, which means the bark or outside. This usually refers to the gray matter, the part that would be visible if the scalp and skull were removed

You have often heard the brain referred to as gray matter. It is called that because of its grayish appearance. And the reason for this is that the brain cells are on the outside. The long slender threads of the cells are in the inside and are white in appearance, while the cell bodies with the dendrites are gray in appearance.

In the spinal cord this process is reversed. The white matter is on the outside and the gray matter is on the inside.

We speak of the brain as gray matter for the same reason that we call the President's mansion in Washington the White House.

Why do you do what you do? Address Dr. Thomson. Write him care of this paper, and send stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 20, 1928

(Copyright, 1928 McClure Syndicate.)

Certain unfavorable signs are seen in to-day's horoscope by astrologers who warn Earth inhabitants to be cautious.

The early morning hours may bring anxieties to men and women who carry heavy financial responsibilities. They should guard against unusual world conditions.

This is read as an unpropitious day for all who seek rewards for political activities. Potential postmasters should withhold applications.

Under this direction of the stars the human mind inclines toward criticism. Pessimists multiply while this configuration prevails.

Neptune is in threatening mood, according to the seers, who forecast renewed agitation regarding oil and its products.

The stars are not promising to those who would make long sea voyages, inasmuch as frightful storms are presaged and more than one shipwreck indicated.

Under this sway there may be much double-dealing and evasiveness. The rule is supposed to encourage deceit and even indifference to the truth.

The configuration is read as forecasting much pretense and false appearance of wealth or success.

New phases of careers of dubious character are prognosticated and many persons will seek to live by their wits. The society bandit will flourish.

In the evening friendly stars gain dominance and there is a good sign for conferences or discussions of future plans.

Merchants and manufacturers should prosper and shops of every sort will benefit.

Artistry which will put its stamp upon clothing and interior decoration as never before will extend to places of business, so that sumptuousness will mark prosperity.

London astrologers foretell that militarism will rule in Europe, where wars may be precipitated.

Fires and robberies are likely to increase in number, especially in Florida and California.

The seers declare that this is to be a time of large plans and great enterprises that have an extraordinary world compass.

Persons whose birthdate it is may have much that is unusual in their new year which is likely to bring big experiences.

Children born on this day probably will be intense in nature and capable of fine intellectual attainments. Girls are likely to be great favorites and to have many suitors. They should be guarded against unwise marriage.

A million tons of coal are used every year by the Gas Light and Coke Company, which has provided London with gas for over a century.

UNCLE WIGGILY

By HOWARD R. GARIS

To-day's Bedtime Story

UNCLE WIGGILY'S FUNNY SKATES

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

Once upon a time, the day before yesterday, or maybe it was the week after next, anyhow, once upon a time Uncle Wiggily was hurrying out of his hollow stump bungalow to go after snowballs with Mr. Twistytail, the pig gentleman, when Nurse Jane Fuzzy Wuzzy called to him:

"Have you a minute, Uncle Wiggily?"

"No," answered the bunny uncle with a smile that made his pink nose twinkle. "I haven't a minute, but there are a lot of minutes in my watch and I can give you one of those." He began to take out his watch.

"Oh, no, I don't mean that," squeaked the muskrat lady housekeeper "I mean have you a minute to spare and can you wait until I give you two cakes to take to Mrs. Longtail the mouse lady?"

"Of course I'll wait and take some cakes to Mrs. Longtail," said Uncle Wiggily. So he stood on the steps waiting and letting the cold wind blow on his warm fur coat and Nurse Jane took two molasses cakes which she had just baked and wrapped them in a clean towel. She gave them to the bunny uncle saying:

"Give them to Mrs. Longtail and on your way back, after you have an adventure, stop and get the empty tins. Mrs. Longtail will take the cakes out of the tins and give the tins back to you to bring to me."

"It shall be done as you wish, Janie," said Uncle Wiggily, and with the two molasses cakes, in tins, under his paws, away he hopped over the fields and through the woods. Pretty soon he reached the cute little house where Mrs. Longtail lived with her children, Jollie, Jillie and Squeakie Eekie, the cousin mouse.

"Here are some cakes for you," said Mr. Longears.

"Oh, thank you!" squeaked the mouse lady with the long tail. "It is very kind of Nurse Jane to send them. And I'll leave the empty tins out on the gate post so if you are going past in a hurry you can get them and take them back."

"All right," answered Uncle Wiggily. "Only I don't expect to be in a hurry. I'll have plenty of time to pick up tins."

But it only goes to show that you never know what is going to happen in this world. Leaving the cakes with the mouse lady, Uncle Wiggily hopped on over the fields, looking for an adventure.

It was just about this time that the Skillery Scallery Alligator waddled out of the warm den of the Fox where he was staying for the winter and the Alligator said:

"I think I shall catch Uncle Wiggily today. I have a new plan. I will chase him on skates for I can go much faster on skates over the ice and snow than I can walking on my claws."

The 'Gator skated very fast.

So the Alligator put some skates on his hind paws and started out to find Uncle Wiggily. He looked here and he looked there, did the Alligator, and at last he saw Uncle Wiggily far ahead of him in a field that was covered with ice and snow.

"Ha! Ha!" laughed the 'Gator. "It's a good thing I have on my skates for now I can go fast and soon catch that rabbit."

The 'Gator skated very fast, his skates going clickity click, and soon he was close behind the rabbit. Uncle Wiggily, who had not found any adventure, and who was on his way home, heard the clickity click noise and, turning, saw the 'Gator skating after him.

"Oh, now I must hop fast! I must hop very fast!", thought the rabbit. So he hopped as fast as he could, but because the Alligator wore skates he was soon catching up to the rabbit.

"He's going to get me, I'm afraid," said Uncle Wiggily to himself. "I'll hop a little faster." But as fast as he went the 'Gator skated faster until, pretty soon, Uncle Wiggily was almost caught. Then the bunny hopped past the gate post where Mrs. Longtail had put out the empty cake tins for him to take on his way home. "If I had a pair of skates I might go faster than the 'Gator and so get away," thought Mr. Longears. Then he saw the empty cake tins.

"The very things!" he cried. "I'll use the cake tins for skates. They may look rather funny, but what of that if they save my life?" No sooner said than done. With chewing gum Uncle Wiggily stuck his two hind paws, one on each cake tin, and away he went, skating over the ice and snow. And he was just in time. Away from the 'Gator the bunny skated and he went so fast with the cake tins, sliding on the slippery ice that he soon was at his bungalow and inside he slid and locked the door after him.

"Fooled again!" bellowed the 'Gator as he fell down and bumped his nose. "But who would ever think that a rabbit would make a pair of skates out of two cake tins! Bah!"

SIMPLE TRICKS IN MAGIC

by JACK MULHALL

—Le Torniquet. Illustrating method of holding coin which is allowed to drop into left palm under pretence of taking it in right hand.

Hold a half dollar between first finger and thumb of cupped left hand. With thumb and finger of right hand apparently take the coin from left, the right thumb going under the coin.

When you apparently took coin in the right hand, which immediately is closed as if containing the coin, you really let it drop into palm of left hand. Keep your eyes fixed on right fist and raising left hand and while apparently rubbing coin into left elbow, drop the piece of money into your collar from left hand. Then exhibit your right hand empty and with that hand take the coin from your collar.

This little pass, "le torniquet" or French Drop, is useful for the disappearance of any small object, such as a cork, ball or pellet of paper, as well as a coin.

LONDON, Nov. 19.—The British Isles have ceased worrying about what to do with old razor blades and graphophone needles. They send them to the Church Lads' Brigade. Blades still in good condition are resharpened and sold.

SHORT CUT TO PROFIT

PARIS, Nov. 19.—A shortcut to more profits has been worked out by the Society for the Saving of Time. These experts have figured out that millions of dollars could be saved annually, in correspondence cost, by reducing surnames to five letters and given names to two.

ONIONS FOIL WASP

LONDON, Nov. 19.—A woman of Cranbourne, says she successfully used onions to offset the effects of swallowing a wasp. The insect "got that way" while she was taking a drink. The woman immediately ate six onions, and claims the vegetable checked the inflammation caused by the wasp poison.

High-speed airplanes, travelling 2000 miles without a stop at 100 miles an hour, will shorten the air-mail time between England and India by 11 days, if the Air Ministry approves plans now under consideration.

He sees

NEW CITIES

THIS MAN is a business prophet. He does not really look into a crystal ball but he reads the future nevertheless and he sees new cities yet unbuilt. He is important in the telephone business.

He judges the future from the facts of the present and it is his job to judge with accuracy. He must judge with accuracy because, in a telephone system, plans must be made for years ahead and millions of dollars are involved.

With a railway there must be tracks and stations before trains can run. With a telephone system there must be conduits and central exchanges before telephones can go in.

To wait until people are clamoring for telephones is too late.

THE BUSINESS PROPHET does not wait. He comes to the management with his charts and graphs and figures and says:

"In 1930 the demand in Ontario will be 80,000 new telephones. They will be wanted here and here and here."

Or he says: "Within the next five years the Province of Quebec will need at least forty per cent more exchange capacity".

And the management does not wait either. They know it is up to them to prepare now. If they don't they will be falling down on their job; they will not be keeping pace with the country.

BECAUSE THE BUSINESS PROPHET spoke in time and the management acted promptly there are 139,000 telephones being installed in Ontario and Quebec this year. Without them there would be inconvenience and confusion now in thousands of new homes and offices.

Next year the business outlook calls for spending over twenty-seven million dollars to extend and renew the system and plans have been made to do so.

For the next five years the telephone expansion definitely known to be needed in the two provinces means over one hundred million dollars.

FINDING THE MONEY is a problem. It is as great a problem as the complications of engineering and organization.

Every year as the country grows there must be new money ready so that the telephone system may keep pace.

Every year thus far the money has been ready because the policy of the telephone system has been fortunate in attracting the support of conservative and reliable investors who have not been subject to the influence of market fluctuations.

THAT IS HOW the business prophet and his graphs have been made effective. And that is why the telephone management has always met Canadian progress with confidence and enthusiasm.

P.C.I. Seniors Win Rugby Honors

DEFEAT ALBERT COLLEGE CREW 4 TO 1 TO WIN EASTERN TITLE

Show Sheer Grit and Spirit in Downing a Much Heavier Team.

HOLDERS OF NEAL CUP.

Neil Gemmell, Pivot Man On Local Team, Injured in Play.

Faced with bad breaks in the first five minutes of the game that would have disheartened most teams, Coach Browne's P.C.I. Seniors battled their way to a 4 to 1 victory over the sturdy Albert College twelve and won the Eastern Ontario championship and the Neal Cup at Lakeshore Park, Cobourg, Saturday afternoon.

It was a team bigger than the Oshawa Collegiate squad that Albert College trotted out on the field, and again P.C.I. earned the victory by sheer grit and spirit over a team that vastly outweighed them in every position. The gridiron too was wet and soggy, and heavy for running, with deep sand that slowed up the P.C.I. extension plays and made it unwise to attempt any play depending on speed for results.

Player Injured.

The victory cost P.C.I. a great loss in the person of Neil Gemmell, captain and quarter back of the team. Gemmell, the pivot man of the P.C.I. attack, has been one of the star players all season. His open field running, passing, tackling, kicking and fertile rugby mind has been one of the main advantages of the team. It was early in the game that Gemmel was knocked out by illegal tactics and had his collar bone broken. From the kick-off, P.C.I. monopolized the play, and with a series of fast plays had worked the ball to the Albert College 30-yard line when Gemmel got away for a long gain round the short end. He was brought down right on the side line by a high tackle and then heavily jumped upon by several over-zealous Albert College players, and as a result of the illegal usage he had his collar bone broken and will be out of the game for the rest of the season.

Starred in Tackling.

It was in the tackling that P.C.I. had it all over the Easterners. The Albert College players apparently had never been taught the art of tackling, while the P.C.I. flying squadron of Glover, Westbrook, Hewitt and Magee were boring in on the ball carriers and bringing him down every time. Glover especially did deadly tackling, grassing every ball carrier that came around his end. Early in the game the Albert College team learned that they could make no gains around the ends and they had to reduce their plays to those aimed at the line. There, too, they had little success, for Preston, Wiman, Hall, Johnson, and Armstrong on the front line and Magee and Dunkerly on secondary defence were getting down low and getting their man as he came through. The halves, Cuthbertson and Green, caught the greasy ball that the Albert College kicker punted high in faultless fashion, and they ran back the kicks for many yards. In fact, the P.C.I. team put up such a tight defence that Albert College took little ground on their own defensive, but gained on fumbles and breaks in the game.

The punting of Dearborn, who took up the kicking assignment after Gemmel was injured, was perfect. He got good distance into his kicks, sending them high, and he took his time, yet not one of his kicks were blocked. He kept on even terms with Earle and Thompson, who alternated at booting for Albert College, and with the wet, heavy ball, all three of them did wonders. Dunkerly, Cuthbertson, and Green made great gains through the open field. Hewitt, Magee, Wiman, Johnson and Armstrong made repeated short gains on line plunging.

Purchase at quarter was the most effective man for Albert College. He was fast and broke through and grabbed the ball on a P.C.I. extend and he grabbed two P.C.I. on side kicks for gains. Yuill and Maybee, their two big middles, carried most of the burden of the attack, and they plunged hard and often during the first part of the game. It has already been remarked that Earle and Thompson kicked high and well with the heavy ball.

Scored First Point

It was early in the first period and right after the big attack that ended with Gemmell's injury that, Cuthbertson who replaced him at quarter and made a good job of it, too, kicked for a rouge and putting P.C.I. 1.

Albert College got two breaks in a row when Purchase grabbed Cuthbertson's attempted onside kick and soon after when the same player broke through and grabbed the ball on a P.C.I. extend tearing down the field for a big gain. Cuthbertson's kick went out at the side of the P.C.I. 20-yard line, and Earle kicked for a rouge for Albert College's only point.

Albert College got another break when P.C.I.'s kick was blocked. Jenkins grabbed it and was clear away but Johnson overhauled him and brought him down five yards out from the P.C.I. line. Albert College tried to buck it over, but the P.C.I. line held like tempered steel and threw the attackers back for losses and drained the ball on Albert College's failure to make yards.

From their own 10-yard line, P.C.I. slowly carried the play down into the Belleville territory, and were fifteen yards out when Cuthbertson tried another onside, and Albert College gained the ball. On the next ball P.C.I. forced Albert College to a safety touch and gained two points when their tacklers swarmed in on the Belleville quarter after a bad snap.

In the third quarter P.C.I. kept Belleville bottled up in their own end. Dunkerly got away for a big gain down the side and then Cuthbertson called for an extend, bringing the ball over to within 10 yards of the goal posts. He took position and signalled for a drop kick. The snap was a little high and he muffed the greasy ball. The Belleville line was closing in fast, but Cuthbertson recovered quickly and just had time to boot a short punt over the Belleville line for a rouge.

For the rest of the game P.C.I. were content to play a conservative game, and did not attempt to force the play. The line-ups were:

Albert College—Snap, Sutherland; insides, Harton and Clement; middles, Yuill and Mabee; outside, Jenkins and Reid; halves, Earle, Thompson and Anglin; flying wing, Edwards; quarter, Purchase; subs, Taylor, Pender, McNaughton, Carter and Hazleton.

Peterborough Collegiate. — Snap, Preston; insides, Wiman and Hall; middles, Johnson and Armstrong; outsides, Westbrook and Glover; halves, Cuthbertson and Hewitt; flying wings, Magee and Dunkerly; quarter, Gemmell; subs., Lord, Reynolds, Clayton, eDarborn, Green and Wagar.

Referee—Jack Armstrong of Toronto.

Umpire—M. Kirkland of Oshawa.

Head linesman—Lionel Browne.

Time-keeper—E. Legon.

First Quarter.

Albert College kicked off to P.C.I. 35-yard line. Armstrong crashed through for eight yards and Cuthbertson went for five more. Gemmell kicked to Albert's 20-yard line. Albert lost ten yards on a forward pass and their kick went out at their 30-yard line. Magee hit the line for five yards and Gemmell ran around the short end for ten yards. Gemmell was knocked out by illegal tactics. Cuthbertson went to quarter. Magee went from flying wing to half and Green went to flying wing. A few minutes later Dearborn went on for Hall to do the kicking. Cuthbertson kicked for a rouge. P.C.I. 1.

Albert could not gain and their kick was run back twenty yards to their 30-yard line by Cuthbertson. Purchase grabbed Cuthbertson attempted on side kick. Again Albert had to kick and Cuthberton ran the ball back twenty yards to Albert's 45-yard line. Purchase grabbed the ball on a P.C.I. extend and ran to P.C.I. 40-yard line, Magee bringing him down with a flying tackle. Earle kicked to P.C.I. 5-yard line, and when Cuthbertson 's kick went wide at 25-yard line, Albert were able to kick for a rouge. Albert College 1.

Cuthbertson kicked to centre and Glover made a beautiful tackle in bringing down the runner. Johnson kick was blocked, but Glover fell on it far a ten-yard gain. Jnkins blocked another P.C.I. kick and ran to P.C.I. 5-yard line, where Johnson hauled him down after a great sprint. Three bucks in a row crashed at the P.C.I. line, but they held and forced Albert back for a loss.

Second Quarter.

Green ran round the end for 10 yards. Johnson added five and Green three more. Dearborn began to kick for P.C.I., and he kicked to centre. Neither team was gaining, but Albert were caught cold-footed on a delayed kick and lost ten yards for being off-side. Cuthberton went around the end for a twenty-five-yard gain. P. C.I. lost the third down and the ball on an off-side. Albert made no gains and Green made beautiful catch of Earle's punt on Albert's 50-yard line. Hewitt and Magee made big gains, and Cuthbertson tried an onside kick that failed. Albert was forced to take a safety touch giving P.C.I. two more points. P.C.I. 3.

Third Quarter.

Preston kicked off to Albert's 40-yard line. Albert fumbled and Magee fell on the ball. There was an exchange of kicks, neither team being able to gain on their plays. Edgar fumbled the ball and Johnson got it and Dearborn's kick went out at the Belleville 5-yard line. Albert kicked and P.C.I. lost the ball on an off-side. Play was resumed at midfield after Albert kicked out of danger. Magee and Johnson gained yards for P.C.I. Dunkerly skirted the end for a 25-yard gain to Albert's 10-yard line. Cuthbertson attempting for a drop kick was forced to kick a rouge when he fumbled the ball. P.C.I. 4.

Albert tried an extend, but Glover made a flying tackle and downed the ball carrier for a loss.

Fourth Quarter.

Albert kicked to centre. Hewitt and Johnson gained yards on plunges and Dearborn booted to Albert 20-yard line. Albert gained yards on bucks by Yuill. Albert had P.C.I. playing in their own half of the field when P.C.I. lost ten yards for off-side. There was an exchange of kicks and Dearborn always held his own, but the play was in toward the P.C.I. end. Each team lost and gained the ball on a fumble. Wiman gained 12 yards for P.C.I. and Dearborn kicked to Albert's 30-yard line. And during the last few minutes of the game each team was taking to bucks and a kick, P.C.I. playing for time and Albert finding it impossible to gain in spite of desperate efforts.

First quarter—P.C.I. 1: Cuthbertson's rouge. Albert College 1: Earle's rouge.

Second quarter—P.C.I. 2: Albert College forced to make a safety touch.

Third quarter—P.C.I.: Dearborn's rouge.

Fourth quarter—No score.

Final—P.C.I. 4, Albert College 1.

Senators Play Second Straight Tie

VIEWS ON SPORT

Greetings to the champions of the Central Ontario Interscholastic group, C. S. Browne's Collegiate team of young gridiron warriors.

The injury to Captain Neil Gemmell of the P.C.I. rugby team is the first serious injury that any player has received for twelve years. The players have been bruised and battered but never a broken bone. It is seldom that a player gets seriously hurt in these High School games where the play is hard but always clean. The Albert College team on Saturday proved themselves to be about the toughest bunch of players P.C.I. have ever encountered and they have played a bunch of them during the past years, right from Kingston to Hamilton and all between.

* * * * * *

Coach Browne has the fightingest bunch of players he has ever had and the lightest. These youngsters never will admit defeat until the game is over and as a result they will seldom lose.

* * * * * *

It was evident in Saturday's game that the P.C.I. team has received the very best of coaching. Cuthbertson was all trained to take Gemmell's place at quarter, Green to fill in on the half line and Dearborn's toe has been educated to perform in case of need. Although P.C.I. have only fifteen regulars they are all coached to fill in at any job and they are all about on a par.

* * * * * *

Dr. F. C. Neal's big cup, donated to the winner of the Central Ontario group, will not go out of Peterborough and will grace the cabinet in the new Peterborough Collegiate Institute hall.

* * * * * * *

The Varsity Orphans showed that they were no flash-in-the-pan when they defeated Balmy Beach by beating the smart Sarnia team for the O.R.F.U. championship. Now they will play that great team, the Hamilton Tigers, containing "Pep" Leadley and company.

* * * * * * *

This Regina team, senior champions of the West, are a lot of bearcats if all the news that comes out of the West about them is to be believed. But when they come East they will likely prove to be a team of young giants who play hard, but just don't know the fine points of the game as played here. That is the way it has been on previous occasions.

Twelve new clubs were enfranchised in the O.H.A. at their annual meeting Saturday, proving that hockey is increasing in popularity under O.H.A. rules.

BRIDGENORTH DEFEATS CUBS

Chemong Park Team Down Lakefielders in Loosely Played Battle.

SOFTBALL LEAGUE.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LAKEFIELD, Nov. 19.— There was a good attendance at the softball game on Friday evening in spite of the wet night. The first game between the Bridgenorth team and the Cubs was, by mutual consent, made a seven innings game and was not as closely contested as one could wish. The Cubs did not give the game away, but were out of luck, and the Bridgenorth team were on the job all the time. Forsythe fanned nfourteen men and Elliott fanned five. The only home run made by the Cubs was Elliott's in the fourth innings. Wallace Shearer made one in the fourth also for Bridgenorth, but it missed fire at the home plate when the catcher got there first, so Connor's home run remained as Bridegnorth's only home run for Bridegnorth.

Bridegnorth's line-up was: Pitcher, Forsythe; catcher, Connors; 1st base, H. Dormer; shortstops, G. Dormer, G. Jopling; 2nd base, W. Shearer; 3rd base, Bradshaw; fielders, Gillespie and Griffin. Subs, Wilson, McWilliams.

Cubs—Pitcher, W. Elliott; catcher, R. Payne; 1st base, H. Stabler; shortstops, F. Payne, Hamblin; 2nd base, Morin; 3rd base, Webster; field, Fitzgerald, Nicholls; subs, Blewett, Junkin.

The score by innings was:

Cubs.. .. ..100 403 0— 8

Bridgenorth. .. ..441 271 x—19

The second game started well enough, but by the fifth innings it had rather petered out. The High School team are permanently (at least for this season) short of three stalawarts and while two have been replaced by fairly good material, there is a lack of practice, which time can only remedy. The weakness of the High school team lies in lack of "snap." The ball is held too long and the rule of throwing to first base is forgotten entirely. There is good material and the High school team never "crab" or make the umpire wish he was somewhere else. They never give a game away purposely and they lose like gentlemen and show that the "way of the British" in sport carries on in Lakefield High school. The De Laval team have become favorites in Lakefield by their good natured banter and their clean play, and while their score piled up to a large figure they did give their opposition a chance which they failed to take advantage of in the excitement of the moment. However, both games, while lacking in the tense excitement which is an attribute of close play, were worth seeing and a friendly spirit prevailed. The second game also ran only seven innings by mutual consent.

The De Laval line-up: Pitcher, P. Dyer; catcher, R. Dyer; 1st base, Fowler; shortstops, Woodhouse and Jones; 2nd base, Stark; 3rd base, Evans; field, Killingbeck, Simmons.

High School—Pitcher, T. W. Chaplin; catcher, Kemp; 1st base, Schwark; shortstops, Jewell, Wannamaker; 2nd base, White; 3rd base, Dever; field, Giannini, Elliott; sub, Moore.

The score by innings was:

De Laval .. ..180 1 16 2 2—30

High School .. .. ..303 3 30 0—12

Evans scored a home run in the second and second runs in the seven innings.

The umpires were William Elliott at the plate and Harry Stabler at the bases.

On Tuesday night Cooneys and the Canada Cement team at 7.30, and Harrisons and the High school play at 9 o'clock.

OLYMPICS TAKE THIRD STRAIGHT

Detroit Right Winger Responsible For 2-1 Verdict Over Niagara Falls.

OUTPLAY CATARACTS.

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 19 (Canadian Press)—Captain Bill Brydge and Pete Bellefeuille, his sharp-shooting right winger, broke up another Canadian League game Saturday night, to give the Detroit Olympics their third straight win a 2 to 1 verdict over Niagara Falls.

It was a 1 to 1 draw up to the final chapter, when Brydge started a smart play high wound up with him taking Bellefeuille's return pass to register the odd goal against Paddy Farrell, former Windsor goalie, who looked very good in handling a heavy assignment.

In the first period the Olympics had completely outplayed the Cataracts, but the latter were opportunists enough to make good on one of their few chances to score. By actual count, Farrell had to save twelve shots to Stuart's two. Pete Bellefeuille opened the counting when he picked up Brophy's smart pass out from behind the net and slammed it past the Niagara goalie before he could move. Late in the period Shorty Quesnel laid down a nice pass on which Godin equalized, with a shot from point blank range.

The Cararacts had an edge in the second period, but they found Herdie Stuart unbeatable. Madden, Godin and Prestia led in repeated assaults which beat the defence, but they could not fool the veteran net minder.

Better than seven thousand people turned out for the game, which decided the league leadership. The Cataracts had won twice before and the Olympics had done as well. To-day the Detroiters are out in front and all alone. Line-up:

Referee—Tom Munro (London) and Gerald Goodman (London).

Goals summary:

First Period—1, Detroit, Bellefeuille from Brophy, 8.00.

2, Niagara Falls, Godin from Quesnel, 14.30.

Second Period—No scoring.

Third Period—3, Detroit, Brydge from Bellefeuille, 9.50.

Penalties:—

First period, Brydge, Godin, Cain, McInenly.

Second Period—McCabe, Goodfellow, Brophy, Prestia.

Third Period—Prestia, McInenly.

HAWKS LOSE SECOND GAME

Maroons Win 4-2 Victory Over Chicago National League Entry.

PLAY GOOD HOCKEY.

MONTREAL, Que., November 19 (Canadian Press). — The Chicago National Hockey League team lost its second straight game here on Saturday night, when the Maroons scored a 4 to 2 victory over the visiting Black Hawks. A more experienced Maroon team accounted for the win over the revamped Hawks, who, while always in the battle, never headed the locals.

The visitors, under the leadership of Herbie Gardiner, until this year star defenceman with Canadiens, played good hockey, and gave notice that they intend no longer to be the doormat for other teams of the league, such as they were last season. The Hawks, with a mixture of Rookies and far-from-finished veterans, will improve as the season progresses, when they get used to one another's play.

In Saturday night's game, however, the Maroon forward line, led by big Nels Stewart, was too much for the visitors. The locals appeared to have struck their stride, and the aggressive forwards line proved a continual worry to the Chicago defence, and to Chuck Gardiner in the Hawk net. Stewart skated like a fiend throughout, and was shooting with deadly accuracy. He scored two goals, and assisted in another, besides missing several counters by the narorwest of margins. It was one of the big nights that Stewart periodically comes through with during every season. Jimmy Ward and Hooley Smith got the other two Montreal goals.

Vic Ripley, the visitors' recruit centre, who came up to the big show from Kitchener minor league team this season, led the Hawk attack by scoring both their counters. Ripley looked good throughout and has apparently made himself right at home in the major league. He proved himself a dangerous man when in the vicinity of the opposing net, scoring both goals when he grabbed loose picks at the Maroon defence.

The Maroons were without the services of two of their leading substitutes. Dunc Munro, relief defenceman, and Bill Phillips, sub centre, were both absentees. Munro is suffering from a near-attack of pneumonia plus heart trouble, while Phillips sustained a cut leg in the first game of the season last Thursday. Phillips may get back into action on Tuesday, but Munro's condition is such that it is not known when he will be able to resume his place as utility defenceman. According to one of the specialists in attendance on him, Munro may never play hockey again, in view of the condition of his heart.

Earl Robinson, former local schoolboy hockeyist, and last season with Philaelphia in the Canadian-American League, made his debut in major league hockey against the Hawks, and after a somewhs' wobbly start, showed promise. He is a good stick handler and has a hard shot.

THE COLLEGIATE GAME COCKS

(By F. D. C.)

Once more the determination, will-to-win and sheer courage of the Peterborough Collegiate football squad has carried them through to victory against odds, this time to the championship of the Central Ontario Interscholastic League and first possession of the Dr. Frank Neal trophy. They earned this honor, along with the right to participate in the O.R.F.U. Interscholastic semi-finals, on Saturday afternoon when they defeated Albert College of Belleville, winners of Bay of Quinte section, 4 points to 1 after a gurelling battle on a heavy field, at Cobourg. Albert College were much the heavier team and the ground and weather conditions were thus all in their favour against a lighter outfit that depended largely upon speed and science. And when within the first few minutes of play P.C.I. were deprived of the services of Neil Gemmell, their captain, quarterback, field general and kicker, who had his collar bone fractured by a charge from a heavy Belleville wing man as he lay on the ground, the odds against the western group winners were heavily increased. A less courageous team would have folded up then and there, but in the bright lexicon of the garnet and gray battlers there is no such word as quit. They made the necessary reorganization of their line-up, Cuthbertson going to the quarter position, Dick Green to flying wind and Dearborn being eventually called upon to do the kicking, and then settled down grimly to the task of beating their heavier opponents under condition that made that task a supreme test of grit and endurance.

In the Albert College team they encountered something fortunately uncommon in school football, which has been consistently free from rough and unsportsmanlike play. It was a new experience for P.C.I. to find their ball-carriers charged and piled into after they had been tackled and stopped, an experience that cost them the services of Gemmell for the rest of the season, and resulted in injuries to Cuthbertson and other players and cost Belleville a heavy penalty list. There has been so little foul play in the Interscholastic series that the conduct of some of the Albert College players was a shock both to the P.C.I. team and fans alike.

The P.C.I. spirit, however, refused to be daunted by the bulk of their opponents, foul tactics, heavy going and wet ball, or the loss of their captain, serious as was that loss. Even a couple of breaks, one on a loose ball on a P.C.I. extension and the other on a blocked kick recovered by Albert College, the only two plays of the game on which the Belleville collegians made any material gain and the first of which gave them their only point, failed to take an ounce of fight out of the garnet and gray gamecocks, who battled on to final victory.

The crucial moment of the game came early in the second period. P.C.I. had started the first quarter with a march down the field that was only interrupted when Gemmell was knocked out at Belleville's 35-yard line. P.C.I. were close enough to kick for a point, however, and they held Belleville inside their own territory successfully until a long P.C.I. pass went astray at midfield and the ball was picked up by a College wing, who came near breaking away for a try. He did get far enough into P.C.I. territory to permit College to kick over for the tieing point and the teams were even when the period ended.

The second break cropped up soon after the second quarter started when, with P.C.I. in possession at their 40-yard line, the College wings broke through and not only blocked Cuthbertson's kick but Jenkins grabbed the loose ball and looked to be clear away when Johnson saved the day by pulling him down from behind at P.C.I.'s 15-yard line. When Albert College pulled an end run, masked by a fake kick formation, and carried the ball almost to the Petes' line a major score looked certain. But the fighting garnet and gray, with their backs to their own goal posts, threw back three plunges and took the ball, P.C.I. won the battle of the Cobourg sand dunes right there. That was the high tide of the Belleville assault and when it was checked by the seawall of the P.C.I.'s effective defence, it never came close to the Peterborough goal line again. Victory had been achieved in those few hectic moments and while plenty of hard fighting remained, Albert College were held so far out for the balance of the game that they never had a chance to even kick over for a point. Meanwhile the P.C.I. team smashed up the field from their own goal line until they came within an ace of a touchdown and did score a safety that put them in front 3 to 1 at the half. They added another single in the third quarter and the fourth was a scoreless period with Albert College battering away in vain at the P.C.I. line in midfield or testing the P.C.I. halves with long kicks, which Cuthberteon and Green played faultlessly and usually ran back for gains.

The whole Collegiate squad shared in the triumph, although naturally Cuthbertson, Green and Dearborn, by reason of being called upon to play new roles because of the loss of Gemmell, were particularly prominent. Cuthbertson, hurt early in the game, and working under a handicap, handled the plays smartly and was brilliant individually while Green's catching and running were a big help to the winners. Victory might easily have slipped out of the hands of Cuthbertson and Green in that last period when they were called upon to handle Belleville's aerial attack but the two caught splendidly and their steadiness gave Albert College no chance. Dearborn did the booting after the first period and he hammered that wet ball to great advantage, rising to the occasion like a veteran. Glover showed some of the prettiest tackling of the season, Preston was a tower of strength defensively, and Hewitt, Dunkerly and the rest of the squad played stellar football at all times.

P.C.I. after winning the Central Ontario title will be matched with U.T.S. in the Ontario semi-finals. Given a break in ground conditions those Collegiate Gamecocks will give the Toronto students a merry battle, despite the absence of Gemmell, whose all-round playing has meant so much to the team this season.

HOLD BRUINS TO 2-2 COUNT

Clancy, Ottawa Defence Man, Ties Count in Final Moments of Play.

NERVE TINGLING HOCKEY.

OTTAWA, Ont., November 19. — (Canadian Press.) — Through another 70 minutes of hard hitting and nerve-tingling hockey at the auditorium Saturday night, the Ottawa Senators figured in their second straight tie game of the N.H.L. season with the Boston Bruins, repeating the New York Americans' feat of holding the squad to a deadlock, the final figures in this case being 2 to 2. It was more a case of the Senators fighting to hold the powerful Bruins, however, even as up to the last four minutes of the third period, the visitors held a 2 to 1 advantage, and seemed headed for victory until Frank Clancy, tornado-like Ottawa defenceman, capped a great evening's performance by hitting the net behind Thompson for the tieing goal on a pass from Touhey.

Another gallery of five thousand turned out for the second home game of the season to see the Senators force the issue into the extra ten-minute period without either team breaking the dead-lock. The Bruins showed more system to their play, and worked a combination attack in the second and third periods that seemed destined to bring about the downfall of the home forces, but the sensational goal-tending of the ever-alert Alex. Connell kept the Senators in the running throughout.

The Senators, missing the valuable services of their speedy left wing regular, Hec. Kilrea, who is still resting up a foot injury from the training grind, displayed an attack working mostly on individual rushes although the two goals that they did register were the result of clever combination plays. The big Bruin defence was the stumbling block in the majority of the Senator dashes on the Boston net, and in front of the youthful Thompson ,Boston's new goaler, Eddie Shore and Lionel Hitchman played superb hockey. Boston showed a double shift front line that was ever a menace to the Ottawa rearguard. It was this double-barrelled attack of the bean-owners that kept Ottawa mostly on the defensive in the second and third periods.

The teams:

Ottawa	Position	Ottawa
Connell	Goal	Thompson
Boucher	defence	Shore
Clancy		Hitchman
Nighbor	centre	Frederickson
Finnigan	wing	Oliver
Touhey		Galbraith
Grosvenor	rush	Weiland

Officials: Billy Bell and Alex. Romeril.

OSHAWA SQUAD IN RUGBY FINAL

Eliminate London Gas House Gang For Place in Intermediate Play-off.

OPPOSE SARNIA.

LONDON, Nov. 19 (Canadian Press).—The Oshawa Blue Devils streaked their way to the finals for the Intermediate O.R.F.U. title by eliminating the local gas house gang in decisive fashion by the score of 11 to 6 here Saturday afternoon. Their next step to the Dominion play-offs will be to overcome the Sarnia Wanderers.

Ic..ion fought a losing battle most of the way, although they drew first blood in the initial quarter with a safty touch within one minute of the starting whistle, Oshawa retaliated a moment later when Bond crossed the line for the first try of the game.

London's other scoring was done by Wanless in two singles and Hubbell, the General Motor's kicking star, their odd point, besides making a fine 30-yard run in the third frame.

A fair-sized crowd watched the struggle.

CARNEGIE'S CLASS HUMBLES HOOSIERS

Many Upsets in U. S. Football Circles Over the Week-end.

BY. ALAN J. GOULD
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—(Associated Press).—The paeans of praise today in the college football campaign belong to the rock..ribbed forces of Carnegie, undefeated grid..iron products of the part-time coaching system of a Chicago judge and one-time all..American quarterback, Walter Steffen.

In trouncing the Notre Dame that had humbled the Army and doing it on the Hoosier's own field, the Tar..tans from Pittsburgh removed any lingering doubts about their class, power and resourcefulness in one of the greatest victories of this spectacular season.

Carnegie does not occupy the unbeaten spotlight alone. Reading from left to right the picture of those in the ultra-select group shows the Tar..tans lined up with Georgia, Florida, Tennessee, Detroit, Ohio Wesleyan and Boston College. All have a hand in the debate to some extent but the clan of Carnegie, led by Captain Harpster and the battering-ram Karols set a dazzling pace yesterday for the leaders as they demonstrated their mastery over the Rockne Ram..blers for the second time in three years, something that isn't done very often where the Hoosiers are con..cerned. Carnegie's seventh straight triumph featured a day of gridiron thrills, a series of battles in the mud, snow and balmy sunshine in which other main developments were the clean-cut victory of Princeton's Tig..ers over Yale in the big eastern clas..sic the eind of West Virginia's seven..game winning streak at the hands of Georgetown and the ousting of Iowa and Southern Methodist from the respective leaderships of the Big Ten and Southwestern Conference leaderships. There were fresh shocks to the "dope" and the experts but on the whole, the pace-setters had a pretty good day.

Iowa and Nebraska, the two mid..dlewestern arrays that had cleaned up everything previously in their paths, were the only major leaders in the college group to be checked. The Iowans were knocked from the Big Ten peak by Wisconsin's alert band, which simultaneously jumped to the front in this race, while Ne..braska had its otherwise perfect slate spoiled by a scoreless tie with the University of Pittsburgh.

The "Big Three" in the Southern Conference race, Georgia Tech, Ten..nessee and Florida, all zipped along the unbeaten trail to continued their hot fight for sectional as well as na..tional honors.

The Army and Navy, tuning up for battles this week with Nebraska and Princeton, scored easy victories over Carleton and Baltimore Loyola.

The Army-Nebraska affair at West Point will be one of the year's out..standing intersectional games while the Navy and Princeton will close their seasons at Philadelphia.

British Heavyweight Plans Comeback, Scott Willing To Meet Any Contender

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—James L. Johnston lost one of his best meal tickets when Pete Latzo, former welterweight champion, had his jaw broken in a minor engagement in Newark a few weeks ago.

But yesterday Johnston recovered another meal ticket that he thought was lost to him for all time. The Hard Rock of Times Square was amazed and delighted yesterday when he received a cablegram from Phil Scott in London suggesting that they let by..gones be bygones and get down to business. Scott said he was willing to fight any heavyweight in the world and would leave London for New York on the first available steamer after re..ceiving his passage money from Johnson. The Hard Rock nearly broke a leg getting over to the Western Union office, where he cabled the British heavyweight champion his fare.

He said that Scott, having beaten Paulino Uzcudum and John..ny Risko, would come here prepared to claim the heavyweight championship of the world. His first bout, Johnston said, would be with Knute Hansen, by whom he was knocked out in his first battle in an American ring. Johnston has always claimed that a low punch started Scott on his way to defeat in that bout.

Scott sails from Southampton next Saturday.

FAMOUS CANADIAN RUGBY GAMES, PLAYS AND PLAYERS

By NICK BAWLF— Former star football, lacrosse and hockey player, now coach at Cornell

Rugby football was introduced into the United States by the McGill University fifteen, captained by Dav..id Roger, a science student, when his side met a team representing Harvard University on Jarvis Field, Cambridge, May 15, 1874. The score was 0-0. Harvard, Yale, Columbia and other American colleges played a football game along soccer lines. There was no running with the ball or tackling. The Canadians intro..duced English rugby to the Ameri..can student, just the game they wanted. It was adopted and the first rugby game between Harvard and Yale took place at New Haven in the fall of '75.

The game given to the Americans by the Gill team has undergone great changes since that memorable spring day in May, 1874. Even here in Canada most of the changes ad..opted by American rule makers have been written into the Canadian code. The game that McGill and Harvard is still played under the same rules in England to-day. And a mighty fine game of rugby football it is. Here is the diagram of an English extension run most likely used by Captain Rodger and his team mates, against the American Cantabrians in 1875. It is the spectacular play in English rugger to-day:

No. 1, the halfback, attending the scrum, receives the ball when he calls for it. He runs to the open and when tackled passes to the flying halfback No. 3, the connecting link with the three-quarters. The full..back follows up. The writer enjoyed several spirited games at Old Deer Park, Richmond, playing for Canada against the Australians and others. The line-up in the McGill-Harvard game was:

McGill—Fowards, Baynes, Jenkins, Huntingdon, Joseph, Bowie, Pattee, MacDonald, Henderson, Jones, Good..hue; halfbacks, Thomas, Boswell; captain, Rodger; three-quarters, Ab..bott, Fleet.

Harvard—Forwards, Leeds, Randall, Lyman, Morse, Sanger, Goodrich, Rives, Cabot, Ellis, Cote; halfbacks, Lombard, Grant; captain, Whiting; three-quarters, Gray, Tyler.

Referee—H. Hubbard, Harvard.

Umpire—Henshaw, McGill.

P. D. Ross of Ottawa captained the McGill team of 1875-76 which defeat..ed the Harvard team that year at Montreal.

To-morrow we will glimpse at the Osgoode Hall team of 1892 which won the Canadian championship.

Prize Winning Essay

In contest conducted by Haboco Stores, Peterborough.

"Why I Like to Buy in a Chain Store."

(By Margaret Wyllie, 227 McDonnel Street, winner of first prize.)

In our language the word Chain has many meanings, but each of them denotes strength. In our laws it means bond, and again our great mountain ranges are called chains. The original idea of Chain Stores may be found 258 years ago when the Hudson Bay Company formed them to trade with the Indians. Great success has been found along this line by many companies, such as: The Dominion Stores, Loblaw Groceterias, Woolworth Company. The Haboco Stores on their solid foundation promise to rival these.

H. J. Boyle started in business in Peterborough eight years ago. He had then one store, but his great personal interest has increased this to seven stores. The public has watched his progress with interest, and now when he is to still further increase his business, several Peter..borough men with brains and ster..ling characters, are ready to join him as he heads this great enter..prise.

The advantages of dealing at a Chain Store are numerous. The chief of these are: (1) The clean, whole..some appearance of the store; (2), all the latest devices for keeping goods clean and sanitary; (3), the best quality at lowest possible prices, is a tempting asset; (4), buying for cash enables customers to obtain cheaper rates; (5), each purchase bears a money-back guarantee; (6), Staples and delicacies from all over the world are to be found on the shelves; (7), customers are to be treated courteously and fairly; (8), advertising and careful marking of goods makes shopping easier; (9), stores are placed in districts handy to housewives; (10), made-in-Canada goods are given the preference; (11), goods are bought directly from the manufacturers.

The Haboco Stores serve customers to within a radius of twenty miles of Peterborough. The links of this chain will extend very much far..ther, and may the slogan "More for Less," become known all over On..tario, and perhaps Canada.

THEATRES

AT THE CAPITOL.

CHAPLIN, FAIRBANKS, GILBERT, DANE, HART, ADOREE AND OTHER FAMOUS STARS HAVE PARTS IN "SHOW PEOPLE" WHICH CO-STARS MARION DAVIES AND WILLIAM HAINES AT THE CAPITOL TO-NIGHT.

With five of the cleverest come..dians in Hollywood in the cast and with many famous stars, including Charlie Chaplin, Norma Talmadge, William S. Hart and Douglas Fair..banks playing themselves, as atmos..phere, the new Marion Davies-Wil..liam Haines co-starring picture "Show People," now playing at the Capitol Theatre, is, thus far, the most unique comedy of the season.

Miss Davies, through her work in many pictures, has won the title of America's leading comedienne. The role of the little extra girl who comes to Hollywood and attains sud..den stardom offers her an excellent opportunity not only to satirize her friends and acquaintances and poke gentle fun at Hollywood, but to de..velop an entirely new screen char..acter.

Haines, who never went the route of the comedy studios himself, is, nevertheless, ideal as the slapstick artist who graduates from the com..edy lots in time to save "Peggy", the herine, from the fate of the "up..stage" actress, which, as even Holly..wood will admit, is sometimes a quick and fatal one.

Polly Moran, who has stolen scenes from every star in the picture busi..ness because of her comedy antics finds herself up against stiff compe..tition with the two leads, but plays her hole as Miss Davies maid in her "ritzy" days, in her usual hilarious manner.

Dell Henderson, who played so capably Miss Davies' father in "The Patsy", plays in the present picture, a fake Southern Colonel, who some..times forgets that it was his father and not himself who fought against Grant. Tenen Holtz is equally good as the movie producer.

AT THE REGENT.

GORGEOUS STAR SCORES IN NEW FILM.

Billie Dove Makes Most Enthralling Appearance to Date in "American Beauty" — Amusing Comedy-Ro..mance Is Excellent Entertainment.

"American Beauty" is all that the name implies.

Which means that the picture of that name at the Regent Theatre has beautiful Billie Dove, who richly de..serves the title, in the starring role, a capable cast of supporting players and an excellent story in which an abundance of comedy and touches of drama and pathos are intermingled with skill and adroitness.

Adapted from a short story of the same name by Wallace Irwin, "American Beauty" is the whim..sical story of a beautiful girl who has no money but conceals the fact be..hind a screen of pretense in order to catch a millionaire for a husband. When she finally has the millionaire in her net, of course, she discovers he isn't such a catch after all.

Lloyd Hughes lends his pleasant personality and masculine handsome..ness to the leading role opposite Miss Dove. Walter McGrail, as the mil..lionaire, gives a finished performance and Lucien Prival, a comparative new comer to the screen, stands out in a comedy role of unusual nature. Mar..garet Livingston, Al St. John, Edythe Chapman, Alice White, Yola d'Avril, Loretta Young and others are in sup..port.

"American Beauty" is a Richard Wallace Production, and maintains the usual high standard set by that director in recent pictures. The story was adapted to the screen and pro..duced for First National Pictures by Carey Wilson.

Duelberg-Walthour Win Bicycle Race

CHICAGO, Ill. Nov. 19.—(Can..adian Press).—Frans Duelberg, who recently left his home in Germany, and who subsequently had difficulty in obtaining "three squares" a day, yesterday sat in the golden chair of the cycling world.

The German boy and his "kid" partner, Jimmy Walthour, won the 20th international Chicago six day bike race, which ended at the Coliseum last night. The two rode with finished skill, beating out many veterans. At the end of the grind, they were one lap and 74 points ahead of their closest competitors, Letourner and Brocardo, the French duo.

The winner's record for the six day grind was 2,259 miles, nine laps and 310 points. Georgetti and Beckhan, the French Ameri..can team, were third—three laps behind Letourner and Brocardo, while Horder and Kockler and Vannek and Zucchetti were fourth and fifth, respectively.

FINNEGAN WINS DECISION OVER FRENCH FEATHERWEIGHT

BOSTON, Mass., Nov. 19.—(Can..adian Press).—Dick "Honeyboy" Finnegan of Boston, won a well earned decision over Andre Revti of France, weatherweight champion of the world, in ten rounds at the opening of the new Boston Madison Square Garden Saturday night. Both men were overweight, so the French..man's title was not involved.

A crowd of 15,000 including Tex Rickard and a group of his Madison Square Garden associates, attended the opening event of the sport arena which has a seating capacity of 17,500 for boxing shows.

While they upheld the sanctity of the law, they reported that during their hunt they saw several men who were hunt..ing without licenses.

ALCOHOL IS GOOD AUTO INSURANCE

Thoughtful Motorist is Thinking How He Will Keep Car Operating in Winter.

The thoughtful motorist is reflecting on the ways and means of keeping his car in perfect running shape these winter months. There are plenty of "anti-freezes." We hear of honey, sugar, salt, and oil, to say nothing of such more technically imposing terms as ethylene glycol. But the two substances most frequently used in anti-freezing mixtures are alcohol and glycerin. "The car owner who has dug down into his pocket for the repair or replacement of a cylinder block, a radiator, water pump, or some other essential and expensive engine unit that broke from freezing, has learned the importance of having the right anti freeze and the correct amount of it." Any anti-freeze solution, we are told, must fulfil three functions:

First, it must be adequate to protect the engine by preventing the cooling system contents from freezing at the lowest possible temperature in any given locality.

Second, it must be of a character that will not damage the cooling system through solvent or corrosive action.

Third, it must circulate freely at the lowest operating temperature likely to be encountered.

Alcohol's Advantages.

Alcohol is cheap and more available. It offers adequate protection to the cooling system if present in sufficient quantity. Having an extremely low boiling point, 180 degrees, it evaporates rapidly, and the result is that, in localities where the temperature range is fairly wide, a cold spell may find the solution inadequate. The volume of alcohol present, however, is easy to determine by an Alco-Meter test. Alco-Meter stations are located all over the Dominion, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and are ready to test your radiator mixture free of charge. The motorist does not make such tests in too many cases. He assumes that the supply is sufficient, and that assumption often proves costly. Though he may consider it an annoyance, if he is to protect this engine fully and perhaps save himself a major repair job, every motorist who uses anti-freeze alcohol will find it well worth his while to have his solution tested regularly, at an Alco-Meter station. He may find that evaporation has reduced the proportion of alcohol considerably.

Disadvantages that may be charged to alcohol are minor. For one thing, its low-boiling point tends to keep cylinder temperature sub-normal. Another is that alcohol spilled or splashed upon a nitro-cellulose finish is quite likely to prove harmful if not immediately removed by pouring water on it; not by rubbing.

On the whole, alcohol is a good radiator protector. In case the motorist decides its advantages outweigh its frailties, the following table indicates the effective solution by volume for certain temperatures and the specific gravity reading for the various percentages:

Compare the cost of protection with alcohol and Alco-Meter service as against the cost of ready mixed preparations:

P.C. of Alcohol	Protects to	Gravity
10	25d. above zero	0.988
20	10d. above zero	0.978
30	5d. below zero	0.966
40	15d below zero	0.957
50	30d. below zero	0.943

Supply Exceeds Demand Prices Fall On N.Y. Exchange

NEW YORK, Nov. 19 (Canadian Press).—There were more sellers than buyers in the stock market today, with the result that the general price tendency was downward. Trading failed to maintain the terrific pace set in a series of record-breaking sessions last week but, due to the accumulation of small orders, the ticker again fell hopelessly behind the market, being fifty minutes late at 1.15 p.m.

The decline, which ran from 1 to 4 points in most of the active issue, and 5 to nearly 10 points in some of the high-priced specialties, was by no means general. Bull "pools" were again active in a select assortment of Copper Eastern rail, merchandising, oil, and chemical issues, a score of which were pushed up to new high records.

There was nothing in the day's news itself to influence liquidation of stocks as the large majority of weekly mercantile and trade reviews were optimistic in character.

Call money was somwhat firmed today at the renewal rate of 6½ per cent. The banks called about $10,000,000 in loan during the morning.

Montgomery Ward ran up to a new high to-day at 428 and then broke to 419. Wright Aero fell 9½ points below last Saturday's final quotation, and Radio 6½, selling of the last-named being accompanied by reports that Fisher Brothers of Detroit had disposed of their holdings at a substantial profit.

New high records were established by Liquid Carbonic, Johns Manville, Shell Union, Phillips Petroleum, Virginia Carolina Chemical, American Woollen, Continental Motors and Paramount-Famous-Lasky.

Weather Reports Govern Chicago Market Firmness

CHICAGO, Nov. 19. Canadian Press —Unexpected firmness of the Liverpool wheat quotations, together with rain reports from Argentina, tended to lift the wheat prices here to-day, at the start. The offerings increased on the advances here, however, and a reaction ensued. Opening unchanged to 1-4 up, Chicago wheat afterward showed something of a set back all around. The forecast of fair weather helped to ease the corn which opened unchanged to 1-2 higher and subsequently reacted. Oats were steady.

Mining Briefs

A Special Service to The Examiner

A shaft is being sunk on the recent discovery at the Trout Creek Gold Mines property in Kirkland Lake and it is now said to be down to a depth of 78 feet with the vein still showing. Values are found in the red porphyry where considerable free gold is showing. Diamond drilling is said to be in progress with the contract calling for a minimum of 2000 feet of this work. The campaign is being carried out with a series of short holes, about 200 feet. The first hole is said to have drawn a blank. Pittsburgh Kirkland, some 200 feet to the west are said to be diamond drilling in the hope of picking up extensions of the Trout Creek find but so far they have not been successful.

Stoping ore from the "A," "B," and "D" ore bodies on the 100 foot level of the Noranda is said to show average grade much higher than was formerly anticipated. The grade is now said to be sufficiently high that it has not been necessary to mine the high grade "K" ore body as a sweetener. The work is said also to show a large tonnage of ore available for the concentrator which was not considered in this light heretofore.

Two reports regarding the Murphy weer received from Kirkland Lake. One is to the effect that the crosscut being driven from the new shaft on the Margueretta claims is still in heavy mineralization and has another 60 feet to go before reaching the wall indicated by recent diamond drilling. The other despatch was to the effect that the old or No. 1 shaft is down to 680 feet with the crosscut still in ore. Values are said to be found in the red porphyry and are stated to run about $7.50 per ton over a width of 30 feet and with the south wall not yet reached. No drifting has yet been done and it is impossible to determine length. It is intended to run a crosscut on the 625-foot level some 1200 feet to the north, continues the report, to cut a vein on which some work was done at a depth of 100 feet some years ago, through an old shaft sunk to a depth of 100 feet. This long crosscut should give some idea as to the geology as well as intercept any east and west vein in the northern part of the property. The plant is said to be a small gasoline outfit capable of operating two drills.

It is reported that the ore being blocked out on the Wright-Hargreaves is not keeping pace with the tonnage being put through the mill, or in other words, the ore reserves are being decreased. New work going on at lower levels might alter this. At present, conditions on these lower horizons are stated to be considerably better.

It is reported that the new shaft going down on the Teck Hughes has now reached a depth of 150 feet.

Our Vancouver correspondent writes that announcement has been made by J. B. Williams, president of the Snowflake Mining Company, that Amor P. Keen, director and consulting engineer of Mining and Metals Shares Inc., has confirmed arrangements made with his directorate for the purchase of 600,000 shares of Snowflake stock. Mr. Williams states that this sale assures the company of sufficient capital to complete development and that further issue of treasury stock will be made. The understanding reached with the New York corporation is that the property will be developed extensively and that a concentrator of at least 200 tons daily capacity will be constructed as the first unit, with others to be added later, if necessary.

GIRL STATED FATHER DEAD

Ward, 86 Empress Crescent, Toronto.

That evening Peterborough police received a message from the Toronto police saying that the missing girl had taken refuge at the Convent of The Good Shepherd.

Last night, Mrs. Ward was communicated with at her home, and the police learned that the girl had been there part of the time between the date of her disappearance and her arrival at the convent. Mrs. Ward said her son had met the girl in a cigar store, where she was listening to music. She told of leaving home and was taken to the young man's mother, who heard her story.

Claimed Father Killed in War

She claimed that her father had been killed at Vimy Ridge, and that her mother had died when she was quite young. She said Mr. and Mrs. Bailey of Peterborough were her uncle and aunt, and that she did not wish to return to Peterborough. She said she was of the full age of eighteen years. In due course the girl obtained employment at a department store and was to start last Wednesday. She did not return to the home of Mrs. Ward, who learned that the girl had not appeared at the store. According to Mrs. Ward, the girl repeatedly said that if she was not able to make her way without depending upon others, she would enter a convent. In an interview given at Peterborough, Mr. Bailey said he could not imagine what made the girl leave her home, but he said she would be very welcome back again. The girl was still at the convent last night.

Did Not Know Whereabouts

No word had reached Mr. and Mrs. Bailey explaining where their daughter, Mary, had spent the weeks that she had been absent, until informed by The Examiner of the news from Toronto. The Mrs. Ward mentioned in the telegram and who sent them the first welcome news of the safety of the girl is unknown to them. Mary, has not yet sent her parents any word and they still cannot imagine what made her go away.

"There is no truth in the alleged statement of Mary that she is not our daughter," said Mrs. Bailey. "And," she continued, "she is only sixteen, her birthday is on the 20th of March and on that day she was sixteen." She had never heard her daughter express any desire to enter a convent and she thought that she would not be suitable for that life.

Mr. Bailey wrote to the Home of the Good Shepherd yesterday, expressing the hope that they might keep his daughter there for awhile, and advising them to guard her closely.

SACRED HEART CONGREGATION

Sacred Heart before their promotion to the entire responsibility of their present charges. Rev. James McGuire, of Hastings, preached the special anniversary sermon in the evening.

"Blessed Are They That Dwell in Thy House."

Father McGuire's text was from the 83rd Psalm: "How lovely are Thy tabernacles, O Lord!....Blessed are they that dwell in Thy house; they shall praise Thee forever and ever."

"This is the age of positivism," Father McGuire said. "It judges things by results. It places value on a thing in so far as that thing has a bearing on human needs. To the spirit of that age I put the question, "Why are churches built? Of what value are they?"

All other buildings minister to the human needs of man, but the demands of the soul are not satisfied by material things. 'Not by bread alone doth man live, but by every word that proceedth from the mouth of God.'

"I define a church as a house of prayer," Father McGuire continued; "the rising of the soul to God in praise and adoration and in petition and thanksgiving. And the universal manifestation of that fact proves that it is a natural instinct of mankind. There never was a tribe without religion. In some instances it was crude and barbarous, but the religious instinct was there however, the form may have varied. Religion is a universal instinct of mankind and cannot be a mere accident. Without it humanity ceases to be humanity.

We see it in ourselves. We did not come from nothing. We came from the cause and creator of all things, and because He is the cause of all things He is supernaturally intelligent and good. In our dependence upon Him we rush to Him with outstretched arms. That is the ceaseless swing of religion. We never address "Our Father" without feeling that we are rising to a better life. When did you ever go forth from the house of God without renewed strength to serve Him and to serve your fellow man?

"When two or more are gathered together in My name, there am I in the midst of them' Such is the promise of our Lord. And therefore men build churches, thereby providing for the higher life of the soul.

House of Spiritual Strength.

A church is also a house of spiritual strength and help, where are expounded the moral truths necessary for attaining the end for which we are created. These truths come from God, and by that very source they are necessary to men. The church with its sacraments is also a temple of grace, and the house of hope.

"Life is a continual fight," Father McGuire remarked. "Clouds of misery and misfortune overhang the poor traveller along life's pathway. Hope and the vision of reward are his aids and encouragement. Man must have a purpose in life, otherwise he will sink into the depths of despair. Where do we get that hope? Only in the service of God. Our omnipotent Father holds out His reward and asks us to work for Him. With heaven awaiting us, what matters the misfortunes of life, what matters even death itself?

"Why do we build churches? To bring God down to man; to keep that hope of Him alive in men's hearts; to give life its true meaning and to satisfy the yearning of man's soul; to learn the principles necessary for human conduct and to receive those graces necessary for the sustaining of the soul along the way of life."

Bishop's Good Wishes.

Bishop O'Brien congratulated the pastor and people of the church in the completion of another year of co-operation in the service of God. The congregation had grown during those nineteen years, and so it had been with the church throughout the length and breadth of the world, His Lordship said.

"I associate myself with you in thanking God for His graces and blessings. I pray that you will keep on. Be renewed in the spirit of faith and piety. Be selfish, if you will, in one thing and that is the salvation of your own soul."

Bishop O'Brien referred to a verse in the day's epistle in which St. Paul, writing to the Thessalonians, said, "For our gospel hath not been unto you in word only, but in power also and in the Holy Ghost."

"That is how God's church comes to any person to-day. The church does not depend upon preaching alone, but she comes with much power and virtue. It means that God's church comes to us as the ambassador of Christ and lovingly helps us in our sanctification and in working out our own salvation. We are not called upon to accept the whims of any individual no matter how brilliant, nor to believe one doctrine to-day and another to-morrow. Truth is eternal and the truths we believe are founded in Almighty God Himself."

SPECIAL SPEAKER AT TABERNACLE

Rev. H. E. Weinzierl Gives First of Series of Lectures—All This Week.

"It would seem that Jesus Christ had from the beginning purposed to be embodied in human form to link the Creation with the Creator in His own wonderful person," was the statement that Evangelist Rev. H. E. Weinzierl of Detroit, Michigan, made in the course of his sermon last night at Bethany Tabernacle.

The evangelist gave a convincing and searching message under the title "Who Owns Your Body?" He further said, "The human body is the greatest form of being that ever should exist. All creation owes its existence to God. Shall we wonder that God should require it to be made worthy? It is to be seated beside that wonderful man Christ Jesus. The error of centuries has been the deprecation of the human body. God, who, as owner has ordained in the text that the body be sanctified: "And the very God of Peace sanctify you wholly, and I pray God that your whole spirit, soul, and body be preserved blameless."—I. Thess. 5: 23.

A sanctified body is a body that is: separated from all unholy use or abuse, and whose hands are clean from sins commitment and the injury of your fellowman; its feet will not go in the way of sin; its tongue will be cleansed from lying, profanity, gossip, evil speaking; its eyes will refuse to see evil, the fault of others, etc. Romans 12:1 calls for the dedication of your bodies to its rightful owner! "Present your bodies a living sacrifice." Another verse "Ye are not your own...therefore glorify God in your bodies are given to Him they reflect bodies are given to Tim they reflect His righteousness like the diamond reflects and flashes back the glories of color like a rainbow and the sun combined."

An earnest appeal by the evangelist to his hearers to yield themselves to God followed the splendid sermon, and a number responding.

These meetings are growing in interest and attendance at each service. They will continue all this week. Each evening at 8 p.m. and Wednesday, Thursday and Friday afternoons at 3 p.m.

FATHER OF HARDING DIES.

SANTA ANA, Calif., Nov. 19 (Canadian Press).—Dr. George Harding, father of the late President Warren G. Harding, died here this morning as the result of a paralytic stroke last Friday. He was eighty-five years old.

Obituary

MRS. FRANK MAGEE

The death took place on Sunday, November 18 at 164 Rushton Road, Toronto, of Ellen Armstrong, beloved wife of Frank Magee, formerly of Peterborough. The funeral will take place on Tuesday morning at 10:30 from Toronto arriving in Peterborough for interment in Little Lake Cemetery on Tuesday afternoon

She leaves to mourn their loss, besides her husband, her mother, Mrs. James Armstrong, 97 Hunter street Peterborough, two sisters, Mrs. R. Starr and Mrs. James Sullivan, both of Peterborough, three brothers, R. P. Armstrong of Peterborough, and William, also of Toronto.

IN POLICE COURT

A large audience waited until 10.35 for police court to start this morning. Percy Holland, whose case on a charge of breaking and entering, was formerly remanded when he pleaded not guilty, was dismissed this morning by Magistrate Langley, the Crown having no evidence to continue the case.

William Brundrett appeared, charged with being in charge of a motor vehicle while intoxicated.

Magistrate Langley found him guilty and he was sentenced to seven days in the common jail.

V. J. McElderry appeared for the accused, and the case will be appealed in December to the General Sessions of the Peace before Judge Huycke.

THIRTY HUMAN SKELETONS ARE

tons. They claim emphatically that as far as they know, no white settler of Ornabruck Township was ever buried at this site.

Many who can themselves remember at least eighty years back and have family history of 40 years before them to refer to are of the opinion that the bones are those of either Indians or Irish immigrants who died on shipboard on the St. Lawrence in either 1848 or 1849, when a cholera epidemic was raging and causing many deaths

The latter theory is generally accepted as the most feasible solution to the problem as other discoveries of small cemeteries along the St. Lawrence have been traced to the same origin. The fact that the skeletons were found in shallow graves, lying in many different postures and facing in no particular direction argue against the possibility of their being Indian remains, pioneer residents claim that the Indians had definite ideas on the burial of their dead.

Buried in Shallow Graves

According to superintendent O'Neil the skeletons were buried in very shallow separate graves, the majority being less than twenty inches below the surface. The land, although it has not been worked for the past five years, has been under cultivation, but no bone discoveries were made. Bockus, owner of the property has expressed the opinion that the cemetery located a short distance from the St. Lawrence River, has been flooded at some time in the past and the top soil washed away, bringing the skeletons nearer the surface. The sandy soil of the pit preserved the bones in perfect state and the majority of the skeletons were entire. Dr. C. J. Hamilton county coroner, was notified of the discovery of the bones and ordered their burial. He would venture no opinion as to their origin.

The epidemic of cholera, or "ship fever" which ravaged eastern Canada in 1848 and 1849 causing hundreds of deaths, particularly among immigrants who were flocking to Canada from Ireland at that time, is recalled by the discoveries. At Montreal where many of the immigrants disembarked, dozens of deaths occurred while many towns along the St. Lawrence have old cemeteries containing the remains of others who died on shipboard while enroute to the Great Lakes.

a long telegram from Hindenburg authorizing them to sign the Armistice.

In the Meantime.

"But in the meantime a revolution had broken out in Berlin, and I asked the envoys: 'Whom do you represent now?' They showed me a telegram from the Reich President Ebert. This gave them full power to sign.

"On the night of November 10-11 I rested only from midnight to 1 a.m. Then the Germans came along. I made out the order for the advance of 5,000 armored cars and machine guns. That ended it. At 5.15 a.m. they signed the Armistice, not mixing their great anger. At 7 a.m. I left for Paris. At nine o'clock I was with M. Clemenceau. He asked what I had left to the Germans. I told him that I had ordered the guns to be fired at 11 o'clock to announce the cessation of hostilities. He wanted this delayed until 4 p.m., in order that he should be able to announce the Armistice in the Chamber of Deputies.

"I explained to him that the Allied the events by my order of the day. Armies were already acquainted with and that firing would cease at 11 a.m. All the world was now acquainted with the fact.

"In the meantime, M. Barthou, M. Nailx, and other persons had come to Clemenceau's office to speak to me. Finally he acceded to my entreaties and agreed that the guns should be fired at 11 a.m."

IN MEMORIAM.

In loving memory of Robert W. Payne, of Warsaw, who died on November 18th, 1927.
(Inserted by His Sorrowing Widow and Daughter.)

He has passed beyond our tear-dimmed sight,
Called hence by Heaven's all wise decree,
In the Father's house, on high, to dwell,
Forever more from suffering free;
He has crossed the invisible divide,
And reached that bright Elysian bourne—
The land where sickness is unknown,
And no sad hearts for loved ones mourn.

In gentlest tones the Master's voice
Fell on his ear, one year ago,
Saying: "Prepare for sweet repose,
Thy task is finished, here below."
Never a murmur passed his lips,
His spirit felt no faithless fear,
He knew to bear him safely home
Angelic hosts were hovering near.

Though fain and eager to remain
With those so precious to his heart,
Obedient to his Lord's behest,
Ready and willing to depart;
Kindly the mighty Reaper stayed
The sickle, in his up-raised hand,
And he lay awhile on Jordan's brink
Ere passing to Emmanuel's Land.

Now, o'er a once bright happy home
Grief has her sable pinion spread,
Where joy made her serene abode
A widow weeps with drooping head.
But Memory will regild the past
And Hope sing a sweet silvery song
Of the rapturous meetings yet to be throng.
Up yonder, 'mid the white-robed
They greatly err, who deem that they
Who pass to a celestial sphere,
And higher service, can forget
The friends they loved so fondly here;
The heart knows its own bitterness,
Still let us selfish grief restrain,
Nor weep as of all hope bereft—
Our loss is his eternal gain.
While a myriad friends high tribute pay
An offering at true friendship's shrine,
One gem among the golden hoard,
To speak remembrance, shall be mine;
For we were friends in Auld Lang Syne,
When cloudless shone life's morning skies;
And though our meetings have been few,
Unsundered, were those early ties.
A heart war his of genial mould,
Of ideals high, true worth he was,
Ready to lend a helping hand,
Foremost in every worthy cause;
Most zealous in the Master's work,
Talents and time he freely spent,
The Church his warm devotion claimed,
While Heaven the vital powers lent.
In the stern race of life he strove
The straight and narrow course to run,
Pressing toward the shining mark
Until the glorious goal was won.
With bright immortelles on his brow,
With loving hands out-stretched he waits
To greet and give us welcome, when
We meet inside the pearly gates.
On Warsaw's sacred church yard hill,
Beneath the flower-decked sod, he sleeps
Unconscious of the lonely one,
Who oft with him sad trysting keeps.
Solace for all her grief and pain,
And sadness, may kind Heaven bestow,
For there's sweet Balm in Gilead
To soothe, and heal, earth's keenest woe.

CITIZENS ENDORSE OLD HOME WEEK

First Week In July Set

Council Chambers Filled To Capacity To Discuss Much Talked Of Event.

COMMENCE JUNE 29.

War Memorial Will Probably Be Unveiled Next Dominion Day.

That the city and county of Peterborough are going to have a successful Old Home Week that will make history was evident by the enthusiasm expressed by the large meeting of representative citizens that crowded the Council Chambers to plan for the event last evening. Every seat was filled by citizens, who braved the storm to show their support and cooperation in the idea of an Old Home Week.

It was definitely decided when Mayor Denne put the motion before the house that Peterborough would have an Old Home Week that would bring back the Old Boys and Girls of the city for one whole week of celebration and renewal of old friendships and associations.

There was some discussion relative to the best week in which to hold the celebration, and either the first week in July or the first week in August were suggested. It was voted that the first week in July be set as the date, as there are two holidays in that week—Dominion Day in Canada and the Fourth of July in the United States. The children are then free from school, and residents of the city have not gone to their summer homes. The unveiling of the memorial to Peterborough boys who gave their lives in the Great War will likely take place on July 1, and it should be one of the biggest events in the Old Home Week program.

It was moved and carried the Old Home Week commence on Saturday, June 29, and continue to Friday, July 5.

General Chairman

Mayor Denne was appointed as general chairman of committee. The Mayor expressed his thanks and his confidence in the citizens of the city in their whole-hearted efforts to make the week the most successful community event in the history of Peterborough.

A nominating committee consisting of Mayor Denne, S. R. Armstrong, E. F. Mason, Dr. Middleton, Mrs. C. Banks, Father Costello, Mrs. F. Lynch, H. B. Rye, A. Mowat, and R. M. Glover, was appointed. The committee is meeting this evening at four o'clock to nominate persons to act as chairman of committees for the planning and administration of the program and other necessary work.

Approval was expressed in the suggestion that the week not only be planned as a reunion of city Old Boys and Girls, but also the county be invited to join in and bring home their old comrades for a big double celebration.

Another citizen's meeting will be held in the Council Chambers on Friday evening, at 7.30, to make further plans and vote on the names for heads of the various committees that the nominating committee will bring forward.

THREE INJURED IN EXPLOSION

Huge Boiler is Blown Through Twelve Inch Brick Wall.

HURLED 70 FEET.

GLACE BAY, N. S., November 20, Canadian Press. — Three men were injured in a boiler explosion at a local colliery this morning, the force of which was felt all through the New Aberdeen district.

The section of the boiler, weighing two and a half tons, was hurled through a section of steel girders, then through a twelve inch brick wall, into a main compressor house, for a distance of seventy feet. Part of the roof was blown off the plant, and the heavy pipes and steel supports were reduced to a mass of twisted wreckage.

The injured men are Archie McAdam, struck on the head by flying missiles, Jack Frost and Archie Johnstone, suffering from shock and burns. Three or four firemen who were standing in front of the boiler at the time, miraculously escaped instant death.

GRANTED DIVORCE.

EDINBURGH, Nov 20.—(Canadian Press.) — Lord Inverclyde, one of Britain's richest peers, was to-day granted a divorce from Lady Inverclyde.

English Immigrants Who Came To Canada Last Spring Drifting Into City Looking For Work in Factories

That many English immigrants, who came out to Canada last summer as farm labourers, are drifting into the city in search of work in factories are the conditions reported at the local Employment Bureau to-day. These men have worked only a few months on the farm and now, growing tired of farm work, are coming into the city in search of jobs in factories that they like better than the strange work on the farms. One such immigrant when asked, "Why are you seeking work in the city when you came out to Canada to work on the farms?" is reported to have answered, "There is no restrictions to stop me from seeking work in the city. If I had not come out as a farm worker I could not have come at all." Nearly all these men came out to Canada on the pretence of farm workers and are now hunting jobs in the city.

One of the English miners, who worked in the harvest fields of the West applied at the Employment office for some assistance in transportation to some mining area where he could find the work that he preferred.

DAUGHTER FINDS HER MOTHER DEAD IN CELLAR OF HER HOME

British Police Seek Loiterer Who Watched Home—Body Badly Battered.

NEIGHBOR GIVES ALARM.

Husband Describes Man He Saw When Leaving For Shop—Motive Lacking.

SHEFFIELD, England, Nov. 20.—In their search for the murderer of Mrs. Beatrice Armitage of Catch Barlane, Hillsborough, Sheffield, who was found battered to death at the foot of the cellar steps at her home, police have made a discovery which may have important results.

The crime was committed between the time the woman's husband left for work and their little girl came home to find the house in a state bearing all the signs of a brutal crime having been committed.

Loiterer Suspected

It has been learned that a stranger, poorly clad, and soaked with rain, was seen standing in an entry to a passage, in Catch Bar-lane, almost opposite to the house where the murder was committed.

Mr. Reed, whose shop is on one side of the passage, states that the man was about five feet two inches in height, thin, with a sharp-pointed nose, sidewhiskers, unshaven face, and with a big drooping mustache turning grey. He called out "Good morning" to Mr. Reed, and remarked that it was going to be a wet day. Mr. Reed noticed that the man was clothed in old garments, his overcoat having a blue velvet collar, The man was soaked through with rain.

Bids Him Goodbye

When Mr. Armitage left for work at 9 o'clock in the morning his wife, looking as he says, "the picture of health," waved to him and cried a cheerful "goodbye."

At noon their daughter, Beatrice, seven years old, returned from school and noticed blood in the living room and other places. She got no reply when she called for her mother, and inquired of Mrs. Bennett, a neighbor Mrs. Bennett entered the house, and, attracted by the mewing of a cat at the cellar door, made investigation.

It was evident that Mrs. Armitage had been brutally murdered and her body either thrown or dragged down the steps.

The police were summoned, and Dr. G. Carter, the police surgeon, was of the opinion that the woman had been dead for two hours.

Find Pickaxe

Detectives made a thorough search of the house and took away various articles, including a blood-stained pickaxe, with which it is thought the crime was committed.

Mr. Armitage first learned of the tragedy when he was putting up the shutters to his shop in Malin Bridge, some distance away, preparatory to returning home. His nephew came running up and told him that Mrs. Armitage was in the Royal Infirmary.

When he reached the infirmary he learned the first details of his wife's terrible death, and was taken by motor car to his home in Catch Barlane.

The theory is put forward that Mrs. Armitage was struck down from behind while she was cleaning the firegrate, and her body carried or thrown into the cellar.

SALT IN CANADA.

Common alt (sodium chloride) is obtained in two forms, in solution in a saturated brine, from which the salt is extracted by evaporation and in lump or solid form by direct mining. During the year 1927, salt was produced in southern Ontario, and in the Malagash salt district, Nova Scotia. Ontario salt is obtained from brine wells, while Malagash salt is recovered by mining rock salt. A small quantity was also shipped from stock from the McMurray field in Alber-

Expert Audit Scheme Debated In House

LONDON, Nov. 20.—(Canadian Press Cable.)— Monday in the British Parliament:

The House of Commons debated the expert credits scheme, the Minister of Overseas Trade, Hon. D. H. Hacking, stating again that the government would decline to extend the scheme to include Russia. In view of the unsatisfactory trade position of Russia, which was steadily becoming worse, extension of the scheme to include that nation would be likely to imperil credits, he said. The House adopted an item of $75,000 in the supplemetnary estimates The amount will be used to assist in repairing damage in the islands of the British West Indies, swept by a hurricane in September.

KIDNAPED MAN HANGED TO TREE

Three Masked Men Enter Hospital and Take Mexican From Bed.

ATTACKED WOMAN.

FARMINGTON, New Mexico, Nov. 20. — (A. P.) — Three masked men on Saturday lynched Rafael Benavides, believed by the police to be the Mexican who early on Wednesdya morning attacked Mrs. Charles Lewis, wife of a prominent sheepman of Aztec, New Mexico.

Benavides, was taken from Farmington Hospital, where he lay critically ill with a bullet wound in his abdomen, and hanged from a tree on an abandoned ranch two miles from the hospital.

Mrs. Lewis was beaten unconscious by a Mexican who entered her home on Tuesday night while her husband was away on a hunting trip.

The man carried her on horseback in to a canvon and left her there unclothed. She wandered back to the ranch house and Sheriff Blacett organized a posse.

Yesterday afternoon Benavides was encountered by a posse at the Murphy ranch near the Colorado line, and shot when he resisted arrest.

Shortly before noon the three masked men entered the hospital, commanded the nurses to stand aside, and took the Mexican out of his bed. The nurses said the men did not display revolvers.

Dr. A. M. Smith, head of the hospital, who was called by the nurses, telephoned Sheriff Blacett at Aztec. The sheriff and his deputies found Benavides attired in his night shirt, hanging from a tree.

The nurses said they did not recognize any of the abductors.

BRITISH COTTON SUBSTITUTE TO REVOLUTIONIZE INDUSTRY

Canadian Mills Will Be Able to Grow the Plant at Their Own Doors.

TESTS MADE.

Three or Four Million Pounds Will Be Available Next Summer.

(Special to The Examiner.)

LONDON, Ont., November 20. — A cotton substitute, discovered by Britishers, may revolutionize the cotton and artificial silk industries of the world. The promoting firm is the English Artificial Cotton Production and Marketing Corporation. One of the directors, D. A. Walters, said this morning: "We are already negotiating with Canadians. This discovery will enable Canada to beat the United States right out of the cotton trade. The Americans are showing a very intriguing interest in our discovery. Germany is doing the same, but there is nothing doing. We are doing business only with Britain and the Dominions."

"But won't anybody be able to steal the seeds, and grow the plant themselves?" I asked.

"We are giving the seeds away — they don't need to steal them—but they don't know how to treat them."

Grown at Home.

Walters added that the Canadian mills would be able to grow the plant at their own doors. From the time of reaping to the time of handing to the mill, prepared for spinning, would be only 2 1-2 hours. This would allow for the process of stripping the fibre and preparing it and delivering to the mills. Cotton growing requires cheap labor, but this plant requires no cheap labor. It can be profitably sold at six pence per one pound while American cotton costs ten pence half penny in England, and Egyptian cotton is still dearer.

Walters showed me letters from famous spinning and bleaching firms which had tested the fibres, and found them better than cotton, making more durable cloth, and with a better sheen. The letters stated that if the price were right and the supplies were regular, there was no doubt of the textile industry taking the new fibre, because it required no change in the existing machinery. I was shown a piece of cloth which Mr. Walters said was woven from the new fibre, and I examined it through a magnifying glass. Besides the ordinary pocket handkerchief the new fibre looked lustrous, like silk.

Walters said the new fibre could be mixed with cotton, artificial silk or wool. The price of six pence per pound for the new fibre is very remunerative and supplies of between three and four million pounds will be available next summer. The treatment of the plant is very inexpensive. In a spinning mill costing five million dollars, the treatment plant would cost only five thousand dollars.

LOCAL HUNTERS HAVE GOOD TRIP

Grant Hunt Party Returns With Full Complement of Deer.

THREE DAYS IN CAMP.

The Grant hunt party consisting of Messrs. James Grant, Thomas Davis, Albert Davis, William Heard, Harry Pearson, Stanley Grant and Harry Blewett returned from the Pakesley district on Saturday with their full complement of deer of good and even size.

They remained in camp two or three days after having secured their number, waiting for a team to bring them out to Pakesley. They left Pakesley on Saturday morning for home, arriving in Peterborough on Saturday night at 8.40.

They report having had the most pleasant and most successful hunt in their experience.

INSURGENT CHIEF KILLED IN BRAWL

Bandit Leader Shot To Death While Resisting Arrest By Police.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 20.—(Canadian Press). — Dispatches from Guadalajara to-day said that Manuel Espinosa, an insurgent chieftain, had been killed by the police in the streets of Lagos.

Espinosa audaciously entered the town alone. When the police recognized him and attempted to arrest him he resisted. His single handed battle against the police came to an when one of their shots killed him.

Murder And Suicide Case Is Unearthed

BURY, Que., Nov. 20 (Canadian Press).—What is thought to be a murder and suicide case was brought to light here with the discovery of the bodies of Chancey Allison, 36, and his wife, 32, in the bedroom of their home. Mrs. Allison had apparently been strangled to death, while the husband was found on the floor with his throat cut by a butcher knife, still in his hand. An inquest will be held.

EIGHTEEN DEER BROUGHT HOME FROM PAKESLEY

Local Hunt Club Also Secures 1,000 Pound Bull Moose.

BLACK BEAR SHOT.

On Exhibit in Window of Jopling's Butcher Shop, Weighs 225 Pounds.

Eighteen deer, a bull moose and a giant black bear was the bag taken by the large party of hunters captained by Fred Jopling at their camp near Pakesly in the Owen Sound district. The hunters returned to the city last evening, carrying their heavy load of deer.

"It was the best hunt we have ever had," said Fred Jopling. "We shot our full quota of deer, one for every man in the party. The hunting was good and in one day we got six deer, not saying anything of the number we missed. We had a radio in the camp and the reception was splendidly clear from static. The full results on the election came in great. Everyone had a good time and plenty of real sport, but we all missed the cheery presence of Judge Tom Brightman in the camp. Hughie Hamilton acted as judge this year."

The great black bear can be seen in Jopling's window. It weighed 225 pounds dressed. The bull moose was a three-year-old and weighed 1,000 pounds.

Four of the large bucks weighed 200 pounds apiece.

The last night in camp the men became excited and disturbed when scrapings and grunting of some large animal was heard at the rear. The guns were all packed in preparation for the journey home and it was pitch dark The sounds indicated some large animal that was preparing to ravage the camp. Some of the men burst out the door and saw a large black bear poling his nose into the garbage pails. He skipped off into the woods when the men approached. "It gave some of us a half hour of disturbed piece of mind to hear those noises out in the night," said Mr. Jopling.

Holding Banquet

This evening the hunters are holding a banquet at Fred Jopling's home in Bridgenorth and their wives will be present. The banquet will be in true camp style with the tin plates, camp jam, and the butter in a big tin plate in the middle of the table. T. H. Hooper, the camp chef, will roast four hind quarters of venison for the banquet. Mr. Jopling could not find sufficient words to express the manner in which Tom Hooper can roast venison to a king's taste.

The death of a man by accidental shooting in the camp next door was the only event to cloud the sky for the hunters. The young man, a baseball player on his first trip into the woods, was mistaken by a fellow hunter as he came crashing through the bush for a deer, and was shot.

The Jopling party consisted of Joe Alcorn, Hughie Hamilton, George Smith and Phil. Stambraugh of Youngstown; Will Sherwood of Toronto, "Sandy" McManus, Clayton Telford, Fred Dobson Sr., Fred Dobson Jr., T. H. Hooper, Dr. Wood, and Jim, Walter, Harry, Bert, and Fred Jopling.

BARON DEAD.

BELFAST, Northern Ireland, Nov. 20.— (Canadian Press.) — Baron O'Neill, aged head of the O'Neill family of County Antrim and former Judge and Parliamentarian, died yesterday, aged 80.

Maniac "Hatchet Man" Is Sought By Police For Brutal Slaying of Three Residents

OMAHA, Nebraska, November 20 (Canadian Press). — A maniac "hatchet man," who in brutal fury pounces on his victims as they sleep, and smashes in their skulls with an instrument of death, was sought by the Omaha police to-day for the killing of two women and an aged man and the wounding of another man and his wife within forty-eight hours. Three children of one of the families attacked were left unharmed in their cribs.

The latest victims were Harold Stribling, 23, and his wife, who were attacked early to-day, while hundreds of police were searching the city for the maniac when the earlier killings had become known. After beating in Stribling's head, the slayer forced Mrs. Stribling to go with him to a swamp, where she later escaped. Stribling will probably die, but his wife is expected to recover, though she may lose the sight of an eye.

MANY OLD FAVORITE TUNES ARE OMITTED FROM CHURCH HYMNAL

United Church Hymn Book Committee Has Had Difficult Task.

READY FOR PRESS.

Only 192 Selections In Old Books, Were Common To Uniting Churches.

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 20 (Special to The Examiner).—When the new United Church hymn-book or "hymnary" as it is officially described is published, it will be found that not a few old favorites of Methodists, Presbyterians and Congregationalists are missing from its pages. That is, if changes are not made before it goes to press.

Such old timers as "From Greenland's Icy Mountains," "Blest Be the Tie That Binds," "Come Ye Disconsolate," and "Safe In the Arms of Jesus," are not included in the new book.

The hymn book committee had to put into a book with room for 645 hymns and psalms the best of three denominational hymnals, and each of the three had more than that number. Only 192 of the selections in the new book were common to all three books of prayer. There are also 96 new hymns for which room must be provided.

Put Before Council

The draft of the new hymnary was put before the General Council of the United Church in Winnipeg last September, which submitted it to the hundred-odd Presbyteries for consideration, asking that suggested changes be sent on to the committee before final printing. It is almost a certainty that suggestions will be made, for some of the brethren will want reasons for the discarding of some of their old-friends in their respective hymn books.

Analysis of the new book indicates that its makers are getting away from some of the more jingly and tin-pany tunes that were once the thing; others were rather lacking in literary merit go into the discard.

There is also a tendency to get away from the idea of the church as a military organization, though such established favorites as "Onward Christian Soldiers" and "The Son of God Goes forth to War" are not thrown aside.

Many will be surprised at the passing of the old missionary hymn by Bishop Heber, "From Greenland's Icy Mountains." The reason seems to be that the church is shaking off symptoms of a so-called superiority complex for these lines are in that hymn:

"Can we whose souls are lighted with wisdom from on high,
"Can to men benighted
"The lamp of life deny."

Presbyterians will miss Fanny Crosby's hymn, "Safe in the Arms of Jesus." One objection to it was its accounted suggestion of the physical, "Safe in the arms of Jesus,
"Safe on His gentle breast."

CONSTRUCTION BOOM AFFECTS CANADA

Busiest October in History of Dominion's Building Trade.

OTTAWA, Nov 20 (Canadian Press).—The value of building permits in Canada during October was greater than the total for that month in any year recorded at Dominion Bureau of Statistics. October's figure of $21,508,672 was an increase of $206,387 over the total of $21,302,285 for September, and an increase of $2,660,653, or 14 per cent., over the aggregate of $18,848,019 for October, 1927.

For the first ten months of 1928 the total was $187,697,420. This is greater by $28,000,000 than the same period in 1927, which was the previous high record.

"Bachelor" Charged With Non-Support

MONTREAL, Nov. 20.—(Canadian Press)—"I am a bachelor," Albert Pelletier answered amid much merriment when told today in police court that he was charged with non-support. A solution to the case will likely be found when the accused appears for trial next week. He is out on $100 bail.

DOLLAR RISES ABOVE PAR ON WALL STREET

Observers Are Puzzled, But Enhanced Value is Reality.

BIG DAY ON EXCHANGE.

Total Sales Crossed the 5,000,000 Share Mark For Seventh Time.

NEW YORK, November 20. — The Canadian dollar, which had been quoted at a discount for weeks in New York, advanced to a premium of 1-16 of 1 per cent. yesterday, a development which puzzled dealers in foreign exchange. The general explanation was that unseasonably mild weather, permitting large scale traffic on the Great Lakes beyond the usual time, was prolonging the season for Canadian export of grain and other commodities and creating a demand for Canadian funds with which to make payment.

The rate yesterday was the highest since October 11, and it contrasted with a discount of 1-32 of 1 per cent. on the Canadian dollar on Saturday. As recently as November 10 a discount of 7-64 of 1 per cent. prevailed.

Not Usual Trend.

The movement of Canadian exchange during most of this year has departed from the usual seasonal trends. A discount persisted at the height of the Canadian export season, when a premium usually exists. The general explanation for this was that large amounts of funds were being sent here from Canada to take advantage of the high money rates, and to participate in the broad stock market Yesterday's advance came at a time when Canadian exchange usually begins to sag as a result of the closing of the navigation season on the Great Lakes. The sudden strengthening in the rate caused some discussion of the possibility of gold shipments from New York to Montreal, but such a movement is not considered likely.

The "bull" market in stocks, which broke all trading records on the New York Stock Exchange last week slowed up under a heavy volume of profit-taking early yesterday, and then darted forward in spectacular fashion again in the last hour of trading. Early declines of $1.00 to $10.00 a share were largely cut down or wiped out, and nearly two-score issues lifted to record high levels in the public's mad scramble for stocks.

Total Sales High.

Total sales crossed the 5,000,000-share mark for the seventh time since the boom started ten days ago, with the ticker one hour and fifteen minutes late at the close. Sale of a stock exchange seat was arranged yesterday at the record-breaking price of $495,000.

The average of twenty leading industrial shares, compiled by The Associated Press, advanced nearly $2.50 a share to the highest level in history.

Radio Corporation common stock was brought forward by the "bull" forces as the market leader. After slipping back $6.50 a share to $293 in the early trading, the stock suddenly whirled upward to a new high level for all time, at $335, closing $4.50 below that level.

So swift was the advance and so late the tape, that the price was still being printed on the ticker below $300 a share when the market closed.

Three Boys Held By Police

Eldest of Gang is Only a Youth of Fourteen Years.

PETTY ROBBERIES.

Make Clean Breatst of Criminal Career Before Magistrate.

(Special to The Examiner.)

WHITBY, Ont., November 20. — The saddest story in the crime history of this town is that of three boys arrested last night by Chief Gunson. The eldest boy is but 14, and yet the three admitted to the chief that their depredations had extended over eighteen months.

The last of these petty robberies took place the night before the arrest and were the entry with several articles stolen from the homes of David Mowat, councillor, on Kent street, and G. P. Lynd, on Mary street.

The chief was scouring that part of the town in his car trying to find the thieves; it ran off the road; in examining his plight he spied three small figures hiding behind some bushes, and suspecting they were the long-sought culprits, asked them to help get his car in commission again. They hesitated but finally came out of their hiding place, and thereupon he told them they were under arrest.

Brought before the police magistrate and charged with the offence, they at last made a clean breast of their criminal career, and even boasted of some of its more glaring incidents.

The oldest lad was bailed out for three thousand dollars by his people and the other two (who are brothers) were placed in the Ontario county children's shelter at Oshawa, awaiting trial.

Chief Gunson claims the three are implicated in a train of trivial practices that have mystified citizens as well as wanton destruction of town property and hallowe'en pranks that were well beyond the limits of such practices.

MUCH DAMAGE DONE BY FLOODS

Season's Crops Are Destroyed When Tributaries of Mississippi Overflow.

SEVENTEEN LIVES LOST.

KANSAS CITY, November 20. — Canadian Press. — Into the lap of old man river himself, deep rolling, intractable, the Mississippi poured to-day the anger of the late autumn floods. Levees near Quincy, Illinois, had crumbled to permit the waters of the swollen tributaries to sweep over thousands of acres of corn, wheat and rice on both Missouri and Illinois side of the Mississippi.

With this flood, and the damage done in Kentucky by rivers, the waters to-day had claimed seventeen lives and inflicted a property loss estimated at ten million dollars. In Missouri, Kansas and Oklahoma, where fourteen lives have been lost, and property damage had been the heaviest, the recession of the waters was making possible a survey of the greatest flood damage these states have ever known.

The number of homeless ran into thousands. In five Kentucky communities alone one thousand were driven from their dwellings and the latest reports indicated that Kentucky and Cumberland rivers were still rising.

Cold and snow were following the floods, making necessary still further rehabilitation and relief measures among thousands of refugees.

TWELVE KILLED

VINCENNES, France, Nov. 20. — (Canadian Press).—Twelve persons were killed and many others injured when ammunition factory exploded here to-day. The factory was government owned and situated half a mile from the walls of Paris.

DRIFTED ALL NIGHT.

BUFFALO, N.Y., November 20 (Canadian Press). — Three Cleveland men, who drifted all night aboard two barges on the lower end of Lake Erie, reached land safely to-day when the boats were washed ashore.

Wrathful Ultimatum Delivered

PREMIER FERGUSON WILL PUT CHECK ON OPERATIONS OF BIG NEWSPRINT MANUFACTURERS

Administration Will Take Whatever Steps As Necessary Premier Asserts.

LETTER IS SENT OUT.

Government Does Not Intend To See Wage Earners Penalized.

TORONTO, Nov. 20.—Premier Ferguson last night issued his ultimatum to the pulp and paper interests of Ontario.

Charging them with pursuing methods that have created the present chaotic conditions in the industry, the Prime Minister made it plain that such a situation would not be allowed to continue.

"The Government has made up its mind," he stated, "that these gentlemen, in the next few days, must give up their plan of assassination, or we are going to take a hand in it. We've too much at stake to let them simply play with the matter for selfish purposes and interests."

Any breakdown in this industry—the second largest industry in Canada— might, Mr. Ferguson warned, bring about a very critical condition in business and financial circles. For that reason, as well as one of determination to see that investors, settlers, wage-earners and the public generally shall not suffer, he has stepped into the existing newsprint price-war picture with a chip on each shoulder and both fists closed. To the some fifteen paper companies operating within the Province he last night directed a letter setting forth in blunt, emphatic terms the Government's attitude on the question and the course the Government would be compelled to follow unless steps were immediately taken by those people interested in the operation of the industry to place it on a more satisfactory basis.

The Ultimatum Stands.

Mr. Ferguson believes that the leaders of the industry are too big in their views and business standing to allow the present situation to go on. He feels, he states, that they will get together and realize that, in the interests of the country as well as themselves, they must carry the burden of the present situation—if there is a burden in proportion to their strength, until the situation clears. Meanwhile the ultimatum stands as he despatched it. Several copies of it were mailed direct to Montreal, where pulp and paper operators are in conference. It reads, in full, as follows:

"For some time the Government has been much disturbed over the condition of the newsprint industry, and what is regarded as a very critical situation has been receiving careful study.

"In the great undertaking of settling and developing Northern Ontario, the Government realized that it was essential to the success of its plans that the people who were encouraged to go into that district should be provided with markets for the sale of their timber and other products, and opportunities for employment. Among other efforts, the Government encouraged the establishment of paper mills. A few years ago the conclusion was reached that the industry would be on a sounder basis and would ensure continuous employment and markets, if large, financially strong units were built up. A large number of small plants, with limited means, would in times of depressed markets be forced to reduce, if not entirely suspend, operations, with the result that the communities dependent upon them would suffer seriously, and the progress of the North country would be greatly retarded. On the other hand, if financially strong industries were created they would be able to continue operations, maintain payrolls and markets, as well as protect the thousands of investors all over Ontario through periods of depression.

CANDIDATE SPEAKS TO BAILIEBORO BOYS

Joseph Waddell Will Run For Office in Older Boys' Parliament.

(Examiner Correspondence)

BAILIEBORO, Nov. 20. — Joseph Waddell, candidate for the Eighth Ontario Older Boys' Parliament for East Durham, with a number of the Tuxis Boys from Garden Hill, motored to the village on Friday evening and visited the local Victor Square.

At the conclusion of the opening ceremony, Stuart Gray, of Garden Hill, introduced the candidate, telling the square of the sterling qualities of the candidate and of his ability to carry on the affairs of the constituency, if elected. Joseph Waddell was then called upon and clearly explained the six important planks of his platform.

A most enjoyable hour was spent in games and stunts, after which hot dogs were served to the boys by Herb Dean, Arnold Brown, Stanley Johnston and Karl Lang, the committee appointed by the local square to serve the eats.

The local candidate, Keith Barnard, with his campaign manager, Archie Deyell, is very active visiting the various Tuxis Squares and organized classes, explaining the various planks in his platform and seeking the support of the boys of the community.

MISSIONARY GIVES ADDRESS

Rev. N. Rowles Speaks at Monthly Meeting of Norham W.M.S.

DESCRIBES GIRL'S WORK.

(Examiner Correspondence)

NORHAM, Nov. 20.—At the monthly meeting of the W.M.S. of Norham, held on Tuesday afternoon at the parsonage, Rev. N. Bowles, a missionary from China, gave a most interesting address on the women's work in China. He spoke of the great scope of W.M.S. among the women and the need, because it could not be done by the missionaries and their wives. He gave three reasons why the girls' work was important:

1.—For the girl herself.

2.—To provide Christian wives for the Chinese preachers and workers.

3.—To train teachers and nurses to help in the work.

Rev. Mr. Bowles told of the kindergarten work among the children, the schools (day and boarding) for the older girls, and then the University of Chengtu. The girls are now permitted to enter university and a large number are attending. He thanked the workers here who stand behind the missionary with their prayers and financial support.

The meeting took the form of a missionary tea, presided over by the president, Mrs. D. R. Clare. At the meeting it was decided to change the hour of meeting from 3 o'clock to 2.30 p.m.

A letter was read from Miss Jamieson, secretary of the Dominion board, greeting the new society. A letter was also received from Mr. Roberts, president of the Cobourg Presbyterial, urging for a greater response to the allocation from the societies.

Mrs. W. Campbell and Mrs. Arkles sang a duet, which was very much enjoyed. Mrs. West read the devotional leaflet for the day, "Our Possessions." An enjoyable duet was sung by Mrs. Harry Wilson and Miss Florence Clare. Mrs. Arkles gave a most instructive and interesting paper on "Systematic Giving," urging the ladies to give of their means and not depend on bazaars, teas, etc., for the raising of missionary money.

The thank-offering was taken, and after a dedication prayer the meeting closed. Lunch was served by the Mission Band girls and young ladies of the church.

Addresses Young People.

Rev. Mr. Bowles gave an interesting talk to the Young People's League on Tuesday night on his own work in China and some of his experiences when leaving China.

Personals.

Rev. Mr. Bowles was a guest at the parsonage of Rev. D. R. and Mrs. Clare while in the community, as Rev. Mr. Clare and he were college associates.

Rev. D. R. and Mrs. Clare attended the induction services of the Rev. Mr. Duncan at the Presbyterian Church in Warkworth on Thursday afternoon.

Mrs. Ray Campbell and son, of Buffalo, are visiting the former's mother, Mrs. George Palmateer.

Hunters Catch Young Buck Which Dogs Had Mired Animal Is Left With Paxley Engineer To Raise

DUNSFORD, Nov. 20 (Examiner Correspondence). — Martin Thurston, of Greenhurst Bay, who has just returned from the hunting grounds and who was accompanied by Alexander Kennedy, of Dunsford, and a party of ten men from Lakefield, while hunting for deer at a point five miles north of Paxley caught a live young buck that weighed about forty pounds and about three months old.

Early one morning as the party was dividing for the day's hunt the dogs took up a sudden chase into a dense clump of brush at the water's edge. Two men followed and found the dogs with the young animal down in the mire. They drove the dogs away and as the young deer was about to make his escape, Mr. Thurston managed to catch him around the neck.

The party kept him for a week in a barn and fed him on cabbage and apples. On account of the difficulty of transporting him and upon the authority of Game Inspector McNotton, he was left with the C.P.R. engineer at Paxley, who intends raising him.

FREE PASSAGE FOR CHILDREN

New Scheme Regarding Immigration to Canada Announced By Department.

GOVERNMENTS SHARE COST.

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 20 (Canadian Press).—Extension of free passage to boys and girls up to nineteen years of age belonging to agricultural families in Great Britain coming to Canada for farm work is announced by the Department of Immigration.

For the last three years free passage has been given in such cases between the ages of fourteen and seventeen years. The extension in the age limit is the result of negotiations just completed with the British Government.

The cost is born in equal shares by the two Governments. The fare to points in Ontario and east is $80, and $100 to points west of the Manitoba boundary.

The children are brought out for placement in selected homes by either the Provincial authorities or the juvenile migration societies. In the former case the children are under the supervision and control of the Provincial Governments. In the latter, supervision is conducted by the Federal Department. In certain cases training in farming according to Canadian methods is given in Great Britain.

ENJOY DANCE.

Failure of Lights Did Not Mar Gathering at Marmora.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MARMORA, November 20. — Despite the fact that the electric lights went out at the time the crowd was beginning to gather, causing some to turn away, the dance held in Marmora Town Hall on Friday evening under the auspices of L.O.L. 319, was quite a success. Baxter's Orchestra played good music for round and square dancing. The usual excellent refreshments were served during the midnight hour.

FOURTH FORM PUTS ON PLAY

High School Literary Society Meeting Is Most Entertaining Event.

EXCELLENT PROGRAM.

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 20. (Examiner Staff Correspondence.) — Fourth Form students were responsible for an excellent program at the regular meeting of the High School Literary Society held in the auditorium of the school on Friday afternoon. The feature number of the program was a short, one-act play entitled "Not Quite Such a Goose." There were five members in the cast, and the sketch was received with much applause. The cast, Mrs. Bell, the mother, Reta Wilson; Albert Bell, the son, Stuart Anderson; Sylvia Bell, the daughter, Jean Nelson; Philip Flick, Sylvia's Friend, Basil Linton; Hazel Henderson, Sylvia's friend from college, Lillian Bonnie.

George Sloggett's account of the current events was very interesting and instructive and showed the results of much preparation. Miss Bella Lofchy's solo dance, Miss Marjorie Farrell's vocal solo, and an instrumental duet by Miss Nellie Haig and Miss Dorothy Henson, completed the program. George Osborne, the critic for the meeting, was very eloquent in his praise of the program. He expressed himself as being particularly pleased with the short play which had been so well staged. This was something rather novel in the society since the programs usually consisted of individual numbers such as vocal and instrumental solos, duets and readings.

The meeting closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

MUCH DAMAGE DONE BY WINDS

Alcove Window in St. Andrew's Church, Burnbrae, Is Destroyed.

CONCERT AT HOARDS.

(Examiner Correspondence)

BURNBRAE, Nov. 20.—Thursday's high wind again caused considerable damage in this community not the least being the destroying of the alcove window in St. Andrew's church here. This was a circular pane of stained glass illustrative of the burning bush and has been in position since the present church building was erected. The property committee have taken immediate steps to replace the window with one similar in design.

A splendid program of pageants, songs, recitations was given in Stephen's Church, Hoards, on Friday evening by the young ladies Mission Circle. The numbers were well prepare and delighted the large audience present.

FALL FARM WORK NEARLY COMPLETED

Bailieboro Farmers Take Advantage of Open Weather To Finish Plowing.

(Examiner Correspondence)

BAILIEBORO, Nov. 20.—The plowing is once again nearing completion for another year. There is a large acreage turned over this fall, and the long open fall is giving the farmers an excellent advantage to get their fall work completed.

The weather has remained so mild that few farmers have stabled their stock. The cattle are, in most cases, out on the pastures yet, and are doing well where the pasture is at all good. Up-to-date, it has meant a great saving in the winter's food supply and will go a long way in making up for the poor crops this season.

The major portion of the cattle in this district have already been shipped. The farmers are keeping as few head of stock as possible so that their grain and feed supply will last throughout the winter months.

THREE DROWNED.

AMSTERDAM, Holland, November 19. — Canadian Press. — Three members of the crew of fourteen carried by the Swedish vessel "Malmoe," were drowned to-day when the ship went aground near Ameland Island.

MASONS HOLD SOCIAL EVENING

"Ladies' Night" Observed By Hastings Lodge No. 633 G.R.C., A.F. & A.M.

GOOD PROGRAM.

(Examiner Correspondence)

HASTINGS, Nov. 20.—Friday evening was "Ladies' Night" in the Masonic Lodge, when the members of Hastings Lodge, No. 633, G.R.C., A.F. & A.M., were hosts to their mothers, wives, daughters, sisters and sweethearts. From eight to ten o'clock the large assemblage engaged in social conversation and games, after which a very excellent lunch was served by the men. When all had been served, the chairman, R.W. Bro. W. R. Learmouth, in a very amiable manner, expressed his pleasure at the large attendance and the splendid spirit manifested. He then called the following program, which was thoroughly enjoyed by all present:

Vocal solo, Mrs. C. Breckenridge, Westwood; recitation, Wor. Bro. Allen, Campbellford; address, "The Brotherhood of Smiles," Rev. Bro. A. C. Hie; vocal solo, Bro. Storrie, Campbellford; address, Rev. Bro. Battersby; violin solo, Bro. Gillespie, Keene; recitation, Miss Annie Spooner; vocal solo, Miss Battersby; address, R.W. Bro. T. P. Lancaster, Havelock; vocal solo, Rev. Bro. Battersby.

Hearty votes of thanks were extended to all who took part in the programm; to W. Brake and A. E. Spooner, who catered for the gathering, and to R.W. Bro. Learmouth, for his indefatigable efforts in providing such an excellent program.

After the singing of the National Anthem all were asked to sign the lodge register.

The policy of this lodge in having two "Ladies' Nights" in the year is very commendable and is much appreciated by the ladies.

FORKE DENIES LOVAT SCHEME WAS REJECTED

Not Yet Fully Considered and No Decision Has Been Reached.

IMMIGRATION PROPOSAL.

Would Involve Sale of Lands To Finance Settlement of Immigrants.

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 20 (Canadian Press).—Emphatic denial was given last night by Hon. Robert Forke, Minister of Immigration, to published reports that the Canadian Government had rejected what has become known as the Lord Lovat immigration scheme.

When the Minister's attention was drawn to the report he remarked that there was absolutely no warrant for the statement. "The Lovat proposals have not yet been fully considered by the Dominion Government and no decision of any kind has yet been reached," he added.

The immigration scheme proposed by Lord Lovat would involve the sale of Canadian bonds to the extent of $50,000,000 to finance the settlement of British immigrants in Canada. The British Government would guarantee the bonds while the immigrant would be required to meet his obligation on a longterm amortization plan. According to the proposal, Canada would enlist the emigrant, arrange for his transportation and supervise his settlement, provide farm homes and equipment. Twenty thousand settlers would be brought to Canada each year under this scheme.

Campbellford

(Examiner Staff Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, November 20.—Mr. J. D. Cumming is seriously ill at his home, First Street.

Saturday morning saw another business venture begun in Campbellford. Arthur Campbell and George Shaw started in the butcher business wit htheir store on Front street.

Bad roads and rainy weather did not tend to make the conditions ideal for the sale of home made cooking, held in the sample rooms, Bridge street, by the Women's Institute of Seymour West. The trouble seemed to lie in a lack of material to offer for sale. Such articles as were brought in found a ready sale, but there were too few of them, and the stock was reduced to nothing in record time. For some time past this branch of the Institute have enjoyed an enviable reputation for high class home cooking, and there was some disappointment felt among the patrons of the sale at not having the usual tempting array from which to select their purchases.

NURSES TELL THEIR THANKS

Apsley Outpost Hospital Benefits As Result of Appeal in Examiner.

MANY DONATIONS.

The attacehd letter is self-explanatory and conveys the thanks of the nurses at the Red Cross Outpost Hospital at Apsley, for articles donated to them in response to an appeal in The Examiner, some time ago.

The list of articles donated was a lengthy one and included many things, from a handsome new dresser with large mirror, donated by W. F. Butcher, manager of the Teco Store, to dainty little pepper and salt servers that will be very useful on patients' trays at the Hospital. There was tableware and cutlery and kitchen utensils, two fine comfortels, a quantity of clothing for women and children and a lot of very pretty things for babies, table linen, a case of soap, and a number of jars of preserves.

Those who donated articles and assisted in various ways included Mrs. E. M. Austin, of the Downyflake Tea Shop, Mrs. K. G. Lech, Mrs. G. D. Carlisle, Mrs. G. Ray Scott, Mrs. Alex Gibson, Mrs. H. W. Spofford, Mrs. A. Phillips, Mrs. W. E. Rogers, Mrs. E. Butler of Otonabee, Mrs. W. McKee Bingham, W. F. Butcher, and one of the city aldermen.

Assisting very materially with the donations and their delivery was F. Walsh of Euclid avenue, who kindly secured several donations and took the major portion of the articles to Apsley. A. Phillips of The Examiner staff and Mrs. A. J. Reynolds assisted also with the collecting and G. Stevens of Apsley transported tthe heavy dresser over the many miles of rough road that lie between the city and the little northern village.

Since the articles were sent up, other things have been offered by Mrs. C. I. Suckling, Mrs. H. McKinstry and A. L. Killaly.

The letter from the nurses follows:

"We want to thank you very much for the copies you sent of The Peterborough Examiner.

"The letter had wonderful results, and when on Saturday morning at 6 a.m. a car arrived at the Hospital and all the splendid parcels were piled up in the hall we felt as though Santa Claus had been here.

"We would like to tell how each article fits in, but that would be a lengthy undertaking so we just ask you to thank all the friends in Peterborough who sent us these gifts."

200 YEARS OF EXCELLENCE

So delightfully refreshing—
they said 200 years ago

"There's naught like a cup of Fry's for refreshment after the shops, my dear," they said in the long ago.

"It does buck one up"—"Just the thing after a hard day or a strenuous game," they say today.

Such have been the comments on Fry's Cocoa for two centuries—from women in many countries—in cottage and castle—in old lands and new.

The wonderful sustaining qualities of this famous beverage come from skilful preparation of the choicest beans. Its taste-tempting flavour is the result of 200 years of "knowing how."

Have you a tin of FRYS in the house, now? Every dealer sells it. Look for the familiar FRY yellow label—it is a guarantee of the utmost purity and value in Cocoa.

RESENT ARTICLE.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—An article upon the Red Cross Outpost Hospital at Apsley appeared in The Examiner of November 7th, which has caused much resentment to the residents in the district, and particularly to the ladies of the Red Cross Committee who are responsible for the equipment of the hospital. They consider the article an unwarranted reflection on their administrative ability, and strongly disapprove of the note of poverty and paucity of equipment stressed therein, and most emphatically deny that the "equipment is extremely limited." If there is at any time a shortage, the nurse has only to put in a requisition to the committee and it is at once supplied if considered necessary. It must be remembered that this is only a two-ward hospital, and an Outpost at that, and as such, for equipment, comfort, and completeness will compare favorably with other Red Cross Outposts. Last year including the purchase of the building, $2,132 was spent on improvements and equipment, and this year for the same purposes $320, with a further outlay of $500 for installation of sanitary conveniences now being constructed. The ladies strongly deprecate the allusions to Apsley as being isolated and a backwoods settlement, and fail to see that nurses from "cities like Toronto and Montreal and Hamilton have to adapt themelves to any unfavorable conditions." It is quite unnecessary to deprive the big cities of nursing talent to serve Apsley, as local qualified nurses are available. While the ladies deeply appreciate the very generous response that has been made to the article, they deplore the misconceptions of Apsley and its Outposts Hospital that may arise from its maudlin sentiment.

MRS. W. LEAN,
Pres., Ladies' Committee.

(Editor's Note: The Examiner was invited to make the appeal referred to; it did not of its own initiative organize the drive for supplies. Always willing to help in any good work. The Examiner was glad to give its columns for the worthy object. All the facts stated in the appeal were true, according to information given an Examiner representative who visited the hospital, and the generous donations are appreciated there).

CIRCLE HOLDS A BIRTHDAY

Members of X. L. Mission Band Gather in Wesley Hall.

OBSERVE ANNIVERSARY.

A delightful birthday party was celebrated on Friday evening in Wesley Hall, by the X.L. Mission Circle of St. James' United Church.

The invited guests were the members of the Circles and Young Women's Auxiliaries of the five United Churches of Peterborough, who brought as birthday gifts a thankoffering for the Circle, which has just attained its tenth anniversary.

Mrs. J. H. Dudgeon and Mrs. E. J. Wagar, the Circle leader, received and welcomed the guests.

A thankoffering service was held, at which Miss Nina Andrews presided.

Words of greeting were spoken by Miss Edith Wright, a charter member, who also gave a pithy and interesting resume of the Circle's ten years' work.

The devotional part of the program consisted of hymns, a Scripture lesson the 103rd Psalm, read by Miss Mabel Dulmage, and prayer was led by Mrs. Dudgeon.

A beautiful solo, "I'll go Anywhere," was sung by Miss Geneva Sedgwick, and Donald McIlwain contributed a very pleasing piano solo.

A thankoffering reading "William's and My Thankoffering," read by Mrs. Harold Bennett, was full of both pathos and humor. The offering was received and the dedicatory prayer offered by Connie Wagar.

Mrs. Ernest Kitney delighted the audience, as always, with her sweetly sung solo.

Miss Aileen Rose and Marjorie Dudgeons were the accompanists.

The young ladies were honored with the presence of Mrs. J. K.Moore, honorary president of Peterborough Presbyterial, and Mrs. A. F. Bookhout, the president.

In a short address, Mrs. Moore told how she had organized the X.L. Mission Circle in November, 1918, with a small but active mmebership. She spoke of her watchful care over this Circle, and her great interest in seeing it grow to its present splendid membership, and paid tribute to the faithfulness of both the members and their leader.

Mrs. Bookhout also brought birthday greetings and good wishes in a splendid address. The words of Jesus "Follow Me," were the keynote of her very helpful talk to the girls.

The second chapter of the study book, "Drums in the Darkness," was presented in her usual capable manner by Mrs. H. A. Bonney, who told this interesting story of life in Africa, without the aid of notes or book, excepting a map of Africa.

Rev. Mr. Dudgeon brought the program to a conclusion by giving a very short address in which he praised the work being done by all Mission Circles in general, and by the X.L. Circle in particular, to which he gave his wholehearted support Mr. Dudgeon dismissed the meeting with prayer and the benediction.

While the guests were being arranged in cosy circles for a social time together, the folding doors were drawn and a dainty table brought into view.

The white damask cloth was strewn with daisies, the Circle flower, and its colors, yellow, white and green, further decorated the table, by the use of green under yellow fluted bands of crepe paper finished with a large daisy at each end.

Silver candlesticks with yellow candles lighted the table, which was centred by the birthday cake; also decorated with ten tiny yellow candles.

The Circle girls were assisted at the tables by Mrs. Dudgeon, representing the Auxiliary, and Mrs. F. B. Elliott, leader of the Mission Band, who poured tea.

Mrs. F. D. Armstrong, Mrs. H. McCullough and Mrs. William Fell also assisted in the service of refreshments.

LEAGUE MEETING.

Pleasing Musical Numbers Given in Zion League Program.

(Examiner Correspondence)

PETHERICK'S CORNERS, Nov. 20.—"What the practice of stewardship would mean to the world" was the topic of Thursday evening's League service when George Brunton, citizenship convenor was in charge with fifty members present. Among the program numbers were a very interesting evotional talk by Rev. R. G. MacTavish, a reading by Miss Nellie Bennett, vocal duet, Misses Gladys Petherick and Laura Watson and a song service led by the president, Mr. Fred Barnum. The Whippet group is well in the lead now in the contest race with about 100 points over the Chevrolet group who are practically tied with the Stars. The Fords have dropped from third place during the last few meetings but are trying hard to stage a rally and pull up in the running again.

It is expected that several members of Zion League will attend the Echo Conference of Cobourg Presbytery at Castleton on Wednesday afternoon and evening. Similar events will be held at Elizabethville and Wooler on Tuesday and Thursday of this week. Rev. G. Gardiner of Castleton is president of Cobourg Young People.

Personals.

Among those from this community who attended the convention of Institute workers in Belleville on Thursday and Friday last were Mrs. J. Simpson, Mrs. Fred Barnum and Mrs. Ernest Irwin.

E. L. Anderson, conference convenor of citizenship, attended the annual supper meeting of the Bay Conference Executive at Belleville on Friday evening. Mr. G. H. Holton of that city is president of the Conference organization.

THE FINANCIAL SIDE.

In connection with the Old Home Week that is to be an outstanding Peterborough activity next year, it should be noted that it is expected to make the event self-sustaining.

There seems no reason why it should not be financed through the series of entertainment features that will be a big part of the program for the week.

If these features are made worth while—and they undoubtedly will be—they should produce enough revenue to make a balanced budget possible.

With careful planning and intelligent direction, no deficit need be feared.

It is true that in some other communities a financial loss has resulted from Old Home Week.

On the other hand, just as many cities have succeeded in making their reunions a financial success.

Like every other enterprise, Old Home Week depends upon the manner in which it is managed for its success or failure, and with proper co-operation and support from citizens generally, there is justification for looking forward to a most successful homecoming of Peterborough's old boys and girls next summer.

SWIFT JUSTICE.

Sentences inflicted upon the Toronto mail robbery gang and upon a pair of hold-up men in Chatham last week will do much to convince crooks that making war upon society is a losing game in this country.

The Toronto mail robbers, in spite of an elaborate attempt to set up alibis, have been sentenced to long terms in the penitentiary.

Justice was even swifter and more stern in the other case.

Two men entered a Chatham store and robbed the proprietor of $350.

In less than 20 hours the bandits had been arrested and were sentenced to fifteen years in the penitentiary, while the court also ordered that the lesson be further emphasized by the use of the lash upon the prisoners.

Crime pays nowhere, not even in the United States where the crook's chance of escaping legal punishment is much greater than here.

When it is attempted in this country the law-breaker can hope for nothing but a fair trial and swift punishment if he be convicted.

The fate of these particular gangs should not be without its interest for law enforcement officials across the border, as an example of swift and effective justice and a deterrent against crimes of violence.

THE APPLE SITUATION.

The old puzzle of why apple growing in years of good yield appears to be unprofitable to the Canadian farmer and yet the consumer pays for the fruit at the price of oranges, is brought up once more, this time by the Border Cities Star.

The fact that it is necessary to pay five cents to secure a good Canadian apple in a fruit store has always been one of the mysteries of the marketing system followed in this country.

It is true that our exports of apples to Great Britain are increasing, this year amounting so far to 183,063 barrels and 515,322 boxes, a much bigger total than in 1927.

But it is claimed that on account of a larger crop and the resultant lower prices that the business is not proving profitable for those engaged in it.

If that is the case, why is it the consumer pays for native-grown apples as much as he does for tropical fruits?

Why the strange situation of no profit for the fruit-growers and high prices for the consumer?

What happens in between that might serve to explain the mystery?

THE O.H.A.'S STRENGTH.

Despite the inroads of professional hockey promoters, the Ontario Hockey Association continues to be the biggest amateur sport organization in the Dominion, and the enthusiasm and interest shown at the 39th annual meeting on Saturday are welcome to all who realize what a part the association plays in the winter life of the Province.

From the viewpoint of entertainment alone the people of Ontario would be lost without the hockey matches that are such a prominent feature of the winter program.

Hockey under the O.H.A. banner not only contributes entertainment for the community and healthful recreation for the players, but it adds to civic spirit and builds up community pride.

The O.H.A. has a very real place in public interest in Ontario, and it is fortunate that its affairs have been so well managed for nearly two-score years that to-day finds the controlling body stronger and more powerful than ever.

The number of teams and of players coming within the jurisdiction of the association guarantees hockey in all parts of the Province, and presages a banner year for Canada's national winter pastime.

NO WARFARE HERE.

Some of our free trade newspapers are noting with glee that a large part of the applications made by manufacturers to the Tariff Board are for reductions in the rate of duty on certain articles. They see in this an evidence of a rift in the manufacturing group on the whole question of tariff protection; an evidence that industry is no longer united on the question of protection. They see, in short, a change in sentiment in industry in regard to the fiscal policy of the country.

The argument thus presented may indicate the complexity of the tariff problem, but it does not indicate that the viewpoint of industry is changing. Industry was never united on the details of the tariff. Individual manufacturers, it should be recognized, have from time to time applied for downward adjustments in tariff items, and this practice dates back to the imposition of the first customs duties. The applications, just as with applications for tariff increases, in the past were presented to the Minister of Finance and argued out before his advisers. Now the Tariff Board has brought all applications for changes in the tariff into the open, and the public hears in greater detail tariff discussions that have always gone on. There is nothing new in the analysis by the Government of proposals for tariff changes, but the method of analysis has changed.

Applications by manufacturers for downward reductions, it may be admitted, have increased in recent years. This is a normal development in the broadening out of Canadian industry. As Canadian industry develops there are yearly added to the list many articles that are finished products for one producer and raw material for another. Each producer is justified in seeking to protect his own position and few have been slow to take such steps as are necessary to achieve that measure of protection for their interests, whether that protection takes the form of tariff increase or tariff decrease. And as industry gains further in diversity, we may expect that differences of opinion between manufacturers on the question of the tariff that should be charged on any individual item will become more numerous. It is not wise or fair to assume that such differences of opinion represent any militant conflict between industries. It is not wise that anyone should attempt to stir up prejudice because of such applications. Opposing groups must place their cases before the high court of public opinion and the advisers of the Government and thus bring into effect in time the fairest compromise.

The tendency for tariffs to be reduced, a tendency that has been marked in Canada over a term of years, has, a little study shows, been a further factor in bringing to the fore applications by manufacturers for tariff reductions. As tariffs have altered the manufacturing and selling position of different groups, they have sought to adjust themselves to the new position by seeking relief through the instrument that brought about their difficulties. Thus, tariff reductions have had a tendency to work their way downwards through subsidiary products which might be broadly classified as raw materials. The usual assumption is that finally a place is reached by some producer who is adversely affected by tariff changes but has no one with whom he can share his added difficulties. This is true in some small measure, but the ultimate point is the primary producer, and the primary producer is more a mythical than an actual figure.

The assumption in some high tariff quarters that the manufacturer who seeks a tariff reduction on a certain item, which is part of his raw material, is disloyal to his class, is as absurd as the statement which free trader groups are attempting to broadcast, that such applications indicate internal warfare in Canadian industry on the broad general principle of a protective tariff. —Financial Post.

OCEAN VOYAGES BY AIR.

Sir John Salmond, air marshal for Great Britain, points out in Ottawa that on the success of the projected flight of the R-100 from England to Canada next spring will largely depend the future of inter-empire air communication. The dirigible, Sir John says, appears to offer the best possibility for ocean flights at present. The future, he says, will probably see multi-motored airplanes capable of making such voyages with safety, but during the next decade the lighter-than-air machine looks like the best bet.

A great mooring mast, provided by the Canadian Government, is now being constructed at Montreal for the accommodation of the R-100 and other airships. Premier King saw construction work in progress on the R-100 when he visited Great Britain last year and soon after announced that Canada would co-operate by constructing the necessary equipment to handle the big dirigible. It has been hoped that the voyage of the R-100 would be made in 1928, but for one reason or another the experiment has been postponed. Canadians—and the world in general—will look forward with the keenest interest to next spring's history-making voyage. Sometimes the fact is overlooked that a British dirigible was the first to make the trans-Atlantic crossing. That event took place some years ago when much less was known of flying than at present.

Though the recent round trip of the Graf Zeppelin was not a success from all standpoints, in that it demonstrated how comparatively powerless even this great machine is when at the mercy of ocean storms, most observers will be inclined to agree with Sir John Salmond's opinion as to the future of ocean flights. The dirigible, experimental as it still is, has been shown to be more trustworthy than the airplane for long distance trips across the perilous ocean wastes. In the R-100, now being finished in Great Britain, it may be taken for granted that many new ideas have been embodied. Perhaps the very factors that gave Dr. Hugo Eckener the greatest trouble a few weeks ago have been largely overcome in the British craft.—Border Cities Star.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

The United States inquiry into the loss of the Vestris does not inspire complete confidence in the motives that inspired it.

While municipal candidates elsewhere are beginning to make their appearance, there is no evidence of activity along this line in Peterborough.

The motor traffic death list in Toronto over the week-end indicates that any let-up in the safety campaign would be a mistake.

Old age pensions, it is apparent, will be more costly in Ontario than in any other part of the Dominion. But then perhaps the people of this Province are in a better position to meet such costs.

Despite the success of the Varsity Orphans, the smile will ultimately be "on the face of the Tiger" if past performances count for anything.

The Question Box

M.S.M.—Question — Seven men went on a deer hunt with the idea that if anything was shot they would share pound for pound. At the end of the first week two of the men left the camp before anything was shot. During the second week two deer were shot. How should the deer be divided.

Answer—There are only two ways to divide the deer fairly. The first is to divide the deer fairly into seven parts giving each man an equal amount. The second way is to divide the deer into 12 parts giving the men who only stayed one week one part and giving each of the other men two parts.

L.A.S.—Question — What is the population and area of Peterborough?

Answer—The population of Peterborough is 21,439 people and the area is 2,821 acres.

GOD'S MINUTE.

But it shall come to pass, that at evening time it shall be light.—Zach. 14:7.

We speak to Thee, O Lord, our Father, not as aliens and strangers, but as children of the household. Thou hast given unto us many and priceless tokens of Thy favor. We have felt the touch of Thy hand upon our head and the joy of Thy benediction in our heart. Cause Thy face to shine upon the dark places through which we may be called to pass this day and may the clouds be lifted; or, if the darkness be better for us according to Thy wisdom and Thy will, then be Thy promises a glorious beacon and Thy fidelity a star, and may we be made to feel that it is better to hold on to Thy hand in the dark than to walk alone in the light. If we are not all that Thou dost intend us to be; if we are not in harmony with Thee; if we want for ourselves, and not for others; if our service be the hollow service of habit or the shallow service of display, show us how we are disappointing Thee, and starving ourselves, and robbing our fellows, and putting far off the one divine event toward which the whole creation moves, the kingdom of God in human hearts and the union of the man in the bonds of righteousness and peace. Especially regard the unsaved. Those who touch us on every side, whose hearts are kept back from Thee. May our lives be so clean and so true that God's cause may ever have a witness and an evangel in the influence we daily exert. Amen.

A Thought

TO SWAY MEN

In order to sway men, inspire their confidence, convince their minds and loosen their purse-strings, you must be clean-cut in your manner, clear, non-technical and persuasive in your speech. But that is not enough. The foundation—the core of your appeal—is hidden behind the expressionless face of your prospect. Your plea must be constructed on and around his pride, his affection and his desires. How sincerely you believe this can be done and should be done, not only for his own sake but for the benefit of those who are dependent on him, with determine the degree of skill with which you find yourself doing it. True salesmanship is not primarily a matter of intellectual domination, it is also an affair of the heart.—Great West Life Bulletin.

WESTWARD HO!

All good Canadians realize that Canada is a country to be proud of, but how many however, have tried to visualize the remarkable variety and vastness of this far-flung Dominion? It is only through travel that the immensity and outstanding natural beauty of our great heritage is realized. Travelling westward to the Pacific Coast we pass mighty rushing rivers innumerable lakes and dense lumbering regions thence across the wide prairies and through the magnificent Rockies a reviation of peerless scenic grandeur—then Vancouver and Victoria, those gems of the north Pacific, where the warm Pacific winds made year round golf possible.

Travel facilities are of the best. Every day the year round "The Vancouver Express" widely known Canadian Pacific transcontinental train, leaves Toronto at 9.00 p.m., making the through trip to Vancouver in 4 days. Schedule provides for good connections to all western points and any Canadian Pacific agent will gladly arrange for reservations and tickets on request.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, Nov. 20 (Associated Press).—Enlarged domestic supplies of wheat, together with an increase of the amount on ocean passage, tended more or less to weaken the wheat market yesterday. Liquidating sales on the part of holders of December delivery wheat contracts counted also as a bearish influence.

Closing quotations on wheat were unsettled at ¼c to 7-8c net decline. Corn finished ¼c to 5-8c off, oats a shade to ¼c up, and provisions varying from 10c setback to a rise of 20 cents.

Although wheat prices at the beginning had an upward tilt yesterday, selling pressure that quickly appeared led to a downward trend throughout most of the remainder of the time. Early appearances of comparative strength were ascribed to word of decreasing stocks at Liverpool and of unfavorable harvest weather in Argentina. On the other hand, world shipments continued heavy, and were shown to be at nearly record figures, with supplies on ocean passage augmented 1,168,000 bushels in the last week and now totalling 66,088,000 bushels, compared with 57,406,000 bushels last year.

Toward the end of the day hope of any important rally gave out, for at least the time being, after announcement that the United States wheat visible supply had piled up 1,333,000 bushels increase for the week, whereas both last week and last year a decrease was shown.

Under such circumstances, northwest selling out of December holdings became more and more noticeable, especially as export business yesterday in wheat from North America was estimated at but 400,000 bushels, mostly Canadian. Little heed was paid to detailed reports indicating that a striking proportion of 1928 wheat production in Canada will be unmillable, being graded as number six and feed.

Official predictions of clear weather ahead for the corn belt proved to be more than a market offset, for prevailing moist conditions which have interfered with husking and hauling of corn. Besides, Chicago receipts of corn yesterday were liberal, 374 cars, against 86 cars a year ago. Late estimates were current that the 1928 European corn crop is 104,000,000 bushels less than last year and is below half of the 1926 production. Commission houses were fairly good buyers of oats future deliveries.

Provisions reflected upturns in the value of hogs.

ANNIVERSARY IS CELEBRATED

Westwood Presbyterian Church Closed First Year of Activities.

$200 CONTRIBUTED.

WESTWOOD, Nov. 19 (Examiner Staff Correspondence).—The Presbyterian Church at Westwood marked its first anniversary on Sunday. Just a little more than a year ago, the cornerstone of the new building was laid with all the customary ceremony. In a short time after that, the congregation was worshipping in the building. The services on Sunday marked the end of a prosperous year, and were services of thanksgiving for the blessings of the past and prayer for the prosperity of the future. The Rev. Walter MacLeary, who was one of the leading factors in the building of the new church, was present, and took part in the services. For the morning service, the Rev. David Thompson, D.D., was the officiating clergyman. He took as his text, the twenty-fifth verse of the hundred and eighteenth Psalm, "Save now, I beseech Thee, O Lord: O Lord, I beseech Thee, send now prosperity."

In the evening, the pulpit was occupied by the Rev. Mr. Lewis of Toronto. He took as the basis for his sermon, the twenty-third verse of the twenty-first chapter of Matthew, "By what authority doest thou these things?"

At the morning service, the special music was in the form of an anthem, "Glorious City," by the choir; a solo by Mr. Grieves, "Jesus Understands." In the evening Mrs. Birdsall sang "The Holy City." Mr. Grieves of Peterborough also sang a solo and a duet with Mr. MacLeary, former student minister of the church. The special offering at both services amounted to more than two hundred dollars.

GENERAL SOS WAS FIRST CALL

Records of Wireless Companies Show Vestris Made No Report to Land.

INVESTIGATION RESUMED.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20 (Canadian Press).—The records of two commercial wireless telegraph companies produced in court yesterday indicated that the steamer Vestris made no report to land that she was in trouble at sea until after sending out a general SOS.

In several instances after the ship had begun to keel it was also shown, the Vestris reported "nothing to communicate" to a sister ship approaching.

Officials of the Radio Marine Corporation and the Marconi Wireless Company occupied the stand for the greater part of the fourth day's session of the Federal inquiry into the sinking of the Vestris off the Virginian Capes a week ago yesterday with the loss of more than one hundred lives.

Nothing they testified indicated the captain of the ship delayed the SOS until 10 o'clock Monday morning, almost a full day after he had had to hove the Vestris to, an any authority other than his own.

Subpoenaed Radio Records

United States Commissioner Francis Tuttle, conducting the inquiry before United States Commissioner Franes A. O'Neill, had subpoenaed the radio records to determine the truth or falsity of rumors that during those long hours when the Vestris was keeling over Captain William Carey had asked for instructions from shore as to the advisability of asking aid and had been told to make every effort to get along without a distress call.

The only other important witness of the day was Herbert G. Welland, 23-year-old third mate of the Vestris, who had charge of launching the lifeboats. His testimony of the launching was at striking variance with previous testimony of passengers and members of the crew, that inefficiency was shown in getting the boats into the water and that they were found to be unseaworthy when they were launched.

Investigated Leak

The fourth and only other witness of the day was a 20-year-old steward in the second cabin, who told of being assigned to investigate a leak in the side of the ship.

At the close of yesterday's session the Federal Attorney said that he still had some radio records to be produced, but he intimated that he believed those already read from the stand were fairly conclusive evidence that Captain Carey withheld his SOS as long as he did solely on his own responsibility, and not in submission to instructions from ashore.

The first witness yesterday was Arthur J. Cotigan of the Radio Marine Corporation, who had conducted a search through the files of several of his company's costal stations. He read the log of the station at Tuckerton, N.J., and such parts of that of the Chatham, Mass., station as were not duplications of the Tuckerton messages. The logs of the other stations, he said, merely duplicated the Tuckerton and Chatham logs.

The detailed reading of the logs showed that on Sunday, November 11, the day the Vestris had to heave to and began to tip, there was no record of any message from the ship to its line offices or from the line to the ship. There was no record of any interchange between the two until after the SOS, when the line wirelessed the ship for details, and the ship replied with a brief description of its perilous condition.

The reading of the log gave as terse a description of the disaster as there has been, in the following entries.

9.10 a.m., Monday—The Vestris informed the Tuckerton station that it was keeling over and might need help. Tuckerton broadcast the message as a "CQ" stand-by warning to all ships.

EMISSARIES FROM FAR LAND AT NEW YORK

Four Natives of Aleutian Islands Not Hindered By Quota Laws.

$20.00 FARE.

From Metropolis of Past To Metropolis of the Present.

NEW YORK, N.Y., Nov. 19 (Canadian Press).—Four travellers from distant parts who might have been affected by the United States quota against alien immigrants have entered New York without hindrance by border officials. As natives of the Aleutian Islands, midway between Alaska and Siberia, they have come as ambassadors from that part of the North American continent which, over a thousand years ago, was the centre of population as New York City is to-day. They come from a metropolis of the past to the metropolis of the present.

True, the population of the Aleutian Islands was at not time reckoned in the millions. But when it was approaching the thousands the site of the present City of New York was empty of all habitation. Perhaps an occasional Indian passed through the trees and scrub. Otherwise there was nothing. In fact the Aleuts were totally unaware that such a spot existed or that is was ever going to exist.

Due partly to these circumstances and the changes that time has wrought, the four emissaries from a far land, landing at Prince Rupert, B.C., travelled together across Canada on the Canadian National Railways for the insignificant fare of $20. They were suitably accommodated, carefully protected, and throughout their trip aroused curiosity in whomever came into contact with them.

During the entire journey they never moved. The tribal leader, accompanied by a hunter, a seamstress and a baby sat immovile with their knees pulled up close to their breasts. This, explains Harold McCracken, leader of the Stoll-McCracken expedition into the north on a search for relics of an early Mongolian race, is a characteristic posture of the Aleuts. The four natives who made the journey to New York as excess baggage had been buried in that position over a thousand years ago; they had retained it all these years as mummies on the top of a barren rock between Siberia and Alaska. It was, there, not unnatural that they should continue unmoved even though they were traversing on their journey to New York, not only a great expanse of sea and continent, but the unbridgeable gap of the centuries.

The four Mongolian mummies, regarded as invaluable links with the past history of the continent since their discovery by the expedition in the far north, are reposing in the American Museum of Natural History where their age and the nature of the period in which they lived will be investigated by specialists of the department.

CALLES TO HEAD NEW ORGANIZATION

Job Will Be the Political Organization of All Mexican People.

MEXICO CITY, Mex., Nov. 19. — (Canadan Press). — Plutarco Elias Calles, country school teacher who became President and declined to be dictator, may go to teaching school agan.

He will not be called professor, if he accepts the new job offered him when he leaves the presidency, November 30. His school will not be listed in any department of education. His title will be head of a new political party, his job the political organization of the people.

But, actually, it will be a new kind of school teaching—all the Mexican republic for a class-room; all its fifteen million inhabitants as pupils. The blackboard will be the election ballot. The lesson Calles will try to teach will be that enormous and complicated one of democratic constitutional government and political party organization.

Calles has been asked to become the leader and director of a proposed new "Gran Partido Nacional," dedicated to preserve the "revolutionary principles" of the Obregon-Calles governments of the past eight years, to coordinate the various "revolutionary parties," to argue with political opponents and incorporate within their group conservative minorities, to teach the people what politics based upon freedom of principles and democratic elections means—and to bring about such political campaigns, elections and government.

That is the ambitious plan. Calles is actually, although not in these words, being asked to organize and direct a school of government for all the people of Mexico, and to be professor of applied politics. The man they ask to do this taught his first school as a lad in Sonora, in a one-room dobe shack with a few dozen Indian boys and girls as pupils.

Calles' new job, if he accepts it, will be to get fifteen million people, many illiterate, and a bunch of ambitious political bosses and military chieftains to apply, for the good of the country, the principles of his farewell speech to congress. In that speech he said, in effect, that Mexico must end the tradition of centuries that only a "caudille" or military overlord, only a "man on horseback," only an iron-fisted army boss can govern Mexico. He said Mexico must learn and practice the ways of constitutional government, of democratic elections and orderly political processes. In essence he said Mexico must learn to be governed by ballots, not bullets and bayonets, to elect men by arguments, not armies, to determine political issues by principles and parties, not armed uprisings and revolutions.

SUPREME COURT TO REVIEW CASE

Will Decide Rights of Canadians Crossing Boundary To Work.

COVERS WHOLE FIELD.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20 (Canadian Press).—At the request of the government, the Supreme Court here yesterday reversed a pervious decision and consented to decide whether persons domiciled in Canada can cross the boundary to work, or in search of employment without passports and visaes or otherwise complying with United States immigration laws.

The court had recently declined to review a case in which the Circuit Court of Appals for New York had held that Mary Cook and Antonio Danelon had the right, under the Jay Treaty of 1794, to enter the United States at Niagara Falls and Buffalo without passports and visas, both being domiciled in Canada.

This case will now be reviewed.

The government presented an argument explaining the difficulties which the Labor Department would encounter under the decision in the enforcement of the immigration laws. The government contended that the decision, if permitted to remain, would remove all bars and throw the gates wide open for an unlimited inflow of aliens which could not be restricted.

Particular emphasis was laid upon the danger of a great influx of Oriental races now excluded by United States immigration laws, the government claiming that under the dicision persons otherwise excluded from the United States could take up residences in Canada and freely cross the border.

The court reversed its position, which it seldom does, announcing that it would pass upon later the merits of the entire controversy.

This means that the whole field will be covered by the highest court which will determine to what extent if any persons domiciled in Canada are subject to the United States immigration laws in entering this country even though the crossing of the border may be based on the claim of unemployment here.

The deceased, a commercial traveller by occupation, was in the prime of life, and his sudden demise was a great shock, not only to his relotives but to the many friends and school mates of former years at Burnbrae. ROBERT HAMILTON LITTLE.

LAKEFIELD, Nov. 20.—The funeral of the late Robert Hamilton Little was held on Thursday afternoon last from his late residence at Pinegrove to the Regent Street United Church, of which the deceased was a member. The church was filled with the large crowd who came from town and country to honor a friend and a good citizen. Rev. S. A. Kemp officiated, assisted by Rev. T. M. Wesley and Rev. J. B. McCormack. During the service two favorite hymns were sung and Mrs. McMillen and Miss Frances Fairbairn sang "And the Sun Shall Never Go Down" as a duet.

Mr Kemp took his text from the 18th verse of the 20th chapter of the 1st Book of Samuel, "Thou shalt be missed because thy seat shall be empty." This passage is contained in a story which is one of the greatest examples of love and devotion in the Old Testament, the story of David and Jonathan. Saul hated David, although his son was his friend and David agreed to absent himself from the feast of the new moon which was being observed by Saul, and the firends are saying good-bye.

Some are leaving us and going on to the next world and it is appropriate to say that they are missed in the congregation, on the street and in the home. Some people will not be long remembered because they have lived for themselves alone, but others, like our deceased friend, leave seats of service behind and we miss the service rendered in the days of the flesh. Life is brief even though it reaches the three score years and ten which is man's alloted portion, this brief if measured by years but not if measured by service Failure to render service to the world means we are soon forgotten, but a useful life is remembered for many years.

Robert Little's life was of the latter kind; he was always cheerful and helpful, always ready to lend a helping hand to a friend or neighbor or to anyone who needed aid. He was faithful to the church, a devoted husband and father, and a high type of citizen, and in church, home life, lodge and community, he will be missed and his seat will be empty.

Following immediately came the Masonic service in charge of W O. Morrison, W.M., which was in itself an impressive and reverent ceremony. Then to the strains of "Safe in the Arms of Jesus," played softly by Mrs. H. E. Moore, the congregation passed out of the church. The pallbearers were Messrs. Albert Darling, Alex. Graham, G. A. Graham, J. W. Ridpath, R. Spence and C. Thomson.

The cortege then proceeded from the church to Lakefield cemetery, where burial took place.

For thirty-five years Mr. Little had resided at Pinegrove, and during that time had many friends in the village and vicinity, who found in him a true and honorable friend. He was one of a quartette who made up a congenial fishing club, and "Bob" was one of the most popular members. He also belonged to the Payne Hunt Club, which made its annual rendezvous at Pakesley, and there too, he was known as a "good pal," taking his part with an unfailing good humor that bad weather and poor luck could not disturb.

ST. JOHN'S CLUB ELECTS OFFICERS

C. Coleman Will Head Church Organization For Coming Year.

That the Men's Club of St. John's Church is a success was certainly proved last night at their second annual meeting. The club begins this year with a clean slate and a large membership of enthused workers.

Last night's meeting was opened by the President, J. Cridland, pronouncing the Lord's Prayer in unison with the members. The minutes of the last meeting were read and adopted. The secretary then read a statement of the receipts and expenditures for the past year which was adopted.

The election of the officers for the year took place. A committee had been appointed to pick out the best possible candidates and the following were chosen:

President—C. Coleman.

Vice-President—W. Ashby.

Secretary—G. E. Groombridge.

Treasurer—R. N. Stuart.

And a committee of Messrs. Lemmings, W. Davis, G. Gore, Sr., J. Marshall and W. G. Howden.

Mr. Lyons moved that this list be adopted. This was seconded by Mr. Kent, and was readily acknowledged by those present.

The new president, Mr. C. Coleman, then took the chair and in a few words thanked the members for appointing him to this position.

The speaker for the evening was the Rev. Mr. Bousfield, of St. Luke's church, and he chose as the title for his short talk, "Botanical Meanderings." He gave a most interesting address on some of his experiences while in pursuit of flowers.

"The pursuit of flowers is not always a pleasure but there are many ups and downs in connection with it, especially when one spends hours tramping with wet feet through the country," said the speaker. Mr. Bousfield described the habits of many flowers, especially the orchids, lady slippers, forget-me-nots, violets, trilliums and ferns.

After the address several of the men asked him about some of the flowers and then a hearty vote of thanks was moved to Mr. Bousfield by Mr. Lyons, and seconded by Mr. Dayton.

After indulging in some refreshments the meeting closed with the singing of the doxology.

Voice of the People

WHAT FAITH RESTS UPON.

To call a critical view of God and His works, of man, his rise and future and of the intimate weaknesses and longings of human nature "religion," is to misuse the word and to give it a false meaning.

It is plain that a religion to be a "belief" must be clear and definite, and as "revealed" as the existence of a father or mother to a son or daughter.

If that is true, and it clearly is true, how could a "critical" view of the probable existence of a father or mother be called "belief" in that existence, or love or faith?

Yet, that is the condition of mind of more than half of the evangelical ministry in good standing to-day.

Good standing? With whom? Not surely with God, whom they criticize, and if not with Him, why dignify their ideas with the name of "religion?"

Now, it is clearly unthinkable that God would not reveal Himself spiritually to us as He has done physically. No one disputes the existence of a Supreme Power as the Creator of the Universe. The supremacy is too evident to need proof. It is self-evident, the most powerful of all proofs, and if it is self evident in nature, why can it not be so considered in the spiritual universe?

Moral knowledge and consequent moral responsibility, we realize. That knowledge and responsibility constitute that of which the spiritual world is made. All that is implied in and called "religion" in the spiritual world, and the spiritual world itself, are just as much proved by self evidence as is the material universe. There is an exact parity of reasoning.

Further proofs which some demand from time to time of things, such as the verity of the Bible, we get in the same way from our assurance that it is so. There can be no other final understanding of the works of God, in either the material or the spiritual universe than assurance. It all depends on "assurance" with us.

Evolution has nothing whatever to do with the matter. The endless volumes written in support of evolution, the wild diatribes of ministerial pulpiteers attacking by means of it, are all sounding brass. The peace of God is past all understanding.

If we care to look further we shall find that all knowledge is founded on assumptions, otherwise called assurances or self-evident principles.

Mathematics, the exact science, is founded wholly on "assurances." All science is similarly based upon self-evidence or things taken for granted, because they cannot be proved.

Hence we see that there is no attack by Science upon Religion, or any other form of assurance or faith. Everything, without exception, is founded in the last analysis on the same thing—assurance or assumption.

Therefore, the noise made by some people concerning the discoveries of science and the consequent necessity of altering or revising our Faith, is entirely unwarranted, and no one is more surprised at it than scientists themselves.

All the discoveries that have been made or can be made cannot change the ultimate basis of human knowledge, whether that knowledge be called science or religion. The basis is always the same, assurance, self-evidence or faith, which mean the same thing. We may have wider and more varied experiences and may grow in knowledge in that way, but the ultimate basis remains the same, and cannot be altered. It is time, therefore, that faith-wreckers and Bible-wreckers ceased to impose upon a credulous people.

This unproven proof is said by the philosophers maintaining it, Plato, Kant and other great names, to be innate or born in us. The other and opposing school of philosophy, maintains that all knowledge comes from experience. But those who have not the experience, nevertheless have the ideas!

A complete distinction, however, must be made between ideas such as that of God, which cannot be innate, but must be revealed, since the finite cannot have the idea of the Infinite, and ideas which are the basis of human knowledge.

PRINCIPAL CHARACTERS IN WRECK OF VESTRIS

Of the many stories of courage arising from the wreck of the Vestris off the coast of Virginia, one of the pluckiest is that of Mrs. Clara Ball, stewardess, and P. A. Dana, passenger, who kept their hold on the hull of a life-boat for 22 hours. Photo marked (3) shows seamen of the American Shipper rescuing Mrs. Ball and Dana, who are shown in (1). A picture of Captain Wm. Carey, who went down with his ship, is reproduced in (2). The photo (4) shows James Ray, assistant steward, with "Tiger Lil," mascot of the sunken ship, both rescued; (5) Leonard Licorish, colored member of the Vestris' crew, who assisted in the rescue of 20 persons.

NINE SEATS IN DOUBT MAJORITY ASSURED

Coalition Government Under Premier Stanley Bruce Has Forty-four Seats.

MELBOURNE, Australia, Nov. 20.—(Canadian Press Cable). — Nine seats of the 75 in the house of representatives remain doubtful following the Australian general elections of Saturday. It was reported last night, but the coalition government under Premier Stanley Bruce is certain to have a good working majority. The standing of parties will be probably: Government (Country and Nationalist parties) 44; combined opposition, mostly Labor, 31; majority over government, 13.

Ten percent of the voters in the state of Victoria numbered their senate votes wrongly in the confusion caused by the sudden death of one of the government candidates, Major-General Forsyth, it is stated. As a result 90,000 votes for Senators are informal. This adds to the difficulty of compiling the returns from the polling for 12 of the 36 Senate seats. It is believed the Labor party may win eight seats—three in New South Wales, where most of their six parliamentary gains were registered; three in South Australia one in Victoria and one in Western Australia.

FIGURES IN ARMY CRISIS

Owing to the critical condition of General Booth's health there is a possibility of the high council of the Salvation Army declaring the generalship vacant and appointing a successor. If this action should be taken there are grounds for believing that the new general would not be a member of the Booth family. If General Booth should die, however, before such action is taken his nomination of a successor would stand and it is thought his choice would be either Mrs. Bramwell Booth or Commander Evangeline Booth of New York. The high council's choice, it is thought, would be Commissioner E. J. Higgins, at present chief of the staff. ABOVE are 1, Gen. Bramwell Booth; 2, Mrs. Bramwell Booth; 3, Commander Evangeline Booth; 4, Commissioner Higgins.

"TOUGH" COMPLETES PUZZLING JOURNEY

Building Mascot of Aleutian Islands Expedition Underwent Strange Adventures.

NEW YORK, November 20. Canadian Press. — There is one member of the Stoll-McCracken expedition recently returned from the Arctic regions where in the Aleutian Islands they unearthed four mummies of an ancient Mongolian race, who is unfeignedly glad to be back in New York. His name is Tough, his species British bulldog, and his place in the expedition nominally that of mascot.

Tough has always had a taste for the soft things of life. The glow of the evening hearth fire, the softness of sofa cushions, undisturbed tranquility of an apartment dweller in New York city—these weer the very stuff of his existence during three years as his master's dog. Harold McCracken, his owner and leader of the lately returned party of scientists and adventurers, has a fondness for animals.

In April last—April 16 to be precise—the pleasant routine of an established life was interrupted. For no apparent reason Tough found himself with a chain on his collar and a muzzle on his mouth staring at the blank walls of a baggage car. He was bound for Montreal and Prince Rupert and the Aleutian Islands. These details came to him gradually.

At the Canadian border he was required to produce a pedigree to prove his right to pass through the Dominion. He was also put under $500 bond to travel to Prince Rupert to board the "Morrissey" for the north. These indignities Tough bore in silence. He licked his lips and for the five days it took to cross Canada on the Canadian National Railways, sat back and gazed pensively at mail bags. After five days he decided that mail bags, wherever they came from, and wherever they were going, looked much alike. He was fed regularly, and as regularly at divisional points, forced out of the car, and made to walk up and down the station platforms held securely by his chain, while the native dogs everywhere about performed in perfect freedom the multifarious tasks of a dog's busy life.

Saw First Hen.

At Unalaska on the Alaskan peninsula Tough saw his first hen. There were no hens in the New York apartment houses. The hen had a number of chicks at her feet. Tough was quite interested. But though this was the first hen that he had seen, he was by no mean the first dog the hen had seen. First, she lit on his shoulders, then fell farther back on to his rump. She had a remarkably facile beak. Largely because of this Tough developed an unwonted agility in his hindquarters which brought him far away from the other members of his party.

When he had escaped the scourge of the hen of the quick wits and sharp beak, he was confronted with another strange object. A cow. Tough lost no time in determining his course of action this time. When he had chased the cow through the one street of Unalaska twice the Eskimos threatened to shoot him. They had been proud of the cow's milking qualities.

Tough welcomed his return to shipboard life. For a while it seemed restful. That was until the "Morrissey" drew up close to the Diomede Islands. When he was put ashore for a respite he felt but a shadow of his former self, and was considerably paler. The reason was that the wind always blows quite stiffly about the Diomedes. Eskimos made fun of the dog who had "his nose frozen off." Twice he was menaced by other dogs who smelt strongly of the decayed walrus flesh that was their food.

A Story of Revenged Love, by Ruby M. Ayres

CHAPTER XXXVI

Chittenham answered Julie with kisses. He could find no words. Was it all over? Or had the storm clouds cleared away just for a short respite before gathering again with fresh force?

He thrust the thought from him.

The present was his, and with Julie safe in his arms the future did not seem a thing greatly to be dreaded.

"Some day we will go back to Switzerland, Julie," he said. "Some day you and I will climb to the top of the world again and see how beautiful it really is." He bent and kissed her. "I suppose I really ought to go," he said ruefully. "Do you know that it is long past two o'clock?"

Julie smiled.

"Don't let me keep you against your will," she whispered.

"I have a tremendous will," Chittenham declared.

She sighed.

"You must have—or I should not be where I am now," she said almost resentfully.

He raised her in his arms, looking at her searchingly.

"You're not sorry?"

She shook her head.

"No, but I think I'm a little—ashamed—" she answered in such a low voice that he could hardly catch what she said.

"Don't say that, Julie!" Chittenham kissed the word passionately from her lips. "I am the only one who should feel ashamed."

She would not allow that.

"And, anyway, I want to forget it now," she urged generously. "We're going to be so happy—some say," she added as he did not speak.

"Soon, very soon, my darling" he answered vehemently.

He pressed her cheek to his shoulder, and for a time they were both silent, then she whispered:

"Giles—did you ever love—your wife as much as you love me?"

He took his arms away from her almost roughly.

"I never loved her at all—I told you. It was just a mistake."

"You couldn't have thought so at the time or you wouldn't have married her." Julie answered with a catch in her voice. There was a short silence, then she took his hand. "Oh, I'm jealous—jealous!" she whispered sobbingly.

"Julie!"

He paced away from her agitatedly and came back. He wanted to tell her about Sadie—he longed to put everything truthfully before her, and yet with each moment it seemed to be increasingly difficult.

He knew that already Julie was overwrought, and now she had made this pathetic admission of jealousy, was it likely that she would be in a sufficiently understanding mood to listen to the truth?

"Listen to me, my dear—" he began desperately, but Julie stopped him.

"I don't want to hear anything more. I wish I hadn't mentioned her. I want to forget her. I want to forget that there has ever been anyone in—in the place that is really mine."

"Oh, my darling!"

"Don't look so sad," she broke in quickly. "It's all forgotten. If only you will always love me best—"

He answered her with passionate words and kisses, but in his heart there was a feeling of impending trouble. Supposing, as Julie had said, Sadie refused to give him his freedom?

"She must—she shall," he told himself fiercely. "She has so often said that she has no use for me.

It was nearly three when he left the flat, and the streets were silent and deserted as he walked away through the darkness, pausing for a moment to look back at the lighted window where Julie stood with her face pressed to the pane to catch a last glimpse of him. She was not wholly happy any more than he was, he knew—the shadow of trouble to come was still touching them both. He wished with all his heart that he could have taken her away that night and so have forced Sadie's hand.

But he could not do it—Julie was too fine—too beloved. The last hours seemed like a dream to him when he turned away; he felt as if he were walking on air through a sleeping world wherein his own footsteps were the only sound to break the silence.

Only his own footsteps?

No, he was wrong there, for now behind him was the sound of other steps, a little slower than his, and yet in some strange way seeming deliberately to be dogging him.

Chittenham glanced over his shoulder, irritatingly conscious of being followed.

Some yards behind him he could see the dark outline and shadow of a man's figure.

Being followed? How absurd.

He felt annoyed with himself for his own suspicion; he struck off at right angles across the road.

But he could hear those following footsteps, and with an almost childish curiosity to reassure himself, he stopped abruptly and listened again.

The footsteps instantly stopped also, continuing directly he himself moved on.

A taxicab on the look-out for a late fare turned a corner, and Giles hailed it. At all events it would put an end once and for all to his interested follower. As he slammed the door he glanced backwards along the road the way he had come.

The man was passing beneath a street lamp, and in the sudden light his figure seemed strangely familiar, although for the moment Chittenham could not place the resemblance.

The taxicab moved away and then all at once he knew—it was Lombard! That was the resemblance he had seen—Harry Lombard!

For an instant he was conscious of angry premonition. What the devil did it mean?—then he laughed at himself. The idea was preposterous! Why should Lombard have followed him? He remembered their last meeting—and Lombard's detestable insinuations.

Chittenham's face grew grim.

Supposing Lombard had been waiting outside Julie's flat during the past five hours?

He leaned forward and tapped sharply on the window, calling to the driver.

"Turn round and go back the way we came—just for half a mile or until I tell you to stop, and drive slowly."

The driver obeyed. He was used to queer passengers, and anyway, it meant a bigger fare.

But, although Chittenham sat well forward and kept a sharp look-out on either side of the road he saw no more of that slouching following figure.

By the time he got back to his hotel he was almost persuaded that he had been mistaken. But he could not sleep. The memory of Julie kept him awake. He had had very little real hope of a reconciliation when he waited for her that evening in the flat, and now she was his.

He tried to visualize the look in her eyes as they had kissed goodnight, but somehow all he could see was Lombard's sneering face. When he tried to recall her voice he could only hear Lombard's. It was horrible to know that this man whom he once called his friend should so turn and rend him. He wished he had given him the thrashing he so richly deserved; his hands ached with the desire to take him by the throat and stifle his lies.

But for Julie's sake he would not have listened to him for one moment—but for Julie whom he adored—

When Chittenham was dressing in the morning his mother rang through on the 'phone.

"Is that you, darling?" Her voice sounded plaintive.

Giles answered grimly:

"It all depends which darling you mean."

"Oh, Giles, how naughty of you!" She had taken this as a compliment, and there was a ripple of laughter in her voice. "Of course, I mean you! What other darling could I mean?"

"I should not like to bet on it."

"You're a shocking tease! I only rang up to ask if you will come this afternoon."

"Come where?"

"You can't have forgotten! You know I'm having a tea-party."

"Oh, of course! With the spooks!"

"Giles, dear!"

"Why do you want me to come? You know I'm an unbeliever."

There was a little hesitation before the plaintive voice came again.

"To tell you the truth I'm just a tiny bit nervous! I've never been mixed up in anything of the kind before, and I thought with you there—"

"The evil spirits couldn't get you, eh? Don't worry!" Giles laughed. "I meant to come anyway."

"My darling boy!"

"My darling mother!"

"And Giles, in case you're angry at meeting her again after what happened the other night—Miss Farrow is coming! I know I said I wouldn't have her in the house any more, but, after all, one must be broad-minded."

Giles guffawed.

"It takes all sorts to make a world," his mother went on. "So you will be nice and polite to her, won't you, dear?"

"I think I can safely promise you that."

"Dear boy! And, Giles—"

"Mother?"

"You won't do anything to upset the meeting, will you? I am told that Chryer is so sensitive, that he must have perfect sympathy and understanding."

Giles said something inaudible.

"Of course he's really quite wonderful!" his mother went on. "He told Lady Scather the other day that she was going abroad very soon, and yesterday she went to Monte Carlo."

"Wonderful!"

She gave a self-conscious laugh.

"Giles! I'm just dying to know if he can tell me anything?"

"I am sure he will if you pay him enough. Do you mind if I ring off now? I'm shaving. I'll be round about four."

He smiled to himself as he hung up the receiver. It seemed absurd that his mother should have thought it necessary to ask him to be polite to Julie!

Yet she was fully justified, for only two nights ago in his passionate rage and anger he had felt that he could never sufficiently punish Julie for making him suffer so much.

But, as she had said, it was all over now; there would be no more misunderstandings—unless— But he put the thought of his wife from him. He could manage Sadie, and she had no use for him. No doubt she would welcome this chance of freedom.

He had hardly finished dressing when a message came to say that Lombard was downstairs waiting to see him.

"Tell him to come up."

BUTTER AND EGGS.

TORONTO, November 20. — A strong upward price tendency in egg prices and an irregular, dull movement in butter were characteristics of wholesale produce trading in the Toronto market yesterday. Following the firm trend of egg values during the past week, yesterday's advance was not entirely unexpected, and wholesalers' quotations to the retail trade were from one to three cents higher on fresh extras and firsts at the close. The extreme scarcity of fresh extras is becoming increasingly apparent, and it was stated yesterday that a large proportion of wholesale receipts are grading as firsts, or even lower grades. Although there was no change in the quotations to country shippers, the market remaining at a range of 58 to 60 cents a dozen for fresh extras, delivered in Toronto, wholesalers asked 68 to 70 cents a dozen from the retail trade for fresh extras in cartons, and loose supplies ruled within a general range of 66 to 67 cents, with firsts at 60 to 64 cents. Commenting on the fact that no change is shown in buying levels, one wholesaler remarked that the extreme scarcity of extra receipts rendered quotations nominal, in so far as yesterday's trading was concerned.

Storage eggs which appear to be coming into consumptive use to an increasing extent, were quoted at unchanged levels of 45 to 48 cents a dozen for storage extras in cartons. Storage firsts were offered to the retail trade at 41 to 42 cents.

Butter Irregularly Easier.

Conflicting movements in the butter market reflected a difference of opinion as to the outlook for storage supplies and the arrival of New Zealand butter. In some quarters a firm undertone was evidenced, and appeared to be based chiefly on the belief that the domestic situation is likely to be the dominating factor for some weeks to come. In other market quarters the belief that additional New Zealand supplies are being engaged for Canadian account was a bearish influence. In the extremely dull movement during the session prices failed to definitely establish the week's opening level, but the majority of trading was carried on at prices between 40½ to 40¾ cents a pound for No. 1 pasteurized creamery, delivered in Toronto. Second grade creamery ruled at corresponding levels of 39 to 39½ cents. At these levels the general level of butter prices recorded an easier tendency, net declines from Saturday amounting to ½ to ¾ cents. Light supplies, limited demand, and the usual dullness of a Monday butter market were factors in the easier tendency.

Butter quotations to retailers remain unchanged at 43 to 44 cents for No. 1 creamery prints, with No 2 prints at 41 to 42 cents.

BISHOP ORIGINATES PRINTING IN CANADA

Research Discloses Printed Statements By French Prelate in 1759.

QUEBEC, Quebec, November 20.—Canadian Press. — Recent researches among the documents preserved at the municipal library of Montreal revealed that printing was introduced into French Canada several years earlied than was previously believed to have been the case.

Douglas C. McMurtrie, an authority on typography, found that the first document printed in what is now the province of Quebec was struck off on a small hand press owned by the Bishop of the diocese in April, 1759, when the English were besieging the city prior to the battle of the Plains of Abraham. Another document left the same press at Montreal in October of that historic year. It was previously understood the art of printing was inaugurated in Quebec in 1764 by William Brown, and that Montreal first saw the product of the press in 1776.

Two specimens from the early episcopal press are included in the valuable collection of Canadian imprints acquired from Phileas Gagnon by the Municipal Library. They are in the form of "mandements," or communications to the people, issued by Henri-Marie Dubreil de Pontbriand, Bishop of Quebec. In the first the citizens of the beleaguered town are enjoined to observe special devotions and to pray to God for aid against the British. In the second commemoration services for the fallen French leader, Montcalm, are announced.

First Colony.

Among the copious notes attached to the Gagnon collection was found an important reference to the first printing press in the colony. It states on the authority of another student of Canadiana, The Cure, L. E. Bois, of Maskinonge, that Bishop Pontbriand brought with him to Canada a small hand press presented to him by the King of France.

Strong circumstantial evidence indicates that the two episcopal communications were given to the public from this press.

The first is undated, but contains references to the season of the year and to the events immediately preceding the downfall of French rule in Canada. It is known that Bishop Pontbriand made his headquarters at Quebec in April, 1759, removing to Montreal in September. Apparently he took his press and a small tock of type with him, for the second mandement is dated Montreal, October, 1759.

During the first 100 years of the colony's existence all public notices, civil as well as ecclesiastical, were inscribed by hand. It is now apparent that the forethought of a French king and the initiative of a French bishop, brought about the inevitable change so long credited to William Brown.

THE MIRROR OF THE MODE

By Mary Marshall.

On a background of gray silk edged with black, red diamonds and hearts and black clubs and spades proclaim the intentions of this new bridge coat.

Among the dozen and one things that the considerate hostess has to think of in planning a bridge party is the possible—in fact probable—cold-blooded guest. Her idea of a proper room temperature is perhaps somewhere around eighty. If you could only plan to have her seated in an upholstered chair in a corner by the radiator you and she might be comfortable—but though you start her off in some such congenial atmosphere she is bound to progress. Being used to a hot-house temperature at home she is sure to have come in a frock of the lightest sort and even if she is polite and doesn't mention the fact, you know she's shivering and on the verge of catching a cold, for which you will feel entirely responsible.

If she hasn't a scarf you can of course offer her one of your own, but what she really needs is a coat—and so it is that I am suggesting as part of the equipment of the woman who gives bridge parties one or two attractive bridge coats. Recently at a little bridge party of my own the only thing I had to offer a guest who shivered, though the rooms were almost too warm for others, was a last summer's cretonne beach coat—and it was rather amusing to see the eagerness with which she put the rather faded garment over her attractive new afternoon frock.

Next time she comes I shall be better prepared. There will be a brand new silk bridge coat ready for her—and if she doesn't want it I am sure some one else will. It will be made like the one in the sketch of gray silk with border of black, with red and black spades, hearts, diamonds and clbus used for decoration.

There are times when the hostess herself may find an attractive bridge coat a convenience. If she is planning not to play in order to be free to make last-minute preparations for the refreshments and serve then when the tim comes, she may not want to wear a formal afternoon frock. Instead she may prefer to wear a simple washable frock of some sort. This she may wear when she is busy in kitchen and pantry and then to give a festive touch among her guests she may slip into her gay bridge coat.

THE WHATNOT

A Place for Little Bits of Everything of Local Interest

By MARION

When you enter a freind's home, perhaps you are only visiting, or maybe you are staying for tea, but have you ever noticed, as you enter the living room, that your eyes are attracted to the gay colors that the clever housewife always manages to get in her furnishings?

• • • • • •

Perhaps there are some small pieces of furniture painted in bright tints and in contrast to the other furnishing in the room. There are many such women in Peterborough, who have made their living rooms lovely, by the use of a little bright color.

• • • • • •

Your hostess may use some of her new bright chinaware, but somewhere in the room there are always some bright cushions which attract the eyes to the particular piece of furniture on which the cushion rests.

• • • • • •

Many pretty designed and colored pillow slips are to be found in many of Peterborough's stores. If you are contemplating buying some, perhaps for Christmas, be careful in selecting or making the pillows. There is always the danger, that in looking for something odd, you might develop one which is freakish looking. Such a pillow does not look well.

• • • • • •

We all know that cotton materials were at a high point of popularity this summer, and polka dots were very popular. A dress which has bright spots, grouped on a natural background is favored among Peterborough's women. Knowing this you might then make cotton slips, on which are polka dots and bright motifs.

• • • • • •

I happened to be visiting in a south-end home recently, when I was attracted by a pretty cushion, which my clever hostess had worked out. The design was of white dots on an orange background. The decoration was simple, consisting of an all-over design of diamonds made by crossing green bands of tape and a flower motif of yellow and burnt orange rickrack braid and green tape, arranged in each diamond.

• • • • • •

If you happen to be making pillow forms for stuffing, cut them the same size as the slip to be used over them. The seams should be stitched about twice the depth of those in the cover.

• • • • • •

Materials such as muslin, sateen, and long-cloth make suitable pillow forms. The stuffing may be of wool, feathers, down or cotton. Less filling makes a softer pillow.

• • • • • •

A pillow made like the one I have described would make a suitable Christmas gift.

• • • • • •

And in speaking of Christmas gifts, there are a number of helps left for Christmas suggestions. Be sure to send in the coupon and get your help before the supply is exhausted.

• • • • • •

A couple of weeks ago, I noticed in some of our stores, interesting and unique electric lights. Nowadays, nearly every article may be wired and then, you have a new species of electrical lamp.

• • • • • •

Perhaps you have seen those dim white living-room lights in which the electric bulb is encased in the white glass figure of a bird, a ship or what-not?

• • • • • •

There is a sort of charm about these models, but as to their appropriateness, who would imagine a lamp light coming from the inside of a ship, or from the skirts of a prim maiden?

• • • • • •

I picked up a paper one day last week, in which was described tray shelf cupboards. It was an English paper, so I do not know whether these cupboards are to be had in this country, but from the description given, I think they would be very convenient, if they could be made for Peterborough housewives.

• • • • • •

The cupboards are made with doors to keep out the dust and the shelves are in the form of light-weight wooden trays. You can see why this, then, is convenient. Dishes and other things needed for breakfast may be kept on one tray. Things for dinner on another and dishes and other accessories for the afternoon tea on another.

• • • • • •

Such a cupboard would save many steps too, because when you come to get the meal, all you have to do is to pull out the tray and all the dishes are together.

• • • • • •

I know there are many women in Peterborough who pride themselves in their inventions and labor-saving devices, but if you have ever visited in England, you will see how the English housewife has her arrangement of kitchen, pantry and dining room. All these she has arranged in order to save her many unnecessary steps.

• • • • • •

We find that English housewives have done a good deal towards inventing labor-saving devices. They always place their supplies, dishes and cooking utensils where they can easily be obtained.

• • • • • •

English invention has been more pronounced since the war, and perhaps the reason for this interest in step-saving devices has been that so many women have had to do their own housework, who had never done it before the war.

working to get the page ready for us.

Does it help to write on one side of the paper only?

I am enclosing the coupon for help. Thank you.

AN ADMIRER."

Thanks, "Admirer," for your appreciation. Yes, newspapers like to have articles and letters written on only one side of the paper, helping the compositors. Since, however, I type all the letters from neighbors it does not matter how letters to me are written—so long as you DO write!

IN WOMAN'S REALM.

By JEANETTE.

"I wonder if they like it—being trees?
It must feel good to have the ground so flat
And feel yourself stand right up straight like that—
So stiff in the middle—and then branch at ease
Big boughs that arch, small ones that bend and blow."

One of the ladies who sold tags on Poppy Day tells of a little boy who wanted one of the very large silken poppies for a cent, offering as an excuse the words: "I want it for my uncle, who was blown to pieces in the Great War."

This sounds something like the reason of the man for taking up a collection "for the wife of the Unknown Soldier."

The Women's Guild of St. Luke's Church is holding its annual supper and sale of work tonight and having it for the first time in the Community Hall of Ashburnham. This big hall has proven itself a boon to the east city ladies, many of the different societies using it for meetings which were formerly held in church halls that were in many cases rather small for the purpose.

The Women's Guild of St. Luke's Anglican Church is a body of women, about fifty in number, having for their main activity parochial work of every type They are very energetic in carrying out improvements to the church and rectory and are exceptionally faithful in attendance at the meetings. Mrs. J. M. Gemmell is the president.

During past years, they have been responsible for many additions to the comfort of church-goers. They supplied funds for a new floor for the chancel and for the vestry and for new carpets, as well as looking after the papering of several rooms in the rectory and other improvements to the home of the minister. With the A.Y.P.A. of the church, they supplied chairs for the parish hall.

In speaking of any activity with regard to St. Luke's Church the figure of the late Mrs. J. J. Turner looms very large. Mrs. Turner was an indefatigable worker for this church of Ashburnham. She was the president of the Women's Auxiliary for several years and was identified in many ways with other organizations. She was at all times a cheerful and energetic leader or assistant, as the occasion called for, and her presence will be sadly missed by those who worked with her.

Mrs. H. R. H. Kenner, speaking on the work and aims of the League of Nations to members of the Local Council of Women at their last regular meeting, brought responsibility very close to every woman in the land, when she emphasized the importance of carrying out the peace spirit, not alone in International affairs at Geneva, but in every home in the Dominion, by the suppressing of the spirit of anger, hatred and bickering.

He was a little boy, about seven years of age, and his companion was of the same tender vintage. They had passed a group of small girls who were intent on the task of disposing a large china doll, well wrapped up against the cold, under a low-spreading bush.

"Aw, I haven't any use for girls," he declared, loudly. "They make me sick."

"I bet you've got a girl, just the same," asserted the other. "You tell me her name and I won't give it away."

They passed on. The confidence, if it transpired, was lost to posterity.

Following out their program of providing cultural as well as physical improvement, for the mind as well as the body, the Young Women's Christian Association commences to-night its series of lectures on English Literature. They will be given this year by a newcomer to Peterborough, Professor H. J. Davis, of University College, Toronto, and a graduate of Oxford University.

All those who attended Dr. Pratt's lectures in English Literature during the past two years will remember his attractive manner of presenting a feast of good things for the mind. Professor Davis is speaking on the English novelists of modern times, concentrating on Hardy, Conrad, Hudson, Galsworthy, and Lawrence. Dr. Pratt spoke largely on Poetry during his visits here. Some of his readings are unforgettable. There were the little nonsense verses, for instance, about the dormouse who didn't like "delphiniums blue and geraniums red" and who shut his eyes tightly until a wise doctor prescribed for him a visit to places where chrysanthemums grew, as an antidote for too much brighter color.

Or the king who longed for "a little bit of butter on his bread" and appealed to the kindly Alderney to get it for him. Then there was DeLaMare's "Listeners," a poem of differing type, with Dr. Pratt's voice bringing out the musical quality of the verses that depicted the return of the wanderer to his home and the empty house with the shadowy listeners on the stairs. "Tell them I came," he said to the silence and rode away in the misty night.

FAVORITE RECIPE.

POTATO PUFFS.

(Contributed by Farmerette.)

Take two cups of mashed potatoes and stir in two tablespoons of melted butter. Beat to cream and add two eggs beaten very light. One teacup of milk or cream and salt and pepper to taste. Bake in casserole in quick oven until nicely browned.

DIFFERENT FURS

Tweed suits and separate coats take entirely different kinds of furs this season. Suits favor short, curly furs, like caracul, astrakan, broadtail and curly lamb. Coats use long-haired pelts such as badger, lynx, wolf and fox.

NEIGHBORLY HELPS

This column is used by Examiner neighbors to help out others who have requested recipes or advice. You may use it freely by addressing Marion.

"Dea rMarion,

"I wonder if you, or any of the neighbors, can tell me an attractive way to use kidney?

"F. A."

Here is one way I know of, "F.A." and perhaps the neighbors can tell you others. Mine is "Beefsteak and Kidney Pie."

One pound steak; 2 sheep's kidneys or ½ lb. beef kidney; ¾ lb. rough puff paste, seasoning, and 1 egg. Cut the kidney into thin slices across, place one on each slice of meat, roll upt ightly, and put the rolls on end in a dish. Season with salt and pepper, and moisten with ½ gill water or gravy, line the edges of the dish, and then cover with paste. Ornament the surface with fancifully cut leaves of paste, flake the edge of the paste, brush over with beaten egg, and bake in a fairly hot oven from 1½ to 1¾ hours.

MARION'S MAIL

Address correspondence to Marion, at The Examiner Office.

"Dear Marion:

It is generally conceded that Peterborough market is one of the best assets which Peterborough has for drawing trade. Farmers and their wives from the surrounding district bring produce to market, dispose of it, but take very little of their money home. As a general rule, the major portion of it is spent in Peterborough stores to supply the needs of the home. After the market is over and the shopping finished, often these women have a long wait, either for their train or perhaps the men who brought them in have business which detains them.

There is practically no place for them to wait, unless in the stores which are often filled with shoppers. It is often regretted that there is no Rest Room where they could comfortably rest while waiting. Probably if the city had a Women's Institute as in rural parts, this need would be filled.

Yours sincerely,
RURALITE."

Indeed, "Ruralite," I am sure that if we had in the city a women's organization such as the "Institute" the much-talked-of rest room would have materialized long ago. The need has been recognized these many years, and discussed by the Board of Health and City Council.

The lack of facilities, no less than the failure of the responsible organizations to provide a known necessity, is a disgrace to Peterborough.

THE GLANDS OF EMOTION

Doctors have come to realize that strong emotions act as powerful stimulants or inhibitors of the ductless glands. Prolonged fear and anxiety seem to have a special tendency to produce diabetes. Severe fright often results in paralysis or mental aberations. Anger often stimulates the adrenals to such an extent that the blood pressure is increased and apoplexy the result. Chronic ill temper may cause a serious toxic irritation, severe enough to injure the heart or blood vessels. Shock has frequently been followed by hyperthroidism, or an increased secretion of the thyroid gland; mental depression frequently results in its under-activity.

Many of the appearances of old age are caused by the emotions of worry, grief and sorrow, producing a worn expression of the face and an exhausted attitude. White hair may occur within a very short time from worry or sorrow. Baldness may result from a lack of glandular activity caused by the action of destructive thoughts. A lack of mental control will produce a premature old age more rapidly than any other factor.

It is a well known fact among doctors that patients with weak thyroids and gonads are continually seeing the dark side of life and furthermore are usually absent-minded and lack even the ordinary elements of precaution and are almost sure to fail in any of their undertakings. They are frequent victims of accidents which occur as the result of lack of caution or foresight. Many "jay-walkers" and those who cross the street against the traffic signals may come under this class. On the other hand, those individuals in whom the ductless glands are functioning properly are courageous, full of vitality and usually successful in their undertakings. There is such a close connection between the action of the ductless glands and the state of the mind that these glands have actually been termed the organs of emotion.

We may be disappointed in our faith in friends or in the allurements of love; we may have accidents which cannot be avoided, or we may in lonesomeness desire the presence of absent ones, but fortunately time places a healing hand over our grief. Forgetfulness of our sorrows is a God-given blessing. Those who reverse this normal process and remembering, store up their sorrows and grievances and forget their joys, are suicide subjects, and if they live on, through a greater fear of death, their faces are lined with furrows and their ambitions have fled.

One of the finest methods for forgetting our irritations is to make a sympathetic contact with nature—with the mountain crags, the forests, the vine-covered hills and the fields of wild flowers. They will teach us something of the vastness of life and the smallness of our problems. As Schopenhauer said, "The world has existed for 50,000 years and will last for 50,000 years more, and what are a few years of our lives in the face of these thousands?" We recognize this saying as being even more true when we realize that the latest researches of science have substituted millions of years for Schopenhauer's thousands.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Erysipelas.

Question: Mrs. K. P. writes: "I would like to know the cause of erysipelas. Most people say it is from a cold."

Answer: I am satisfied that erysipelas is primarily caused from inflammation of either the small or large intestines. I find that a permanent cure depends entirely upon removing every irritation from the alimentary canal. There is often a specific micro-organism found on the reddened erysipelatous skin. This is called the Streptococcus erysipelatis and this is usually considered the sole cause, but I am sure that it is only a secondary cause, if it needs to be considered at all.

Poor Circulation.

Question: Mrs. R. M. writes: "I am writing to ask what to do in a case of bad circulation. Am so cold from my waist down. At times my limbs are of a purplish blue, and at times my heart beats so fast as to make me quite weak for a few moments. I also experience weakness in climbing stairs. At night my hands will get numb, even to my elbows. Am 36 years old and weigh 138 but have such large puffy ankles. Could it be a form of dropsy caused from heart trouble?"

Answer: You are no doubt suffering from some form of heart trouble which produces the swelling in your ankles and all of your other symptoms. You have suggested the answer in your question, and have no doubt guessed the truth. Heart trouble and poor circulation can usually be cured by going on a good diet regimen, taking the proper amount of exercise, etc. Continue to follow these articles each day and you will soon learn how to overcome your trouble, or you may send for my article on heart derangements, enclosing a large self-addressed stamped envelope.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 21, 1928

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

Good luck appears to be indicated for most persons today, according to astrology. Benefic aspects strongly rule.

Under this planetary government women should benefit greatly in unusual ways. Honors will come to a few who will render high government service.

The seers prophesy that the transition period in which women are learning how to conduct public affairs is drawing to a close, although warming is given that feminine minds still have much to master in the way of impersonal outlook.

This is held to be a rarely lucky wedding day, making for long domestic partnership and steady advancement toward wealth.

Theatres again are subject to a sign indicating that they focus unusual attention and cause extraordinary discussion.

The vogue of the risque play is passing, it is foretold, and real drama of fine quality is to be presented.

All the seers agree that after so much material attainment the United States is to reach supreme artistic heights within a very short time.

Astrologers foretell in their prophesies concerning government that the President's cabinet in time will include, in addition to a secretary of education a secretary of the arts.

This month's total eclipse of the Moon is interpreted as menacing, since it brings Saturn in rising position and presages bloodshed in foreign lands.

This eclipse also is believed to forecast many crimes in the United States where murders will be even more numerous than formerly.

France is under a sinister sway and there may be much illness during a gloomy winter.

The evening of this day is a propitious time to entertain celebrities and is favorable for stag parties.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a happy, prosperous year in which they are able to realize their ambitions. Domestic environment—should be especially fortunate.

Children born on this day probably will have the rare talent of making the most of their possibilities. They are likely to be attractive in appearanc, tactful and charming. These subjects of Scorpio are on the cusp and may partake of Sagittarius qualities.

UNCLE WIGGILY

By HOWARD R. GARIS

To-day's Bedtime Story

UNCLE WIGGILY'S LUNCH BASKET.

(Copyright, 1928, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Of all the animals living in Woodland, near where Uncle Wiggily had built his hollow stump bungalow, none was more sly or cunning than the Weasel. Though he was not as large as Uncle Wiggily, the Weasel was so fierce and strong, so quick and tricky, and with such sharp teeth that Uncle Wiggily feared the Weasel even more than he did the Fox, Wolf or Bob Cat.

"For the Fox, Wolf and Bob Cat are large, and when I look across the fields, or even amid the trees of the woods, I can easily see those Bad Chaps coming," said the bunny uncle.

"But the Weasel! Dear me! When he starts after me he slinks along, hiding under bushes and rocks and behind trees. In winter his fur turns white so he looks part of the snow and I can hardly see him before he is ready to jump on me. Oh, no, I don't like Mr. Weasel!"

Now the Weasel was always trying to catch Uncle Wiggily but, so far, the Sly Chap had not done so. Uncle Wiggily had good luck and always managed to get away in time, though more than once the rabbit was nearly caught.

It was one time after the Weasel had tried to catch the bunny, but had not done so, that the Sly Chap said to his wife:

"I know how I can get that bunny."

"How?" asked Mrs. Weasel. "I hope you get him soon, for we have very little to eat in the burrow."

"I'll go out right now and get him!" snarled the Weasel. "I have a new trick I am going to play."

"What kind of a trick?" asked his wife.

"I am going to hide in his lunch basket," snarled the Weasel, not because he was impolite to ths wife, but because that was his way of speaking.

"You mean hide yourself in Uncle Wiggily's lunch basket?" asked Mrs. Weasel.

"Yes," answered her husband. "Uncle Wiggily, of late, has been going out to look for adventures and taking with him a big basket of lunch. It is quite large enough for me to fit myself into. And once I am inside the basket, I'll snuggle down until Uncle Wiggily, will have carried me with him into the far woods. Then, when he opens his basket to eat his lunch, out I'll pop and I'll catch him. Then I'll eat my lunch. Ha! Ha! Ha!"

"Ha! Ha! Ha!" laughed Mrs. Weasel. "Save some lunch for me!"

"I shall," promised her husband. "And now I must go hide outside Uncle Wiggily's bungalow. When I see him start out with his lunch basket I'll follow and the first chance I get I'll hide myself in the basket and wait my chance to pop out and catch him."

"Do you think you can hide in Uncle Wiggily's lunch basket without him seeing you?" asked Mrs. Weasel.

"I'm quite sure I can," said the Sly Chap. "Uncle Wiggily often sets his basket down to rest and sometimes, when he is resting, he falls asleep. When he is asleep I'll sneak up, throw out the lunch, hide myself in its place and the rabbit will never know. Ha! Ha! Ha!"

"True enough, he will never know!" chuckled Mrs. Weasel. "Ha! Ha! Ha!"

So the Weasel slunk along to Uncle Wiggily's bungalow. And, surely enough, a little later Mr. Longears came out carrying on his paw a large basket of lunch. Just as the Weasel had found out, the bunny uncle, of late, had been taking his lunch with him.

"You see," said Uncle Wiggily to his wife, "the winter days are so short now that if I come home to lunch at noon I lose time and can't find any adventures. So I'll take my lunch with me." And he did.

Along over the fields and through the woods hopped Uncle Wiggily with his lunch basket. But he had not gone very far before he sat down on a log to rest, placing the basket behind him.

"If it were not so near where the Police Dog comes along, I would pop out and grab Uncle Wiggily now," whispered the Weasel to himself, for he had followed the rabbit from his bungalow. "But, as it is, I'll throw out the lunch, hide myself in the basket and wait until this rabbit has carried me deep and far into the woods. Then I'll pop out and get him where no police Dog can arrest me."

Uncle Wiggily took a little nap as he sat down on the log resting, and while he slept the Weasel slyly opened the basket, threw out the nice lunch Nurse Jane had put up, carrot sandwiches, cabbage cake and everything and inside the basket the Weasel hid himself. Pretty soon the bunny awakened, picked up his basket and traveled on, taking the Weasel with him, though not knowing it. But don't worry. The Weasel isn't going to catch Mr. Longears.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY WE MISSPELL USUAL WORDS

By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph.D.
(Author, The Springs of Human Action)

If you stop to think about it you are likely to misspell words that you know perfectly. This may happen with such simple words as "nose" and "are."

Spelling is a skilled act that has become habitual by repetition. And, like all habits, the act follows a definite nerve pathway and is more or less automatic. When you start on the first letter the next and the next follow as a matter of course because whatever enters the mind together or in sucession tends to be recalled in the same order.

You are likely to misspell when you stop to think about it because in so doing you interfere with the process. When a child is interrupted in the midst of saying his little piece he is completely thrown off and will have to go back to the beginning and get the benefit of the momentum, the sequence in which he learned the selection. The interruption may even throw him off so completely that he will not be able to finish the piece even though he return to the beginning. Each failure causes loss of confidence and becomes a link in the chain of the recalling process. So that each time he comes to the place where he had trouble he is likely to have trouble again.

When you spell a word that you have previously learned how to spell without thinking about it, the nervous impulse takes the easiest and most natural path that has previously been marked out for it. But when you stop to think how to spell it, in effect you take hold of that nervous impulse by a process of attention, and try to force the nervous impulse through the brain center. In other words, you are working hard and using up more material. That is why you are likely to misspell the word.

"Trust your first impression" is good advice because it takes advantage of the original and habitual mechanism. When you stop and try to figure out an act that is habitual you get confused because you tangle yourself all up literally in the brain cells and the motor paths concerned.

This is why most skilled acts are done without thinking about them. The less thinking required the less chance for mistakes. The more nearly any act can be reduced to mere mechanical reaction the greater the chance for accuracy. The technical skill of the musician, the ball player, the boxer and all others is in muscle co-ordination and open pathways through the neural connections as the result of practice through repetition. The slightest interference by conscious effort is likely to prove disastrous.

Misspelling a word when you stop to think about it is merely one illustration of the rule that applies in every case of skilled acts which are always done best without thinking, once the skill is acquired.

Why do you do what you do? Ask Dr. Thomson. Write care of this paper, and send stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.

LYRICS OF LIFE

A STITCH IN TIME

If one will mend the little tears,
Then how much longer something wears!
The little seams that often start,
That just begin to pull apart,
The rips that only need a thread
Before they have a chance to spread—
They only need a stitch or two,
Then how much longer they will do!

And I've been thinking much of late
The little rips that grow so great
Are not alone in waist or dress
But many other things, I guess.
The saddest quarrel ever heard
Began with but one careless word,
Until the long, long years revealed.
A hurt a moment might have healed.

A woman wise is one who mends
The lovely fabric of her friends,
Who finds they have their failings, yet
Who has the wisdom to forget.
We do not throw a glove away
Because it failed us just one day.
If one will mend the little tears,
Then how much longer friendship wears!

LONDON SCORES WINNING GOAL IN OVERTIME

CORBEAU'S PANTHERS DEFEAT BUFFALO BISONS BY 3 TO 2

Voss and Ironstone Star in Overtime Victory For Canpro Club.

FURIOUS BATTLE.

Wes King Scores Final Tally That Won the Decision.

LONDON, Ont., Nov. 20.—By scoring the winning goal with just a little over three minutes of the ten minute overtime period gone, Bert Corbeau's young London Panthers staved off the final furious bids of Percy Lesueur's Buffalo Bisons and forced them to take a 3 to 2 defeat in their Canpro debut after an exciting game that thrilled over 2,000 fans at the arena last night.

Wes. King was the Panther sharpshooter who nabbed a loose puck, following a face-off back of the Bison's blue line, and drilled it between Taugher's feet for the score that broke the tie that existed at the end of the third frame during which the Buffalo veterans came to life and, widely outplaying the Panthers, tied it upon a lucky play after having subjected Joe Ironstone to a veritable fusillade of shots from all angles.

Brydson tied the count for Buffalo in the third, when he batted in the rebound of Bogardis' shot from a pile-up in front of the London goalie, who again played a wonderful game throughout the rather wild but peppy hockey that both sextettes exhibited.

The Bisons presented a powerful team that will make plenty of trouble before the race is settled, but they lost their first loop fixture when Corbeau's youngsters found their scoring punch and justified his faith in them. The line-ups:

London—Goal, Ironstone; defence, Voss and Moore; centre, Connacher; wings, Jackson and Filmore; subs, Corbeau, Lever, King, White, McCully and Foxworthy.

Buffalo—Goal, Taugher; defence, Ledermen and Frew; centre, Roth; wings, Brydson and Bogardis; subs, Smith, Lott, Hughes and Huard.

Referee—Dr. W. J. Laflamme, Woodstock.

Bowling
Alley Gossip
By Pin Boy

A.Y.P.A. LEAGUE.

The twelve teams in the A.Y.P.A. Bowling League bumped the alleys at the Duffus Recreation Academy on Friday last in their weekly workout, and clever bowling and close decisions were featured in every game.

The Senecas fell under the attack of the Iroquois and won only one game, the winner having the edge on most of the play except in the first game when Gore and Bachelor won for the Senecas by some big league bowling. G. Manning was high man for the second time in two weeks and is earning a reputation as a consistent bowler. His scores of 201 and 548 carried off high single and three.

The Sioux swamped the Crees in every game and were 500 pins to the good in total pinnage, although G. Beauclerc for the losers piled up a high single score of 233 and assisted by his team-mates worked hard but were no match for the clever Sioux, especially B. Moore and J. Field who were responsible for high singles of 225 and 200 respectively.

The hardest fought battle of the night was staged by the Chippewas and Blackfeet, the latter taking two games out of three. Ormie Heap was high man with 261 while Miss E. Thompson of the same team showed up well with 232. For the Blackfeet Tom Montgomery with 252 single and D. Miller with 233 were the mainstays and Miller's high trio amounting to 516 carried off the honors.

The Hurons took the big half of the score in their argument with the Dakotas, despite the nice performance of Price, who made 243 in one game. M. Fowler took high three with 479.

The Oneidas were totally defeated by the Algonquins but this encounter was a very one-sided affair as the Oneidas were handicapped by three dummy scores, nevertheless Jack Hope played a fine game, making 221 and 525. J. Pritchard turned in the nicest card for the winners with 221 and 583.

HAL DE CRUCHY WILL OFFICIATE

Officials Named For Eastern Rugby Final at Hamilton.

WINNER MEETS REGINA.

TORONTO, November 20. — Arrangements have been made by the C.R.U. executive for the Eastern Canadian Rugby final between the Hamilton Tigers and University of Toronto. The game will be played at Hamilton next Saturday and the officials will be: Referee, Hal De-Gruchy, Toronto; umpire, Joe O'Brien, Montreal; head linesman, Johnny McKelvey, Hamilton; timers, R. B. Isbister, Hamilton, and Dr. J. McCollum, Varsity; penalty timer, John DeGruchy, Toronto; yardsticks, Doug Addison, Toronto, and C. E. Wigle, Hamilton.

Tentative arrangements were made for the Canadian play-offs in the intermediate and junior series which have become simplified by the withdrawal of the intercollegiate champions from both series. Loyola withdrew for the usual Montreal academic reasons, but Queen's were forced out because six of the players were over the age limit for the C.R.U. series and it was impossible to get players to fill their places. There is no age limit in the junior intercollegiate series.

The Regina Rough Riders are coming east and will play the winners of next Saturday's game in Hamilton, on the grounds of the winning team on December 1st.

This date will also be the one for the intermediate and junior finals. In the intermediate series the O.R.F.U. title holders, either Oshawa or Sarnia, will play at the Quebec winners' field, while in the junior series Montreal A.A.A. will paly on the grounds of the Ontario champions.

Tom Borton of Montreal will be the referee in the intermediate final at Montreal while Ross Craig of Hamilton and Harold Bailey of Toronto will handle the junior C.R.U. tilt.

NEWCOMERS WIN S.P.A. FIXTURE

Young Rangers Defeat Parkdale Canoe Club By 3 to 2.

TORONTO, Nov. 20.—That all the good junior hockey around Toronto will not be played in the Big Four group was indicated last night in the S.P.A. double-header, when two newly formed teams from the proposed West End section, eliminated Parkdale Canoe Club and Varsity from the pre-season series. Ed. Wildey's Young Rangers capsized the Canoeist by a 3 to 2 score while West Toronto vanquished Varsity students 4 to 2. Both games were good exhibitions of early season hockey, with the scores always close enough to supply uncertainty and keep the small crowd in the Arena Gardens until the last bell.

The display of the newcomers, both teams and players, was the feature of the night, for several youngsters gave promise of developing into high-class stars while the new clubs proved stronger than older organizations. West Toronto and Young Rangers in winning the right to advance in the quest for the Sportsmen's silverware, both made impressive starts, particularly the Westenders, coached by Bill Hancock, ex-Newmarket mentor.

West Toronto, garbed in brilliant uniforms, caught the fancy from the start and before the game was much older, they exhibited more than color, while the Young Rangers should also figure in hockey happenings. The Westerners, Rangers, Danforths who gave a good display last week; Victorias, who made their appearance on Wednesday, and probably Oakville will be around in the same section and they should provide a real race in the regular O.H.A. schedule.

MAROONS WILL MEET RANGERS AT NEW YORK

VIEWS ON SPORT

It was evident at Deloro that Central League baseball will give the fans some keen games next summer.

It was suggested at the O.H.A. convention that teams be allowed three substitutes instead of two but this was defeated in order to protect teams from the smaller centres. All players on O.H.A. teams will be put on an equal standing and players that are in the box when the game starts will be called "alternates" and not substitutes.

* * * * * * *

There was a strong protest expressed at the meeting against the "gentleman's agreement" as practised by the N.H.L. in which an amateur player is tied down to a professional team without his knowledge or consent. This is one of the worst phases in the N.H.L. Teams attempt to grab amateur players and the O.H.A. were wise to voice their protest.

Dunc Munro, captain of the Canadian Olympic hockey team in 1924 and defence player on the Montreal Maroons may be out of hockey for good. On examination by doctors it was found that Dunc is suffering from a heart condition that would make it dangerous for him to play again in such strenuous sport as hockey. He is one of the best known players in the game and the fans will be sorry to see his playing career ended.

Oshawa "Blue Devils" defeated London in the semi-finals of the Intermediate O.R.F.U. playoffs. The Oshawa team is composed almost wholly of former players of the Oshawa Collegiate team and they all played against former P.C.I. teams. Why is it that a good intermediate team can not be built up here of former players of P.C.I.? The players here are just as good and perhaps have a better knowledge of the game, after passing through Coach Browne's hands, than the Oshawa graduates possess.

Reports are drifting in from every town and hamlet in the province that hockey training has begun. No local players should miss the weekly workouts at the "Y" gym on Wednesday nights and he should be working in a little training on the side too. "Gamey" Jarvis and "Johnnie" Johnson are two players from St. John's teams of last season that should turn out with the intermediates this year. They are both smart hockey players.

Toronto Leafs proved that they are going to be one of the real contenders in the N.H.L. when they trimmed Canadiens the other night. The Leafs are speedy with Bailey, Carson and Cox, and the defence of Duncan and Day coupled with the close checking of the forwards proved too much for even the whirlwind Morenz and Joliat. Howie Morenz repayed the fans for the admission fee when he flashed up the ice through the whole Leaf team, pulled Chabot out of the nets to one side and slid the puck in the other corner.

HAMILTON CLUB LOSE THIRD GAME

Niagara Falls Twice Came From Behind, Finally Winning 3 to 2.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Nov. 20.—The Niagara Falls Canpros copped another victory here last night when Hamilton Tigers took the short end of a 3 to 2 score. The game, which was witnessed by some 2,000 fans, was interesting and the result was in doubt at all stages.

Play became "lively" in the second stanza when twelve penalties were handed out. They were all for petty offences, however and the game could be called a clean affair. There was little to pick between the two teams, though the Lalonders deserved their win on their noble efforts and consistent plugging.

Godin, Prestia, Cain and Quesnell were most effective for the winners, while Dunning, Bennett, Brophy and Reinikka all played strong hockey for the Tigers.

BALL CLUB TO HOLD MEETING

Officers Will Be Elected at Organization Meeting of Peterborough Baseball Club.

DELEGATES AT DELORO.

Messrs. Max Swanston and Vic Hamilton were delegates to the annual meeting of the Central Ontario League, which was held in Deloro on Saturday morning, and at which R. A. Elliott, of the Deloro team, was elected president, following H. T. McFadden, of Peterborough, who is now past president.

The Peterborough senior ball team, together with Oshawa, Belleville, and Deloro, will form the district this year. Kingston is not included.

The schedule, which will give each team four home games with each club, should make a very interesting baseball season next year.

The organization meeting of the Peterborough Baseball Club will be held in the course of the next week or ten days, when officers will be elected and every effort made to have the club assume a commanding position in baseball during the season of 1929, which it has held in years gone by.

ATHLETIC UNION ACCEPTS RECORDS

Applications For Some Lowered Marks Rejected By Body.

NEW YORK, N.Y., Nov. 20 (Canadian Press).—The National Amateur Athletic Union yesterday accepted a number of track records but turned thumbs down on other applications for lowered marks.

Emerson (Bud) Spencer's record of 47 seconds for the 400 metres run May 12, 1928, was accepted, and the Stanford track captain's performance is expected to be listed later as a world record.

The world's record of 52 seconds, made by F. Morgan Taylor, Illinois Athletic Club, in the 400 metre hurdles, July 3, at Philadelphia, was accepted. It has already been internationally approved.

Lee Barnes, University of Southern California, will not be named the champion pole vaulter at this convention. His mark of 14 feet, 1½ inch, was referred back for further information as to the size of the pegs supporting the bar. Sabin Carr's 14 feet is the present outdoor record.

Ed. Hamm, the Georgia Tech, broad jumper, was formally credited with 25 feet, 11¼ inches, a world's record performance being made at the final Olympic tryouts at Boston, July 7.

The convention awarded the National Marathon championship to Boston in preference to Baltimore. The title will go to the winner of the classic Boston A. A. long distance race in April.

FAMOUS CANADIAN RUGBY GAMES, PLAYS AND PLAYERS

There was a time when Osgoode Hall besides developing great legal minds produced celebrated rugby teams. The budding lawyers' team of 1892 were a collection of stars who met all comers and treated them alike even the M.A.A. which challenged for the championship. Five points, the result of a drop kick, saved the Montrealers from a coat of whitewash. Osgoode Hall scored 45 points and were declared champions of Canada. The game was played on that historic old rugby battleground, Rosedale grounds, Toronto. It took place November 10th on a wet and slippery field. Montreal was not accustomed to Osgoode Hall's wing line blocking tactics. Jimmie Smellie's quarterback play featured the game. His long passes to his wing halfbacks were spectacular. This play was a favorite in the old days when the halfbacks stood ten to twenty yards apart. Here it is diagrammed:

When Osgoode Hall scrimmaged the ball, Smellie, No. 1, received it from the heel-out and passed it 10 or 15 yards laterally to No. 2 or No. 3 or in this case No. 4, the right half. No. 4 runs as far as he can, then passes it to a team-mate or punts it down the field. The teams lined up:

Osgoode Hall—Fullbacks, McKay, Kerr, Wood; half-back, J. Senkler; quarterback, Smellie; scrimmage, Blake, Copeland, Young; wings, Peterson, Moran, E. Senkler, Pope, Patterson, Farrell, Rykert.

Montreal—Fullbacks, Fry, Miller, Male; halfback, Campbell; scrimmage, Higginson, Black, Bell; wings, Baird, Montserrat, W. Jamieson, Routh, Redpath, Buchanan, H. Jamieson.

To-morrow—Ottawa versus Queen's in 1925.

POINTS DISCUSSED AT C.O.B.L. MEETING

Twelve Cent Mileage On Wet Days Among Questions Discussed.

(Examiner Correspondence)

MARMORA, Nov. 20—Presidency in the Central Ontario Amateur Baseball League was unanimously accorded R. A. Elliott of Deloro at the annual meeting of that League held in Deloro on Saturday. The fact that H. T. McFadden of Peterborough, retiring president, was unable to continue his active interest in the League's welfare made the choice of a successor necessary and although Mr. Elliott spoke of O.B.A.A. duties as a reason for someone else to get the chance to shoulder local baseball leadership, the gathering felt otherwise and consequently his election was sealed.

Representatives were present from Belleville, Peterborough and Deloro. Oshawa sent a message regretting inability to be represented and asked that Mr. McFadden look after their interests. Previous to election of officers, Mr. McFadden touched upon the necessity of his retirement and referred to his pleasant associations with the League. He also referred in eulogistic terms to Belleville's success in winning the championship and paid a tribute to Mr. Elliott's zeal for baseball in general. Secretary N. Thompson also explained that the revision of the constitution and by-laws had, as asked for at a previous meeting through contending circumstances, not been accomplished. It was therefore felt that it should be left to the incoming committee which was agreed upon by those present. Following his election as president, R. A. Elliott took the chair and two other officers were speedily filled, namely:

Vice-President—F. G. Chester, Oshawa.

Secretary-Treasurer—N. Thompson, Belleville.

The choice of executive is being left to a meeting of the League which will be called in the early spring, to which each club forming the League will be asked to send an officer to fill a position therein. The president then reminded those present that the constitution should be remodelled before the executive was formed. After some discussion, the motion was carried that the president with the assistance of Messrs. J. Hemphill and H. A. McNally draw up and submit a tentative constitution and by-laws before February 1st.

Minor discussions followed, one point raised being the twelve cent mileage on wet days when games were not playable. This and similar questions will be decided at the spring meeting. The next business concerned the schedule. It was decided that the secretary draw up a quadruple schedule with opening games to be arranged at Belleville and Peterborough on May 24th. The schedule will be drawn up with another consideration. Peterborough and Oshawa desire Saturday games and Belleville and Deloro ask for Wednesdays. Before adjournment for lunch, discussion centred for a short while on League entrance fees. Upon resumption of business, these were placed at twenty dollars. Delegates to the O.B.A.A. meeting to be held at London on April 6 are Messrs. N. Thompson, W. Gerow and M. Swanston.

The question of umpires having been dealt with, a motion was carried that Mr. McFadden be granted a life pass. Mr. Thompson, in speaking on the motion, mentioned that the retiring president had rendered a great service, something they could not forget. Mr. McFadden replied in appreciative terms. Thus ended a meeting which conveyed the impression that a rosy season awaits the League in 1929. With Belleville, 1928 1928 senior champions in the field and the other three clubs likely to have well represented teams, prospects never looked better.

DUNC MUNRO MAY BE OUT OF HOCKEY

Montreal Maroon Defence Man Suffering From Heart Trouble.

MONTREAL, Que., Nov. 20.—Dunc Munro, defence player of the Montreal Maroons, is out of hockey for three weeks at least and probably for all time. Saturday he was given a thorough examination at the Royal Victoria hospital by a group of specialists. He was found to be suffering from a severe cold, threatening pneumonia, and also from a heart condition—and it is this latter ailment which may keep him out of hockey for all time.

The leader of Canada's 1924 Olympic champion team turned professional with the Maroons when the club was first formed in the summer of 1924 and since that time he has been captain and defence star of the Montreal club. Aside from Benedict, veteran goalkeeper, Munro is the only playing member left of the original Maroon team.

The big defence man had previously announced that he would retire from hockey after this season.

PRO CHAMPS IN FINE SHAPE

New Yorkers Will Put Up Stern Battle Against Montreal Crew.

PLAYERS ON INJURED LIST.

NEW YORK, N.Y., Nov. 20.—(Canadian Press.) —Having inaugurated the 1928-1929 hockey season locally in a bitter battle with the New York Americans last night, which ended in a 1-1 tie, the New York Rangers prepared yesterday for another strenuous tussle on Tuesday night when they entertain the rugged Montreal Maroons.

Badly handicapped against the Americans by excessive heat and water-soaked ice, the Rangers are hoping for cooler weather to help them cope with the maroon sweatered clan, who are well known as a great road team.

The Rangers came out of Sunday's game somewhat battered. 'Ching' Johnson, husky defence man, received a nasty gash over the eye and other bruises, sustained in his efforts to outguess the wily Broadbent of Americans. Bun Cook also suffered a gash on the face when he attempted to brush Conacher, opposing guard, out of his path Except for other minor hurts the team is in fine fettle and determined to avenge the moral victory registered by their intra-city rivals in holding the world champions to a tie.

Prize Winning Essay

In contest conducted by Haboco Stores, Peterborough.

WHY I LIKE TO BUY IN A CHAIN STORE.

(By Marion Ruth Staples, Fraserville)

There are many reasons why I like to buy in a chain store. From these I have tried to select the most important.

My first and greatest reason is because I receive such splendid values. The goods for chain stores are bought in large quantities. This means an actual reduction on the price. When sold to us they are cheaper than they can be bought from a small general store.

Also in chain stores I am sure to be given both courteous and efficient service. I find generally, that the clerks take a personal interest in the store and enjoy getting and retaining customers.

Another reason is that on entering a strange town a chain store is like meeting an old friend in a new place. I know that I can rely on what they say and that the different articles are of a good brand.

My shopping district is Peterborough. I go to school every day on the train. When anything is wanted by the folks at home I can go to the same kind of store and will be sure to get exactly what is wanted.

In a large place there is more than one store of the same kind. This enables people from different parts of the city or town to avail themselves of the bargains. Again this allows them to lower their prices because of the increase of buyers. Another reason follows directly from the former. Because of the number of shoppers there is a quick turn-over of stock an in this way the goods are always kept fresh.

The chain stores buy directly from the manufacturer. This means that instead of three or four people having a commission or profit on the goods, there are only two, the manufacturer and the chain store. This eliminates the wholesale dealers and agents.

MEET ORPHANS IN RUGBY FINAL

Hamilton Club Enters Contest Heavy Favorites Over Toronto.

VARSITY TAKES UP GRIND.

HAMILTON, Nov. 20. — Hamilton takes its football seriously. That has long been a fact. It is even more established now, with the wealth of detail work that is being undertaken to make Saturday's game more an outstanding attraction in every way. Despite the fact that the Jungle Kings will enter the contest as favorites, nothing is being taken for granted.

The team and officials are concentrating every bit as much upon the coming struggle as they have done with their hardest group fixtures, and while the heavy training is being conducted the lighter side of things is being given attention.

The irrepressible Sam Manson, who has been the organizer of rooters' clubs of various descriptions in the past, is laying plans to have the Camels Club out in force again. This body functioned with varying degrees of success in the rain and mud at Varsity Stadium last season, when Tigers were bowing to Balmy Beach, but its originator has high hopes that Saturday will be a more propitious occasion.

Samuel has been ill. He continued to be ill until it became apparent that something had to be done about organizing vocal and comedy support for the Striped Cats this week. Sammy was galvanized into action when it occurred to him that the tiem was short. The Camels Club had been lying dormant since that disastrous final last season, and the problem required all his energy.

Orphans Resume Practise

TORONTO, Nov. 20. — Although Coach Jimmy Douglas of the Varsity Orphans, senior O.R.F.U. champions, decided on Saturday to let his players rest until Wednesday, he has changed his mind and has called a workout for this afternoon, when preparations will get under way for Saturday's Eastern Canada final against the Tigers in Hamilton. While a number of the players finished the O.R.F.U. final in an exhausted condition, which was not altogether unexpected, as the weather conditions were of the most punishing nature and the Students used only three substitutes, the rest over the week-end brought them all back to form.

While the Orphans are not claiming a victory next Saturday, they are confident they will make a creditable showing, even if they will be outweighed 25 or 30 pounds per man. They anticipate a strenuous struggle, as it is a known fact that the Tigers have still kinks in their tails from the knot tied last season by Balmy Beach, and the Hamilton supporters have made no effort to disguise the fact that the Bengals are going out to run up as big a score as possible against the O.R.F.U. champions.

On a fast field the Tigers will have a decided edge, and even in the heavy going they should have a margin, but the Students have already demonstrated that they can adapt themselves to heavy going. With Charlie Baillie an absentee, there is but little chance he will get in the game, the Orphans will be shy of experienced backfield players outside of Jack Sinclair and Doug. McFadyen, and this pair will be subjected to harder and deadlier tackling from the Tigers than they have encountered so far this season, but both lads are adepts at side-stepping would-be grapplers.

GERALD GREEN ON TORONTO TEAM

Defence Player Purchased From Bulldogs, Who Send Huard To Bisons.

WINDSOR, Nov. 20.—Rolly Huard, who has taken part in every game played by the Windsor Hockey Club since the Windsor Arena became the home of the local pro club, is no longer with the Bulldogs, having been traded on the even-up basis for Mike Neville of the Buffalo Bisons.

In making the announcement Manager Herb Mitchell admitted that the deal had been under discussion for several days, and probably accounted for the wild rumors that Huard was going to the Maroons or to Ottawa.

The Bulldogs' manager also denied the morning paper reports that Cliff McBride would be recalled by the Montreal Maroons. He spoke to Eddie Gerard over the telephone, and learned that the Montreal boss had no idea of requesting the return of the defence man. Furthermore, were McBride to go back to Montreal, Harold Hicks would come here in his stead.

Gerald Green, relief defence man secured from Buffalo in the trade for "Rusty" Hughes, was also removed from the Windsor roster when Mitchell sold him outright to the Toronto Millionaires early yesterday afternoon. The Bulldogs had 13 signed players, one more than the limit, and Mitchell decided that he could best spare Green.

THEATRES

AT THE CAPITOL.

"SHOW PEOPLE"

The Capitol has a good program this week, with the feature picture centering about the activities of Hollywood's movie colony. Marion Davies and William Haines are costarred in the picture that pokes fun at many of the stellar figures of the "deaf and dumb" drama. They may be said to poke fun at themselves also, for both figures appear at odd moments in caricature. Marion Davies stands looking at herself in one scene, with the double made up in a very diffarent fashion. But the main impersonation throughout is very palpably that of Gloria Swanson. Marion Davies imitates her mannerisms, particularly with her mouth, in many of the scenes. If this picture set out to picture the career of a star like Gloria Swanson, who went to Hollywood and crashed the pictures by way of Mack Sennet's comedy gate, later rising to stardom in the drama and coming back from Europe with a title, to further dazzle the eyes of her companions of the film colony, then it must have created a rather startling impression in Hollywood. There is an undercurrent of something more than pleasantry to "Show People."

It is a very entertaining picture, nevertheless, and gives a very intimate glimpse of things as they really are in Hollywood. It shows the making of pictures, with directors reigning over the destinies of the little puppets that answer to their nod. One episode shows the despair of the director who essays to make Marion Davies cry. He reminds her of many piteous things, from the visionary spectacle of her own father starving to death to the inclusion in the imaginary scene of 20,000 dying Armenians. But when pathos and appeal fail to achieve the desired result, the lowly onion does the work. However, when Marion Davies starts to cry, they cannot stop her and an ensuing laughing scene is threatened with disaster.

Peggy Pepper is the little girl from Georgia who arrives with her father in Hollywood and prepares to accept a position in the dramatic section of the movies. She finds that her abilities lead to slapstick comedy instead, but later graduates to a more artistic field.

Then she gets very "upstage" and "high hats" her associates of former days. Billy Doone (William Haines) who has helped her to achieve her goal, is discarded in favor of a tinpan Count who powders his face lavishly and gazes at himself in a hand mirror. Later, on the day scheduled for her wedding to the Count, Billy, by means of a custard pie, brings her to her senses and the feature ends happily

The comedy, with Stan Laurel and fat-faced Oliver Hardy, as "Two Tars," is a whirligig affair of swift action, picturing the adventures of two reckless gobs who go holidaying in a brokendown bus and cause much commotion on the highway.

The news reels in introduction to the program have some interesting scenes depicting the great Eucharistic Congress held recently at Australia.

AT THE REGENT.

BEAUTIFUL FIRST NATIONAL STAR GETS MOST INDIVIDUAL CHARACTERIZATION TO DATE IN "AMERICAN BEAUTY."

Billie Dove rejoices that at last she has been given an opportunity to essay a distinctive screen characterization.

The long awaited opportunity comes in "American Beauty," her most recent starring production for First National Pictures, now playing at the Regent Theatre.

Although she has had prominent featured roles in many outstanding pictures, this gives her the most individual part to date.

In "American Beauty," as the poor, ambitious working girl who endeavors to maintain an appearance of wealth and luxury by many ingenious and humorous devices, she has opportunity to display all her talents as an actress of ability, and all those who have witnessed the production declare her performance is one of the most brilliant of her screen career.

"American Beauty," an adaptation of a short story by Wallace Irwin, was produced for First National by Carey Wilson and directed by Richard Wallace. The supporting cast includes Lloyd Hughes in the masculine lead, Walter McGrail, Margaret Livingston, Lucien Prival, Al St. John, Edythe Chapman, Alice White, Loretta Young, and others.

LEAFS FACE HEAVY GRIND

Joliat Leads Goal Scorers in National League With Three Counters.

AT OTTAWA TO-NIGHT.

TORONTO, Nov. 20.— The Maple Leafs have a busy five days ahead of them and they can greatly improve their position in the league race by taking two out of the three games they play, to-night in Ottawa, Thursday against the Americans in New York and on Saturday at home against the Maroons. All three opposing clubs are in the Canadian group and along with the Canadiens they all have two points to show for their first two games while the locals are leading the chase with a possible four. Neither Ottawa nor the Americans have won a game yet, but neither have lost one, both their engagements terminating in overtime ties and neither of these clubs look strong in relief players, a department in which the Leafs are particularly well fortified. Wins over both the Senators and Americans are possible and the locals will come home to meet the club that has been their jinx for the last three seasons A win over the Maroons on Saturday would make the local club for the season. However, it is a pretty hard task that faces the club. They leave this morning for Ottawa and return to-morrow morning and then leave in the evening for New York.

Aural Joliat of Canadiens has scored three goals so far this season while four other players, Bill Carson of the Leafs, Nels Stewart of Maroons, Butch Keeling of the Rangers and Vic Ripley of Chicago have each scored two, Carson and Stewart also having one assist. These five players have accounted for more than one-third of the 31 goals scored in the ten games as twenty others have scored one each. Of the seventeen assists credited so far, the Leafs have had four, Carson, Bailey, Cox and Primeau making the pass for goal scoring efforts by team mates.

COMMITTEE FAVORS BUYING GAS PLANT

Oshawa Ratepayers Will Vote On Purchase of Two Public Utilities.

OSHAWA, November 20. — The committee of the City Council which conferred with the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario in connection with the purchase of the local Hydro-Electric distribution system and the local gas plant recommended last night the purchase of these operations. A recommendation was also made that an agreement with the Commission and the Province of Ontario be arranged, and that the matter be brought in compact form to the City Council, so that a general vote of the ratepayers might be taken on the question.

The price agreed upon in the parley was $520,000 for all the assets in connection with the operations. From this amount would be deducted all operating profits on the two systems after October 31, 1928.

The Council further recommended that upon the purchase of such assets of these two systems, the control and management along with the local waterworks system should be placed under a Public Utilities Commission from the City of Oshawa.

Messrs. Long & Davies, of Toronto, assistant city solicitors, will be requested to prepare all agreements, by-laws, and other documents in connection with the purchase of the systems.

PARENTS UNDERSTOOD THIS BABY'S LANGUAGE

"We thought we were going to lose our baby, teething," says a Kentucky mother. "He couldn't digest anything and was getting thinner every day. After one of his fretful, crying nights, I thought of Castoria and got some. A few drops made him comfortable, and after a few doses, he seemed like a different baby." Doctors everywhere recommend purely-vegetable, harmless Fletcher's Castoria for colds, constipation, colic and other ills of babies and children, and millions of mothers know its gentle influence is best. Avoid imitations. The Fletcher signature is the mark of genuine Castoria.

ALL IN READINESS FOR WINTER FAIR

Exhibits of Livestock and Farm Produce Larger Than Ever.

TORONTO, November 20. — Carpenters and decorators, executive staff and exhibitors, are working overtime at the Coliseum to have everything in readiness when the Royal Winter Fair opens to-morrow.

The Coliseum arcade, running the entire distance around the main arena, has been completely made over and will house the display of the Dominion and Provincial Governments, which will picture Canada's agricultural wealth.

A keen spirit of rivalry has arisen between Ontario and British Columbia in the exhibition of many products, especially that of honey. The judging this year will determine the supremacy of the most worthy exhibit of this toothsome commodity, which each province claims to possess. The British Columbia exhibit this year is the most ambitious display ever attempted by the Pacific Province, and will show the wide range of garden, orchard, and field crops that temperate climate and fertile soil make possible.

Decorations in the main arena are carried out in the new futurist style. They will make a colorful setting for the Horse Show and Military Ride by the Royal Canadian Dragoons. The military ride which is a nightly feature, will be embellished this year by new lighting effects, which include small electric globes on the end of each rider's lance.

The official opening of the show will take place to-morrow evening by Premier Mackenzie King, to be followed by the All-Canadian Products dinner, an annual feature of the Fair. The first evening's program also includes the opening jumps for the International Challenge Cup, participated in by a picked team from the United States permanent artillery and cavalry organizations. A Royal Canadian Dragoons team will represent Canada. Five open stakes of $1,000 each, of jumper, saddle, and hunter classes, and two all-Canadian stakes for $300 each, will also be included. Trick and fancy riding, and music by the Toronto Concert Band, round out the program.

"Now don't forget to bring me Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I am feeling so much better I don't want to miss a single dose."

Your Child's Cold Needs this Double Treatment

CHILDREN hate to be "dosed." When rubbed on, Vicks relieves colds 2 ways at once without "dosing":

(1) Its healing vapors, released by the body heat, are inhaled direct to the air passages;

(2) "It draws out" the soreness like an old-fashioned poultice.

MINING BRIEFS

A Special Service to The Examiner

The identity of the parties who were negotiating for 500,000 shares of Bathurst Mines will soon be disclosed. At the present time names must be withheld, but the group, Canadian by the way, will be able to make announcement in the near future. It was mentioned several days ago that a pool was working in this stock and that one group had taken up a block of shares at a reported price of 40 cents while another group were negotiating for one million shares. Interest was aroused and the name of this latter group is being asked.

Preparations have been made, states a report from Amos, for the deepening of the shaft on the Thompson-Cadillac property from the 300 to the 600 foot level. In the meantime, cross-cutting is continuing on the 300 foot level with nothing of material importance said to have been obtained as yet. The test mill on the property has been treating small amounts of ore obtained from raising. Results in extraction are not available as yet. This property which shows two veins averaging four feet in width, has indicated important gold values over narrow sections, continues the report with some of the ore being extremely high grade.

The management of Alexandria Gold Mines have received a wire which states that the sampling on the Babine-Bonanza property of the company has indicated 22,000 tons of ore averaging $27.30 per ton. This tonnage can be augmented by lower grade after milling operations became stabilized. The Government is now assisting the company in building the road and this should be ready to take in machinery by the end of the present month. The machinery should be installed at once. Regarding the Company's original property—the Alexandria Gold Mine—the mine manager wires that samples from the north crosscut in No. 1 Tunnel beyond the shaft gives $128 in gold and 13 ounces of silver per ton. The company is now negotiating with the Granby for shipment of their ore to them in the near future.

A report from Nelson states that the ore just opened up on the main tunnel of the Kootenay Florence would appear to be an offshoot of the main ore chimney. The main body is presumed to be about 100 to the south.

Operations on what is known as Beath's property, a group of claims situated a few miles from the Falconbridge Nickel, commenced last week. This property is said to have interesting surface showings, the most important of which is a large quartz vein lying between a hanging wall of conglomerate and a footwall of norite, in places 40 feet wide, and carrying values in gold with some leaf copper showing. It is planned to sink a small shaft on this vein for the purpose of getting it in shape for systematic sampling by engineers. A second showing on the property consists of an exposure of sulphides with a gossan area or burn extending over a width of 200 feet and yielding values in copper and nickel. Some diamond drilling may be done on this showing at a later date.

Howey directors are now in session at present at what is expected to be a routine monthly gathering. There is a possibility, however, of some decision in regard to the erection of a mill being made. The Financial News Bureau has the assurance of President J. E. Hammell that such announcement will be made soon.

Teck Hughes Shareholders Hear Bullish News at Annual Meeting; Same Officers Elected

The chairman who presided at the annual meeting of shareholders at Teck Hughes Gold Mines, Limited held in Buffalo yesterday informed shareholders that the annual report as published was to be regarded as very conservative.

General Manager Forbes, in his address, stated that the management estimated that the grade of ore for the coming year would average $16.00 and stated his belief that the low grade ore in the mine had been nearly all milled.

New ore bodies in the western section are proving important. One of these 200 feet long found on three levels is proving a decided addition to physical assets.

Mr. Forbes also informed shareholders that it was certain ore existed far below the nineteenth level, where the ore is the widest in the mine. A grealy increased tonnage was expected. There had been no faulting anywhere to interrupt the ore bodies. It is expected that the Company during the current year would earn .70 per share on the stock outstanding. Cash asset now amounted to $2,000,000.

The new shaft will not materially affect costs, according to Mr. Forbes. A total of 5,400 feet of excellent grade ore had been developed between the 14th and 19th levels.

Canada Dredge Registers Gains On Toronto Market

TORONTO, November 20 (Canadian Press). — After a slow but firm start, the market became quite active on the Toronto Stock Exchange to-day. Canada Dredge Preferred shot up seven points to 195, while Common gained a half at 65½.

Hayes Wheels advanced six at 48. Massey-Harris recovered and gained five at 93½ in strong trading. Cockshutt at 38 was up one, as was Page-Hersey at 114. Maple Leaf gained three to 153. Canadian Pacific Railway gained 2⅛ to 236. Hiram Walker was up 1¼ at 83½.

International Nickel went up 1½ at 195½, while New Stock rose ⅝ to 33½ on the curb market. Brazilian was down a half to 73½.

Among the unlisted securities, Dominion Power was the feature, and in heavy buying gained six points to 72. It had opened at 75, however, and after dropping to 67 recovered at noon.

International Petroleum advanced ¾ to 50½, Service Station 1¼ to 50, and McColl-Frontenac ¼ to 36¾. Imperial Oil was down ⅛ at 91¾, while British-American Oil was unchanged.

Orders From Europe Boost Wheat Values

CHICAGO, November 20 (Canadian Press). — Enlarged estimates of world requirements of wheat helped given an early upward trend to wheat values to-day. Furthermore, it was reported that Europe is absorbing Canadian and Argentine wheat steadily and that India is taking new wheat from Australia. Opening unchanged to ⅝ higher. Wheat prices afterward showed some gain all around.

Corn and oats were likewise firmer with corn starting a shade lower to ½ advance, and subsequently scoring a general upturn.

Wheat, December 115¼, March 120⅝. Corn, December 84¼, March 86⅞. Oats, December 45⅞, March 46¼.

Heavy Trading Feature On Standard Exchange

TORONTO, Nov. 20. — (Canadian Press.)—Heavy trading featured an irregular market on the standard stock exchange to-day. Aconda gained three to 13, Bathurst one to 38, Bidgood one to 36, Hollinger Consolidated ten at 8.40, McIntyre twenty to 19.95, Noranda thirty-five to 53.50, Sudbury-Basin fifteen to 7.25, Amulet was down three at 2.72, Barry Hollinger one at 33, Lake Shore fifteen at 18.10, Malartic four at 1.06, Mining Corporation three at 3.37, Murphy two at 72, Teck Hughes fifteen at 8.35, and Towagmac ten at 2.75.

Wright-Hargreaves was in demand at 1.96, a gain of 11 cents. Sherritt-Gordon dropped ten to 6.65, Dome Mines went up fifteen to 8.50, while Howey Gold dropped twelve to 1.03. Hudson Bay gained ten to 20.10, Abana dropped five to 3.50, Big Missouri four to 60 and Mandy Mines five to 1.35.

Dupont Leads Rush On New York Exchange

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—(Canadian Press).—High priced stocks were whirled upward in a sensational fashion on the New York Stock Exchange as the bull movement, interrupted by profit taking yesterday was resumed in full swing. So great was the accumulation of orders that the ticker tape fell eighty-three minutes behind.

Dupont was the spectacular individual feature, soaring sixty points to a new high record at 500. Case Threshing Machine ran up 32 points to 481, Radio 23½ points to 355 and Greene-Canane Copper, Keith-Albee Orpheum preferred, Liquid Carbonic, International Harvester, Johns Manville, Woolworth, May Department Stores, Pittsburg Coal and Standard Oil of California, climbed 5 to 10 points all touching new peak prices. Curtiss, Wright, Allied Chemical, Victor Talking Machine and Rossia Insurance soared 5 to 9 points but did not touch new highs.

Call money was in fairly plentiful supply at the renewal rate of six and a half percent.

One of the interesting features of the days' advance was the increased buying in the stocks of the sugar and textile companies, many of which are just emerging from periods of depression. Railroad shares which also have participated but little in recent advance, were in better demand.

BIG MINE EXCHANGE DEVELOPS QUICKLY

Standard Exchange, Now the Largest in World, Adopts New Headquarters.

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 20 (Canadian Press).—An important step forward in the history of the Standard Mining Exchange, the largest mining exchange in the world, has just been made. After less than two years in what were expected to be commodious quarters, the Exchange is preparing to move into a new building, purchased at a cost of $265,000. Another $100,000 will be spent to convert the new quarters into a modern stock exchange, and they will be occupied in about six months.

The growth of the mining industry with consequent numerous new listings has been so rapid as to render entirely inadequate the present quarters on Richmond street near Yonge. The new headquarters are the former property of the Bell Telephone Company on Adelaide street, between Yonge and Bay, not far from the Toronto Stock Exchange.

Tentative plans for the remodelling of the building show that on the top floor, in addition to the trading area, which will be twice as large as that in the present quarters, executive offices and a lounge room will be established. The roof is to be raised five feet, and while alterations are under way, the acoustics of the room will be improved. The quotation board will be 90 feet in length and will face a large gallery for spectators. It will be possible to accommodate at least seventy telephone cabinets, and an improved call system is to be provided.

Improvements in the trading system will be possible in the new quarters. The use of trading areas, only newly commenced, will be extended and page boys will be engaged to collect records of transactions from the members.

The history of the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange dates from 1896, when the Rossland mining boom was at its height. The present organization is a consolation of the Toronto Mining and Industrial Exchange and the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange, the latter being founded in 1899. The first board room was located in the offices of Currie and Campbell, 52 Yonge street, but, following a brief period of sessions there, the Exchange met for business in the old Board of Trade Building at the corner of Front and Yonge streets. Following the merger of the two exchanges an extension of trading facilities became necessary and premises were leased at Scott and Colborn streets. This was the home of the Exchange until 1912, when a move was made to 56-58 King street west. In January, 1927, the present quarters at 15 Richmond street west were engaged in the belief, as stated by an official at that time, that "the new quarters provided ample space and equipment for the future as well as the present." The Bell Telephone Company has not occupied the building for some time.

INSPECTOR DENIES BEING INTOXICATED

Claims He Is Fourth Generation of Family That Never Drank.

NEW YORK, November 20. Canadian Press. — Captain Edward Keane, Department of Commerce, Inspector of Hulls, shouted a denial to-day that he had been intoxicated when he passed the Vetris, which sank a week ago, with the loss of more than one hundred lives. He was the first witness to-day at the investigation of the sinking being conducted by the United States steamboat inspection service.

The presiding officer read a letter which said that Captain Keane on the day of the inspection of the Vestris, had breakfast on board, "swilling whiskey and beer in the ship's bar," and had left in the afternoon with a "certain weakness in his legs."

bar," and had left in the afternoon

"The whole thing is the most outrageous lie I ever heard," he said. "I am the fourth generation of a family which has never touched a drop."

The Captain said he found everything on the Vestris, which it was his duty to inspect in good order.

TWENTY-SIX PUPILS PASS FINAL TESTS

Life Saving Examinations Are Conducted in Y.W.C.A. Swimming Pool.

CLASS CONGRATULATED.

Rev. J. D. Paterson is the Official Examining Officer For the Society.

With standards for proficiency in the many tests, set high, the final life-saving examinations held at the Y.W.C.A. on Saturday evening last were productive of clever response on the part of a large class of candidates, of which twenty-six pupils of Miss Littlefield, physical director, were successful. Conducting the tests was the Rev. Douglas Paterson, who, at the conclusion, complimented teacher and candidates. He also spoke of the benefits of the knowledge gained thereby.

There were numerous tests, including elementary, proficiency, bronze medallion test, merit test and others. The requirements of each were listed as follows:

Elementary Test.

The rescue drill on land.

The release drill on land.

The drill for the Schafer method of resuscitation.

The drill for the rescue in the water, second and fourth methods, together with one method of release, subject to be carried over ten yards.

Object diving from the surface of the water.

Swimming distance of 50 yards breast stroke and 25 yards back stroke.

Hilda Babbs was the only candidate.

The Proficiency Certificate Test.

The rescue and release drill on land.

The Schafer method of resuscitation and promotion of warmth and circulation.

Each candidate performs four methods of rescue and three of release in the water, the drowning subject carried over ten yards.

Swimming one hundred yards, breast stroke, and 50 yards back stroke, the latter without use of hands. Also dive to depth of not less than five feet from surface of water and bring up weighted objects of 5 lbs.

Candidates: Mary Terrace, Betsy Scott, Beverly Rogers, Audrey Johnson, Ann Macdonald.

Bronze Medallion Test

Candidates must be over 14 years of age and have passed the proficiency certificate.

The test shall comprise: (a) The rescue, release and resuscitation land drill. (b) Four methods of rescue and three of release combined, shown in the water, the drowning subject carried over twenty yards. Expert ability in diving from the surface for a heavy object in depth of five feet of water. (c) A complete knowledge of all the information contained in Parts 1 and 2 of the handbook.

Candidates—Grace Comstock, Ruby Milburn. The latter had the honor of passing the test, but was too young to receive the medallion.

The Award of Merit Test

The examination consists of the six following tests which must be performed in a meritorious manner. (a) To carry a person attired in bathing suit by the second method of rescue a distance of twenty yards. (b) To swim continuously attired in all clothes except shoes a distance of 600 yards by three different strokes, viz. 200 yards breast stroke, 200 yards back stroke using arms and leg, 200 yards either side, trudgeon, crawl, double overarm or back without use of arms. (c) To undress on the surface of the water. (d) To dive from the surface of the water to a depth of over five feet, raise and land an object over five pounds. (e) To dive neatly from two heights, five feet and over eight feet. (f) To perform three of seventeen scientific movements prescribed in the hand-book.

A maximum of ten points shall be allowed for each swimming stroke, dive and movement.

A candidate failing to obtain five points shall be deemed to have failed and cannot be re-examined except by the approval of the executive and if re-examined the whole test in the order stated must again be performed.

Three members of the class successfully passed this test: Jean Maconomy, Helen Cole, Hazel Bradley.

Demonstrations

One feature of the evening which was especially pleasing was the rescut act of eight-year-old Dorothy Boyle, who went into the pool after her six-year-old sister, Marjory, and demonstrated the second method of life saving. At an examination, held two weeks previous, Dorothy had passed her elementary test. During those tests, Helen Rogers, Gladys Johnson, Elsie Lemon, Nora Scully, Betty Castle, Jean Cole, Marion Harvey and Eileen Bowler passed the proficiency test. At the same time, Doris Rogers, Jean Harvey, Mary Brooks, Verna Huffman, Helen Tewsley and Helen Cole tried the bronze medallion test and took their written tests on Saturday evening.

Previous to the close of the examinations, the Rev. Mr. Paterson announced that the closing swimming exhibition would be held on Friday evening, November 23, at 8 o'clock, when a full program of races, stunts, diving, competition for various trophies and a life-saving demonstration will be run off.

IN FETERBOROUGH CHURCHES

ST. JAMES UNITED

Rev. Geo. E. Morley B.A., of Toronto was in charge of both services in St. James United Church on Sunday Nov. 18th. After being introduced by the pastor, Rev. Mr. Morley conducted the service. His address was not in the form of a stereotyped sermon but was rather a "sermon recital," based on 1 Kings beginning at the 23rd verse. "The Driving of Jehu" was the title of the gripping tale told from the text found in 2 Kings: 9:20. The underlying thought running through the story was that "the wages of sin is death." This truth was illustrated principally by the story of Ahab and Jezebel. Now Ahab coveted the lands of Naman, but he did not wish to give up the lands of his fathers. Ahab, the wealthy ruler, was thrown into a rage by his effront and when his wife Jezebel discovered the cause, she set about to remedy it. Secretly, she wrote letters to the leaders in the city and had them entrap Naman and stone him to death. Then she went to Ahab and told him to go and take possession of the desired lands, for "Naman is dead."

"When Ahab was pacing about the grounds gloating over his triumph, he was suddenly confronted by Elijah, the prophet, who fearlessly denounced his base deeds and prophesied a dreadful death for both he and his queen.

"This prophecy was partly fulfilled by the death of Ahab in battle, shortly afterwards. His son Joarim now came to the throne.

"Discontent had been growing against the house of Ahab, but the sequel to the story was not until ten years later. The torch was now applied to Elisha upon whom the mantle of Elijah had to advance against Joarim. Elisha supplied this lack by choosing and anointing Jehu as the new ruler. His choice was good for Jehu was energetic and a good leader. At once he led his force toward the palace of Joarim who was convalescing from a wound received in battle. "When his army was seen approaching, Joarim sent a messenger to him to see if it was peace or war. The messengers did not return, so at last Joarim went himself. He was shot down by Jehu whose army swept on inside the gates of the city. As they passed the palace, Jezebel leaned far over the balustrade and called out "Is it peace or war?" In answer, Jehu called upon any who were on his side to push Jezebel over the rampart. She fell to the pavement and was ruthlessly run down by the conquering forces. Thus Elijah's prophesy was fulfilled in her case as well and the "wages of sin were indeed death." In this fast age of "getting" let us beware that we do not follow in Ahab's footsteps and lest retribution fall upon us too."

Tale of Two Cities.

An incident from the "Tale of Two Cities" was used as another illustration. A nobleman was driving furiously through the narrow streets of a French village scattering the women, men and children from his pathway. Suddenly, a man darted out and picked from beneath the horses' feet his child who had been killed beneath the carriage wheels. Scornfully, the nobleman tossed a gold coin to the stricken man and drove on.

The next morning when the nobleman's servant knocked at his door there was no answer. Entering he found his master dead, stabbed in the heart with a knife. It was the work of the dead child's father. Once again retribution had been swift. Do we too, figuratively, ride down our poorer friends?

The story of Macbeth's treachery toward his king, Duncan, in murdering him while a guest in Macbeth's home was next quoted. When coming from executing his foul deed he was met by his wife, Lady Macbeth, who sent him to wash his hands. This incident so preyed upon her mind that afterwards she walked in her sleep, continually washing her hands. Here, again, punishment was sure. We do not murder our guests in their rooms, but we do not often present a smooth smiling face to them and later rip them up the back with the dagger of gosip or scandal?

The point of these stories was enforced in the closing remarks. The law of compensation is certain—effect must follow cause. Some may sin and get along very well on earth, but some time and somewhere their reward is sure. God is not mocked. "Whatsovere a man soweth that shall he also reap."

At the evening service, which opened with a service of song led by the junior choir, Dr. Morley held in tense interest, his audience wtih the thrilling story of Ben Hur. This was his own version of the book revised many times until he felt it a better sermon than any preacher could deliver. The keynote was carefully explained so that no one could miss its significance; namely that all kingdoms of earth, material and social, must be made subservient to the kingdom of Heaven. The wonderful story based on the life of Jesus followed, told in splendid dramatic style by Dr. Morley, beginning with the early days of Ben Hur and continuing to a beautiful climax in the scene of the crucifixion of Christ.

Splendid music was provided by the choir under the direction of the organist, F. Stevens. The duet, "My Redeemer," was beautifully sung by Mrs. E. Kitney and Mrs. Monks. A quartette, "Always the Same," by four sisters, Mesdames McKinstry, Robinson, Monks and Kitney, and a solo, "Face to Face," by Mrs. H. Turner, were greatly appreciated by the congregation at the evening service.

Kingston To Get Power From Gatineau Falls

(Special to The Examiner)

KINGSTON, Ont., Nov. 20.— It is expected that Kingston will be securing power from the Gatineau on Thursday.

It was announced this morning that a test of the line had been made from Smith's Falls to Kingston and from Smith's Falls to Brockville and thence on to Cedar Rapids and this test had been most satisfactory. This new power will be the means of providing all extra power Kingston will need for industries and should mean a big impetus to the industrial expansion of Kingston.

WATCHMAN GIVES ALARM

Early Morning Fire Breaks Out at Rear of 371 Bethune Street.

$850 DAMAGE.

Watchman Metters was the hero of the occasion this morning at 4.25 when he discovered a bad fire behind the houses at 371 and 373 Bethune street. He aroused the inmates and called out the fire department. Mr. Metters, who is the C.N.R. watchman at the Simcoe street gates, noticed, while making his rounds, some smoke and flames belching from the rear of the houses on Bethune street. Running into the homes he awakened the inhabitants and then he called the fire department. When the department arrived on the scene they found the wooden frame shed in the rear of these buildings to be in a mass of flames. Two lines of hose were quickly laid, and within an hour the fire was practically out, but not before the shed was almost completely destroyed. The contents of the building, some furniture and two bicycles, were completely destroyed. The back kitchen of one of the houses was badly damaged and scorched by the smoke and flames. The building was partly covered by insurance.

The cause of the fire is not known. The total damage done is estimated at about $850.00. The building was owned by Mr. A. Lowe, who has had the building shingled and redecorated this summer. The heat from the fire was so intense that it scorched the back of some of the sheds that were across the lane.

LONDON INDIGNANT OVER INVESTIGATION

Daily News Characterizes Inquiry Into Vestris Wreck as Prosecution.

LONDON, Nov. 20 (Canadian Press) —The conduct of the inquiry being held in New York into the sinking of the Vestris drew indignant comment from two of this morning's papers.

The Daily News characterized the procedure as "bullying, biased, ignorant and inconceivably stupid, suggesting preconceived resolve to vilify British seamanship at all costs and despite all proof to the contrary." The paper added that the methods had aroused deep indignation in Great Britain.

The Daily Express said: "Bowery methods of treating unfortunate witnesses as if they were criminals conspiring to deceive, caused the greatest resentment in this country.

THREE PLANTS ARE INSPECTED

Only One Case of Contagious Disease is Reported By M.O.H.

REPORT READ.

While there was nothing of a startling nature in the letter received from the Provincial Department reporting certain deficiencies found during the inspection of three Peterborough pasteurization plants, the local Board of Health, meeting this morning, decided to send a copy of that portion of the report pertaining to the respective plants to the owners with the notification that the defects must be remedied. One of the three mentioned was said to be almost entirely satisfactory, while another had been found to have faulty water supply. Changes in mechanical arrangements will be necessary.

Consideration of applications for, or refusals to install proper sanitary conveniences, as contained in communications or reported by city officials, also required considerable time at this morning's meeting, the Board deciding to send out necessary notices suited to the several cases dealt with. Extensions were granted the more worthy cases, while at least two citizens will be required to overcome their private feelings on the matter and make the required installations in the very near future.

Excellent Record.

During the course of the meeting, Dr. T. W. H. Young, medical officer of health for the city, stated that his department has a particularly clean slate so far as placards are concerned, for at the present time there is but one case of measles in the city, and that case came from Toronto by motor. Incidentally, the report of Queen Mary Hospital was equally satisfactory, reading as follows:

Number of patients in hospital at end of October	2
City Cases.
Infantile paralysis	1
Mumps	1
Diphtheria	2
Out of City Cases.
Diphtheria	1
Number of patients discharged during month	3
Number of patients in hospital, November 1	2

Previous to the close of the meeting, Alderman McIntyre gave a brief but interesting account of the 5th annual Health Convention in Toronto at which Dr Bell, Deputy Minister of Health, had been the speaker.

Engineers Hold Annual Banquet

UNDER UNITED ACTION FUTURE OF ENGINEERING MAY BE ASSURED DECLARED PROMINENT SPEAKER

President of Engineering Institute of Canada is Leading Speaker at Banquet.

DINNER A BIG SUCCESS.

Engineers Practising All the Branches of the Profession Are Included in Association.

The Divine Insanity of noble minds
That never falters nor abates,
But labors and endures and waits
Till all that it foresees, it finds,
Or what it cannot find, creates.

Thus, one of the speakers lauded the spirit of the engineering profession during the annual dinner of the Peterborough branch of the Engineering Institute of Canada, held in the Empress Hotel last evening. Graced by the presence of prominent officials of the Institute from Montreal and Toronto, and featured by an impressive program of toasts and addresses by members of the engineering as well as representatives of sister professions, the annual dinner crowned with success the labors of an energetic executive and afforded fresh impetus to the season's activities of the local branch.

Among the guest speakers were Julian C. Smith, M.I.E.C., president of the Engineering Institute of Canada and vice-president and general manager of the Shawinigan Water and Power Company; R. J. Durley, permanent secretary of the Institute; Fraser S. Keith, member of the Council of the E.I.C., of Montreal; Professor P. Gillespie, representative of the Toronto Branch and a past vicepresident of the E.I.C.; V. J. McElderry, K.C., president of the Peterborough Law Association; Dr. F. P. McNulty, president of the Medical Association; Rev. J. L. Hughes, president of the Peterborough Ministerial Association; G. S. Mattice, of the Teachers' Association; F. H. Dobbin, and W. T. Fanjoy.

Chairman W. M. Cruthers, A.M.E.I.C.

Presiding over the dinner meeting, Chairman W. M. Cruthers proved a capable master of ceremonies. Following the banquet, he introduced the program by a short address, in which he reviewed the aims of the Engineering Institute, and the possibilities that the future holds for the profession.

"In agriculture, lumbering, mining, and the manufacturing industries, mechanically inclined men are destined to play a great part," he declared.

The Engineering Institute.

"The Engineering Institute of Canada is unique among other national organizations, in that it includes in its membership, engineers practising all branches of the profession," said R. L. Dobbin, in proposing the toast to the Engineering Institute. "It was formed in 1887 as the Canadian Society of Civil Engineers, and in 1918 the name was changed to its present form. We have now 4,700 members of all classes, located in every part of the Dominion," he continued.

"The Institute has been fortunate in having many distinguished engineers as its president. Notable among them have been the late Walter J. Francis, R. A. Ross, and J. M. R. Fairbairn, all of whom we claim to have been Peterborough men; yet not the least of the engineers who have occupied that high office is the present incumbent, Julian C. Smith, who has honored us by his presence to-night. This is not his first visit to the Peterborough Branch, for he came to us at our banquet in 1920. Gentlemen, is not the Institute in good hands? Let us drink to the Engineering Institute!"

President Smith.

Mr. Smith, responding, complimented the local branch on the evening's gathering. "As you know, the Institute has grown from a small beginning until now it boasts thousands of members," said he.

"One might speak of the past, present, or future of the Institute, but but I do not choose to speak of the past. While in England last summer I met Rudyard Kipling, the first man to use the term 'cold iron.' Mr. Kipling was very much interested in the Engineering Institute, particularly in Canada.

"The future of the Institute is that thing in which we are most interested, for we must maintain the influence of it to keep the members of the profession joined together. This will be difficult because of geographic conditions, and the Branch must necessarily play a great part.

"No man can get out more than he puts into the Institute, which has been organized for the mutual benefits to be derived—one member from the other."

The speaker dealt with membership fees as applied to student members and regular members, as well as with

CREW ABSENT FROM STATIONS

Senior Officer Says Subordinates Ignored His Orders On Vestris.

CHAINS BROKE.

NEW YORK, November 21. — A retired United States naval officer took over the questioning at the federal inquiry into the sinking of the British steamer Vestris to-day, and elicited from the senior surviving officer of the ship that his subordinates ignored his orders when the vessel was sinking, that the crew members were absent from their stations at the lifeboats, and that the women and children passengers were placed in the most dangerously situated boats.

The United States naval officer was Captain E. T. Jessup, American nautical adviser to United States Commissioner O'Neill, who is presiding at the hearing. The witness was Frank Johnson, the chief officer of the Vestris.

NEW YORK, Nov. 21. — Johnson said the release mechanism consisted of a handle which when pulled down was supposed to release the boats. Efforts to use it failed, and in two instances the chains attached to the handles broke.

United States Attorney Tuttle who is conducting the inquiry before Commissioner F. A. O'Neill, said that on the suggestion of Captain Henry McConkey, British expert, acting as adviser at the hearing, the master of the Vestris, who preceded Captain Carey, who went down with his ship, would be called. The Lamport and Holt Company, owners of the ship, would also be permitted to place on the stand any officials or employees who might throw any light on the tragedy, which cost more than 100 lives.

Chilled Dog Tips Over Fire Pot and Burns To Death

DENVER, Colo., Nov. 21.—Efforts of the pet dog of Mrs. Mary Stone to get warm resulted in his being burned to death along with six chickens the other night. Mrs. Stone had placed a bowl of hot coals in her chickenhouse to take the chill off the air. The dog, locked out of the home, crawled into the chickenhouse to keep warm and knocked over the bowl of coals.

REVOLVER GOES OFF IN BOY'S POCKET

NO ELECTION IS EXPECTED UNTIL 1930

Decision Is Likely To Be Aired at Great Conservative Convention.

COMMENCES TO-DAY.

Premier Is Prepared to Abandon Policy of Three Sessions As Life of Parliament.

TORONTO, Nov. 21.—Unless developments at the next Legislature session make a 1929 election imperative, the Ferguson Government, it is understood, will not go to the people until June, 1930.

A definite understanding as to this program, it is said, will be reached—officially, if quietly — at the annual Provincial party convention which opens in Toronto this afternoon and continues until to-morrow night.

While the Government is reported to have at no time considered seriously the question of bringing on an election next year, the word that "something's doing" certainly got out to the hustings, with the result that during the summer months past Conservative members of the Legislature were shaping their courses for the battle presumed to hang in the offing. Now, it is learned, this preparedness activity has been suspended.

The Ferguson Government was returned to power on Dec. 1, 1926. Since then two sessions of the Legislature have been held, although, technically speaking, the Government has been in power less than twenty-three months. A third session of the House will be under way before the Government is much more than two years old.

In view of this short reign at Queen's Park, Premier Ferguson is prepared, it is said, to abandon the old Conservative Government policy of appealing to the electors after three sessions, and will call four sessions of the House before he waves his signals for the next "battle of the ballots."

A 1930 election, undoubtedly, has the favor of most of the Conservative members as well as the majority of Cabinet Ministers. A 1930 election would mean an extra indemnity for every member, and a postponement for one year of that "bad hour" when one has to dig down deeply into one's pocket for the expense money—considerable in many cases, too—without which no election can be fought, either to victory or loss.

MAKE BID FOR WORLD MARKET

Three British Automobile Firms To Amalgamte Under Name of the Humber Limited.

HAVE LARGE CAPITAL.

LONDON, Nov. 21. —(Canadian Press).—With the intention of challenging the American supremacy in the world automobile market, three of the leading British firms will be amalgamated under the name of Humber Limited. The firms are Commer Cars Limited, Humber Limited, and Hillman Motor Car Co., Limited.

"We mean to concentrate on producing a car which will win first place in the worlds' markets and excel any American car of the equivalent price" an official of one of the companies said. He added that the eventual aim of the amalgamation was to rival the General Motors Company of America.

The new combine will have an initial capital of £1,250,000 ($6,250,000). No public issue of shares is intended.

HORSESHOE FIRES REVOLVER; BULLET ENTERS LEG OF YOUTH

Leslie James Is Injured While Throwing Horseshoes Outside Nashua Plant.

RUSHED TO HOSPITAL.

Boy Did Not Know That Firearm Contained a Loaded Shell.

Shot in the leg while throwing horseshoes when the revolver he carried in his pocket went off, Leslie James 18 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. William James, 210 Perry street, lies in Nicholls Hospital.

The accident occurred at noon yesterday beside the Nashau Paper Company plant. Leslie James returned early after dinner to throw horseshoes with some of his friends at the Nashua plant, where he is employed, as he did nearly every noon hour. Soon the game was on and young James forgot that he was carrying a loaded revolver in his pocket. He swung a horseshoe in his hand and in the course of bringing it up for delivery it struck the revolver in his pocket. There was a loud report and the lad fell with a 32 calibre bullet imbedded in his left shin bone. He was rushed first to his home and then to Nicholls Hospital, where he was attended by Dr. G. A. Howson.

The revolver carried by the lad was an old disused one that had been thrown away into a neighbor's yard. There was no handle to it and part of the barrel was broken off. The revolver finally found its way into the hands of Leslie James' young brother. The older boy put tape around the butt for a handle and used it sometimes when he went to the woods with his chums. The old gun never shot well, but he always kept it beneath his pillow at night, telling his mother that it would scare off burglars if they came in the night. He forgot to remove the gun yesterday morning and his young brother, who was home from school, found it and played at shooting burglars all morning. When the older lad returned at noon from work he took the gun from his brother and in a hurry to join the daily game of horseshoes merely put it in his pocket No one in the family thought that the revolver contained any shells, but there was one in it. The force of the horseshoe striking the hammer was sufficient to explode the shell.

1,000 DELEGATES AT BIG CONVENTION

TORONTO, Nov. 21. —(Canadian Press).—With upwards of one thousand delegates in attendance the seventh annual convention of the Ontario Conservative Association opened this afternoon. Hon. R. B. Bennett, Federal chieftain, Hon. Hugh Guthrie, Premier G. Howard Ferguson and members of provincial cabinet were on hand as well as representatives of the rank and file.

Enrollment of delegates and reports of officers were the chief items of business to-day, after Premier Ferguson had welcomed the delegates. Andrew Ingram, St. Thomas led the discussion on granting scholarships for proficiency in Canadian history. Mr. Bennett will speak later in the day and together with others will address the banquet to-night.

COURT DISMISSES MURRELL APPEAL

Sentenced To Hang For Murder of Melbourne Garage Man.

TORONTO, Nov. 21 (Canadian Press).—The First Divisional Court to-day dismissed an appeal of William Murrell, sentenced to hang on December 17th for the murder of Russell Campbell, a Melbourne garage man, who was shot during a hold-up in April, 1921.

Murrell was found guilty of the crime along with his brother, Sydney, and Harry Williams. Sydney Murrell was executed at London in 1924 and Williams' sentence was commuted to life imprisonment. Pat Norton, also accused of the crime, was never captured. Murrell was arrested in California this year, where he was found serving a term for a minor offence.

First Sunday School Established in 1797

(Special to The Examiner)

KINGSTON, Nov. 21.—The first Sunday school to be established in Kingston was in 1797 and it was attended by the children of Anglicans, Roman Catholics and Methodists, the parents co-operating to make it a success. The Union School continued for quite a number of years until the population grew and the denominations were able to maintain their individual schools. The meeting place of the first religious school was in a building in the neighborhood of Bogot and William streets.

BRIDE WATCHES FIGHT BETWEEN TWO BROTHERS

Intoxicated Bridegroom Falls While Trying To Slay Kin.

OPENS FIRE WITH GUN.

St. Louis Man Surrenders To Police and Tells Story of Fatal Shooting.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., November 21. — Alex. Burdock, 22 years old, was shot and killed by his brother, Charles Burdock, 27, at seven o'clock the other night in their home at 1462 Madison Street, in a quarrel over the treatment the younger brother had shown his bride of one day.

Before the older brother obtained a revolver and fired three times at his brother he had been pushed into a corner and threatened with a large kitchen knife, and their mother, crippled and only able to get about with the aid of crutches, had been twice hurled aside by Alex when she attempted to intervene.

Follows Bride Home.

The youthful bride, Mrs. Lottie Malon Burdock, seventeen years old, entered the Madison Street house about 6.30 o'clock and was tearfully relating to her mother-in-law a story of abusive treatment at the hands of her husband when he entered and began to upbraid her, according to the story told by Charles at the North Market Street police station, where he surrendered after the shooting.

Alex. was evidently intoxicated when he came into the house," Charles said. "He started to swear at everybody, but he paid no attention to me when I ordered him from the house. I told him 'You have no business coming here in that condition,' but he wouldn't leave.

"Instead, he started to walk toward me and when mother got up from her chair to get between us he shoved her aside, Alex. pushed me into a corner behind the gas stove in the kitchen and kept me there for several minutes.

"He then backed away to a table, where he picked up a large kitchen knife and walked toward me again, brandishing the knife and threatening me. When mother again tried to interfere she was shoved aside, and when I saw Alex was in a dangerous mood, I reached into the stove and obtained a revolver which I kept there. As Alex. neared me I fired two shots at him and he fell to the floor and crawled to a corner.

Mother Sees Slaying.

The shooting was witnessed by the mother, Mr. Mary Burdock, the young wife and an eight-year-old sister, Francis Burdock. The older brother, at the district police station, said he told his sister to run for a policeman shortly after the quarrel started, but she refused to leave the house.

The bride of one day corroborated Burdock's story of the quarrel and shooting, and added her description of how she had been abused by her husband. They were married the night before, she said, and spent the night at the home of her parents.

"We were planning to visit Alex's mother," she said, "and as we left our house Alex. picked up a coat which did not belong to him, and when it failed to fit him he became infuriated and struck me several times in the face and head. He had been drinking a greater part of the day. I ran to his home."

Although Charles is crippled, he has been supporting the entire family, testimony revealed.

PULLS GOLDEN LOCKS OUT IN OFFICE MELEE

Wife Put Under $1,000 Bond For Attempting to Ruin Looks of Rival.

MATE HAS HER ARRESTED.

Foreman of Auto Service Firm Enters As Woman Leaps At Cashier.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 21.—A "good looking blonde cashier" of the Auto Miracle on St. Charles avenue, was minus several handfuls of her golden hair the other day and the irate wife of the foreman, Van Van Ness, was arrested and put under a $1000 peace bond.

According to J. S. Otis, owner of the automobile service establishment, Mrs. Van Ness appeared at the place two mornings earlier and told the manager that either Van Ness or the good looking blond cashier would have to be fired.

"The manager," said Mr. Otis, "told her that the cashier was a lady and that Van Ness was a gentleman, and there was no occasion for dismissing either one."

The matter was forgotten until the other morning at eight o'clock when the manager was attracted by the screams of the blonde cashier.

"I'm going to ruin the good looks of this cashier so that she can't vamp my husband," Mrs. Van Ness yelled, and she commenced throwing articles at the girl.

"The manager separated them," Mr. Otis said, "but Mrs. Van Ness continued hurling everything that she could lay her hands on at the cashier. On the arrival of Mr. Van Ness the manager withdrew and this gave Mrs. Van Ness the opportunity to renew her attacks on the cashier.

His Wife Arrested.

"She knocked the girl to the floor and started pulling out handfuls of hair. They were separated again and the police were called. Mrs. Van Ness proudly exhibited a handful of blonde hair. "I'm going to keep this as a souvenir," she told them.

When Mrs. Van Ness appeared several hours later before Recorder Leininger she was found guilty of disturbing the peace and disorderly conduct.

Judge Leininger ordered her placed under a $1000 peace bond and she was allowed to return to her home.

VETERAN OF 1885.

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 21.—James Hill, a life-long resident of Campbellford, dropped dead to-day at noon on Front Street. Dr. W. E. Brintell was called and pronounced the man dead, after which the body was removed to Bennett's Undertaking Parlors Owing to the absence in Peterborough of Dr. Loucks, who is coroner for the town, the body will be held in the undertaking parlors until his return.

The deceased was a veteran of 1885, and made his home on Market Street. He has one brother living, Henry Hill, who also resides on Market Street. He was a brickmaker by trade.

OLD HOME WEEK MEETING CALLED

Citizens Will Meet on Friday Night at 7.30 in Council Chambers.

That those interested in promoting an Old Home Week for Peterborough in 1929, are to do so in a whole-hearted manner is evidenced by the fact that a second meeting of all citizens interested, has been called for Friday evening at 7.30 o'clock.

The gathering on Monday evening was a most encouraging one from point of turn-out and enthusiasm and it is hoped that the meeting on Friday will be even more so. "Every citizen must have a hand in the scheme if it is to "go over" in a manner worthy of Peterborough" say those who are getting the campaign under way.

KINGSTON'S MILLIONAIRE SCOT REWARDS JANET ORMISTON FOR MANY YEARS KINDLY SERVICES

MINISTER DIES.

REV. JOHN G. LEWIS

former pastor of Mark Street United Church, who died in Vancouver recently.

Ontario Estate of James Alexander Waddell Valued at Over $1,500,000.

LEGATEE NO RELATION.

Province of Ontario Will Receive Over $250,000 In Succession Duties.

(Special to The Examiner.)

KINGSTON, November 21. — Because of her kindly services extending for many years, James Alexander Waddell, Glasgow, Scotland, has left almost all of his huge estate to his housekeeper, Janet Ormiston. The estate, which totals over a million and a half dollars, is disposed of in a will filed for probate here. One of the trustees has come from Scotland to handle the proceedings. The bulk of the estate is held in Ontario, $857,254 alone being on deposit in the Bank of Montreal here. Cash in Ontario totals $1,125,326.

The legatee was no relation to her master, a bachelor of quiet manners and life. He left his estate in Lead-loch, Lancashire, and his fine residence in Glasgow, and all its possessions. Mr. Waddell was in times past almost a yearly visitor here. He was a cousin of the late Robert H. Waddell, an early member of the wholesale dry goods house of Waddell and MacNee, which recently changed hands.

Cousins still living here are the Macnees, Waddells, Minnes and Richmonds. Eight relatives in Ontario are remembered in sums not exceeding $100.

The province has been enriched by heavy succession duties, estimated at over $250,000. The large tax is due to the fact that the estate is left to a person not a kin.

MOST CHILDREN EAGER TO LEARN

Adrian MacDonald, M.A., Addresses Queen Mary Home and School Association.

ON EDUCATION.

"It is the nature of the child to learn and the duty of the teacher and parents to direct the learning ability of the child into the proper channels," said Adrian MacDonald, M.A., of the Peterborough Normal School staff, in addressing the Queen Mary Home and School Association. His subject was "What o'Clock from the Educational World."

Mr. MacDonald, in beginning his lecture, drew attention to a picture in a primer used in the schools in 1785-1790, in which the teacher was illustrated garbed in gown and wig and sitting in a high box. In those days the teacher ruled with an iron hand and mostly with the ruler or switch which was applied often to hte pupils. The speaker compared school conditions in those grim days to those now existing. Now the natural instincts of the chlld to learn is appreciated and the surroundings and conditions of the schoolroom are such that there is little coercion necessary. The child now learns because it gains a feeling of pleasure in learning.

Successful Men

"The good little boy at school is seldom the successful man, and the bad little boy is not often the least successful," said the speaker. He spoke of reviewing the lives of old school comrades with a friend. The good little boy of their school days was only an average man. The bad boy had capitalized his energies and was captain of the largest steamer sailing out of Vancouver. The teacher's pet, who always had his studies perfect, was driving a butcher wagon in one of the small towns on the lake front.

The speaker advised that the child's nature be studied and then it will be found that he is usually serious about learning and he doesn't have to be whipped to force him to learn, as the practice was in the old days. Drawing many illustrations from the project work in the Toronto schools, where some of the children who do not seem to possess the average intellect of other children of their are are placed in a separate school. Here they are closely watched to find what things they are really interested in. Some marvelous results have been obtained in these schools when the child's real inclination is found.

The speaker remarked that the idea of homework was formerly overdone, too, and although it had been decreased to a great extent it was still too much in some cases. The speaker also expressed the belief that there should be some body activity in school hours to give the child growth in every way and keep his mind keen. The child can not be prevented from learning; as the child developes, so will his mind.

Was Too Fond of Train Rides His Wife Charges in Suit

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 21.—Her husband, a railroader, carried a pass and made trips often instead of working, Margaret Gray, alleges in a bill of particulars she filed in court the other day, in her suit for divorce from William Gray. He fought with her the morning of their wedding, November 20, 1924, she alleges, and afterward told her it was her duty as a wife to work and support him.

LABOR PARTY OPPOSES BILL

House Wille Debate Proposed Beam and Cable Measure.

SEPARATE TELEPHONE.

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 21.—(Special to Examiner).—The Imperial Telegraph bill providing for a beam and cable merger is to be debated to-day in the House of Commons, the Conservatives and Liberals are supporting the merger but Labor is opposed on the ground that it is a reactionary step from public to private ownership, a question still to be decided is whether there shall be public ownership and operation of the overseas telephone service, the present trans-Atlantic telephone is worked from the post office high power station at Rugby.

The Marconi Company claims existing beam stations are capable of providing empire telephones more economically than high power stations like Rugby. The Marconi has been conducting an experimental telephone service between England and Canada, adoption of The Marconi system it is claimed, would save Dominion governments from having to establish new stations for empire telephones because they could use the beam stations already existing.

The chief argument for a separate telephone service, controlled by the government is that it would be an additional safeguard against a monopoly in communications by a private company. This monopoly however, will not exist as regards the Atlantic service because other cable companies will be in competition with the British merger.

DECREASE IN POPULATION IS SEEN IN COUNTY

In 1900 There Were 22,106 Residents in Rural Districts of County.

CONDITIONS GENERAL

Last Year the Population Was 18,269—Gone to Other Places.

That Peterborough county is also feeling the drift of its young people to the cities along with most of the other counties of old Ontario is made evident when one comes to consider the figures giving the population now and in years gone by. The population of the rural part of the county is steadily decreasing in an almost alarming extent.

In the year 1900 with the inhabitants of Ashburnham included the population of the rural district of the county was 23,887. The population of Ashburnham when admitted into the city before 1905 was 1,781 so that the population of the rural part of the county as it remains today was at least 22,106 in 1900. In 1905 there was a slight decrease to 21,226, a loss of 887 in the first five years of the century. In 1915 the figures had fallen to 19,779, a decrease of over 2,500 in the ten years. And last year the population was found to be 18,269, a decrease from the figure of 22,160 in 1900 of 3,337.

Every county throughout the older parts of the province is reporting the same conditions that are found here. This county is not suffering as much as some. Here much of the fall in population can be attricuted to the people giving up the struggle for a livelihood on some of the rocky farms in the northern townships. In some places in the lake district house and barns stand in vacant ruin and the fields growing up in woods and shrubs from lack of cultivation. There people have left for the West or some other place were the struggle is easier. In the more fertile parts of the county the population is being constanly drained by the young people seeking the city to find their opportunities.

Murder And Suicide Case Is Unearthed

BURY, Que., Nov. 20 (Canadian Press).—What is thought to be a murder and suicide case was brought to light here with the discovery of the bodies of Chancey Allison, 36, and his wife, 32, in the bedroom of their home. Mrs. Allison had apparently been strangled to death, while the husband was found on the floor with his throat cut by a butcher knife, still in his hand. An inquest will be held.

SEVEN EMPLOYES ARE KILLED IN FRENCH FACTORY EXPLOSION

Box of Cartridges Dropped By Plant Worker Causes Big Disaster.

21 ARE INJURED.

Prime Minister and Colleagues Aid in Rescue Work.

PARIS, Nov. 21.—With a roar that was heard for miles, a factory devoted exclusively to the manufacture of cartridges for French army rifles blew up in Vincennes, just outside the south-western boundaries of Paris, late yesterday afternoon. Six hours after the accident the casualty list consisted of seven known dead, five were reported missing, and twenty-one persons, including four women, injured.

The concussion shook the western suburbs, and outlying sections of the Capital, and brought Raymond Poincare, Prime Minister; Paul Painleve, Minister of War, and Andre Tardieau, Minister of the Interior, rushing to the scene.

They took charge of the rescue work and of the investigation that was immediately started. Their arrival also had the effect of silencing minor officials, and made it impossible to learn the cause of the disaster definitely.

It was four hours after the explosion before firemen succeeded in controlling the flames. Two hours later firemen, police and soldiers had recovered four bodies, and three others were known to be under the wreckage. There was little hope of the safety of the five missing workmen.

Dropped Cast of Cartridges

According to unofficial reports, the explosion came when two workmen dropped a case of cartridges in a room used for filtering powder. The metal cartridge shells are supposed to have struck sparks, which ignited powder grains.

There was a single shock and a tremendous noise. Then workmen and soldiers were seen scampering madly from the vicinity of the burning building. Some of the fugitives ran with blood streaming down their faces; others limped or crawled with broken legs.

Important Factory

Officials readily admitted that the destroyed factory was one of the most important of its kind in the country. It was under the supervision of the Ministry of War, and was equipped for highly specialized work.

While the presence of the Premier and Cabinet Ministers made minor officials extremely reluctant to discuss the disaster, their very presence caused the wildest rumors to circulate among friends and relatives of the thousand or more workmen and soldiers employed in the factory. Weeping women exclaimed that a catstrophe which brought three Ministers of the Republic to the spot must have involved an appalling loss.

To allay the fears aroused by these rumors an official communique was issued last last evening by the Ministry of War. It gave the names of four dead and four seriously wounded and mentioned that several persons had been less painfully hurt by being struck by flying missiles or broken glass. The statement added that the rescue work was being continued.

RICH FOR A DAY.
(Examiner Staff Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, November 21. — Warden Davidson was a rich man for a few hours yesterday when he returned from Cobourg with a cheque in his pocket for eighty-five thousand dollars. But the money was not for his own use. It represented the government grant to the town of Campbellford for the pavement which has been put down here this summer.

WET WEATHER HALTS PLOWING

Low-Lying Lands Badly Flooded in Vicinity of Burnbrae.

CHEESE CHEAPER

(Examiner Correspondence)

BURNBRAE, Nov. 21—If the present weather conditions continue, Burnbrae farmers will be forced to resort to water craft in preference to tractors and horses, to finish fall plowing. The rain continues to fall steadily and already low-lying land is flooded past all hope of plowing in 1928 However, many farmers have a good percentage of fall work completed and one bright feature for compensation of loss is the fact that there will be no scarcity of water during the coming winter. Frost has stayed away longer than is often the case and cattle continue to roam the fields as in summer. Many stock owners have not been forced to stable their cattle at night, though dairy cows especially have done much better when kept in warm dry quarters over night.

Cheese Cheaper.

Cheese prices have taken a slump during the last month, though 20 cents and better still makes this branch of dairying profitable. Factories paid patrons in October 50 cents and upwards for each pound of fat, which is really a fine figure for dairy produce. It is likely that factory operations will last most of this month if weather conditions remain satisfactory.

Threshing is about completed and farmers generally are satisfied with crops. Unless grain prices are reduced somewhat few local farmers will purchase grain for feeding as has usually been the custom, as the price of hogs does not warrant any large outlay for feed. There is plenty of hay available for winter feeding, though the quality of some is not very good.

At the auction sales being held this month, dairy cows are bringing good figures, from $75 to $100 each. Two-year-olds sell from $40 to $50, while calves, 8 months to a year old, are in strong demand at $28 and $30 each.

SUICIDE VERDICT RETURNED BY JURY

Body of Patient Was Found in the St. Lawrence River.

BROCKVILLE, Ont., Nov. 21. — (Canadian Press).— A verdict of death by suicide was returned last night by the coroner's jury in connection with the case of Wilbur Kelley, of Ottawa, patient at the Ontario Hospital whose body was found in the St. Lawrence River after he had broken away from an attendant.

Ottawa Valley and Upper St. Lawrence—Strong westerly winds; mostly fair, with a little higher temperature.

Northern Ontario—Strong south-westerly winds; partly cloudy and milder.

Lower Lakes and Georgian Bay — Strong westerly winds; mostly fair, with a little higher temperature.

Maritimes—Fresh north-westerly to westerly winds; fair and rather cold.

Lake Superior—Strong westerly winds or moderate gales; mostly fair; stationary or higher temperature.

Western Provinces—Strong westerly winds; fair; not much change in temperature.

LARGE TRUCK BADLY BURNED

Driver Was Pouring Gasoline Into Tank When Explosion Occurs.

SHED CATCHES FIRE

(Examiner Correspondence)

BETHANY, Nov. 21.—On Monday morning, about 7.30, the villagers of Bethany, came very near witnessing another disastrous fire, when a large transportation truck from Toronto, carrying supplies for the Bell Telephone Company caught fire. It had pulled up to the shed where the supplies are kept, which is part of the grain sheds on the C.P.R. siding. The truck had come that morning from Peterborough where similar supplies had been unloaded. The driver after unloading the truck emptied the contents of a five-gallon can of gasoline into the tank when an explosion occurred and the whole became a mass of flames, spreading to the nearby grain shed. A freight train on the C.P.R. track came along at that moment. It was flagged and a water hose used from the engine of the train, which helped to extinguish the flames on the burning building. It is thought that the rain of Sunday, which had soaked the building, was a help in keeping the fire down. Some of the men who quickly gathered helped to draw the burning truck away from the building and in doing so saved the freight cars which were standing on the siding.

The truck was a complete loss and the driver was badly scorched about the arms. The village has no fire-fighting apparatus, other than the bucket brigade, so that any fire, large or small, is viewed with alarm by the villagers. It was just seventeen years ago, on November 3, that the village had its last big fire, and it still remains very vividly in the memory of a large number of the residents.

TRINITY W.M.S. HOLDS MEETING

Rev. A. H. McConnachie, of Springville, is Principal Speaker of Afternoon.

The regular monthly meeting of the Trinity Church W.M.S. was in Reid Street Hall yesterday afternoon. The president, Mrs. A. Bookhout, was in the chair.

After the usual business was transacted, Mrs. Wolstenholme's group took charge of the meeting. Mrs. MacMorran led in prayer and Mrs. Kimberly read a paper on Christian Stewardship. A Bible reading was given by Mrs. Huffman.

Rev. A. H. McConnachie of Springville gave a very interesting address. He said that the worshipful spirit was much needed and he stressed the point that if we fill our minds with good thoughts and ideas there will be no room for the petty things to enter.

Mrs. Nicholls sang a solo, "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere," accompanied by Mrs. Hohner on the piono. Rev. Wren closed the meeting with the benediction.

FUR THIEVES ARE CAUGHT AT BRIGHTON

Provincial Police Capture Bandits Who Escaped From Toronto.

OFFER RESISTANCE.

Men Are Armed With Two Revolvers and Sawed Off Shotgun.

BRIGHTON, Nov. 21 (Examiner Staff Correspondence).—Three men, a Packard car and twenty-five thousand dollars' worth of furs made Brighton the eastern end of their journey yesterday afternoon when the Provincial Police decided that they were wanted in Toronto and took them into custody. Later the men were taken back to Toronto and lodged in the gaol there.

Provincial Officer MacBrien, stationed here, was located by telephone and did not hesitate to relate the details of the event. Word had been received by him to be on the lookout for the men, he said; and he, with Officer Storey of Cobourg and Highways Traffic Inspector Jerome, were taking careful note of the cars that passed along the main highway through the village. About half-past twelve there was a Packard motor car stopped at a service station on the main street, about two blocks from the corner where the highway jogs a few yards south. The officers approached and attempted to place the three men in the car under arrest. But there was some resistance shown and firearms made their appearance. But Constable MacBrien beat the thieves to the draw and they were taken prisoner. Handcuffed securely, they were lodged in the Brighton gaol and held till advised by Toronto.

The men were desperate characters, MacBrien said. They were armed with two business-like revolvers and a sawed?off shot gun. Although they were three in number, they were much heavily armed, since the only weapon in possession of the officers at the time was one police revolver which Officer MacBrien was carrying, and which he used to good purpose. There was no damage done to the expensive automobile. The furs were packed in the back of the car, some in bags and some loose. The values estimated by the police at the time was $25,000.

The names which the thieves gave to the police were Charles Craig, Max Beaver, and Al Phillips. They are all young men, unmarried, and gave Toronto addresses. There was no liquor found in the car or on the persons of the men.

That the capture by the Brighton officer and his associates was considered an item of note by the police officials, may be surmised from the fact that General Draper, himself, headed the party of plainclothesmen who came by motor from Toronto to take charge of the prisoners and loot. General Draper and his men left the village for Toronto about seven-twenty last night. They took with theme th prisoners, the stolen automobile, and the furs.

SEVEN LIVES SAVED BY GIRL

Fights Through Burning Home To Rescue Children.

EDMONTON, Nov. 21.—How the heroism of 9-year-old Rosetta Annetis saved from fire and exposure the lives of herself and seven other children out of eight when, in the absence of adults, their farm home, south of Vermilion, Alta, was burned to the ground on Saturday night is told in a story that has just reached the city

Six times, while smoke and flames filled the kitchen of the house, did the little girl make her lone trip up and down the stairs. At the sixth attempt, the paint on the stairs was bubbling with heat, and the brave child's throat was raw and choking with acrid smoke.

Rosetta would have saved all the children had not 4-year-old Barbara Rennie persisted in returning to the burning house. Three times the little one went back, twice Rosetta carried her out to safety. The third time the house was so badly filled with smoke that the child could not be rescued; her charred remains were found in the ruins of the house after the fire had died down.

DOORS LEAKED WITNESS SAYS

Saloon Mate and Waiter Declare Nothing Ever Done To Stop Water.

REPORTS MADE.

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—A saloon mate and a waiter from the crew of the steamer Vestris testified yesterday at the Federal inquiry into the sinking of the ship with the loss of more than one hundred lives that it always leaked at ports and doors when there was heavy weather, and that nothing was ever done about stopping the flow of water.

The testimony of the saloon mate and waiter came about an hour or two after inspectors of the United States Steamboat Inspection Service of the Department of Commerce had testified at a separate inquiry going forward in the Customs House that they had inspected the Vestris a few days before it sailed and found it seaworthy in all respects.

The inspector of hulls mentioned in particular the ports and doors through which, other people say, the sea poured in streams, and said he had found them fit.

One of yesterday's witnesses who told of the leakage which both asserted was customary whenever the ship struck a storm, said he had reported the defects in writing, telling the land officials of the line that the ports and doors needed to be re-rubbered. The other said he had made no report, as the leaks were a matter of common knowledge. Both said that no repairs had been made prior to the last voyage of the Vestris, which sank off the Virginia Capes a week ago on Monday.

UNDER UNITED

proposed changes in the method of accepting members into the Institute.

Greater Work Ahead.

"As regards the future, it is obvious that the work to be done by engineers will be greater than in the past in the development of electrical power with all branches of work incidental thereto," he continued. "With the development of Canada agriculturally and industrially, the work to be demanded of the engineering profession will be greater and more important. Therefore, engineers will have to be better prepared, and the co-operation and confidence that the Institute develops will be necessary."

R. J. Durley, M.E.I.C.

The general secretary of the Engineering Institute, R. J. Durley, expressed a desire to speak of the general affairs of the Institute. He, too, touched briefly on the changes in membership fees. Running over a few suggestions for further expenditures by the council in case a surplus is realized, in the future, he mentioned the employment service bureau and urged co-operation in this work. He felt that more money could be spent on the Institute publications. The branch activities, he intimated, could sometimes be assisted by further assistance from the council, while the importance of the branch secretaries' work was stressed.

W. E. Ross was called upon to show "what it means to look backward" to what the Institute was, particularly the Peterborough branch. He then had thrown on the screen, slides of members and conducted a "who-is-it" contest that provoked much merriment. The presentation of a silk hat prize by E. R. Shirley to the winner, A. L. Killaly, followed.

Musical Numbers.

The Institute orchestra of three violins, piano and banjo was heard on several occasions, rendering popular numbers in commendable manner. In addition, there was community singing that added to the enjoyment of the evening.

To the Branches

A. L. Killaly proposed the toast to "The Branches." In so doing, he referred to the mission and benefits of the branch as a unit in promoting the interests of the Engineering Institute of Canada as well as of individual members.

He went back in the Institute's history to the time when it began under its present name and touched on the increase in the number of branches. "To those branches the Peterborough body now extends its good will," he concluded.

Fraser S Keith.

The representative of the Montreal department Fraser S. Keith, responded to what he termed "one of the most important toasts of the evening."

"To-day the branches of the Institute are the shining lights of the engineering profession," declared Mr. Keith, "for your mission is to interpret the engineer to the public and make it appreciate him and what he has done."

A Progressive Science.

Declaring that engineers have built for posterity; that all the Titans of engineering do not live at the present time, and that engineering is a progressive science standing for the removal of materialism from human life and human affairs, Professor Peter Gillespie was the second speaker responding to the toast to the Institute.

Professor Gillespie arose to speak as many of those present burst into the old School of Science yell. He thanked them for the enthusiastic reception and extended the best wishes of the Toronto branch. Then going back to the days of early history, he spoke of the Hadrian aqueduct, built to supply the city of Athens with water. Though without the more recently conceived engineer's transits, the methods used were necessarily crude, the job was a marvel of engineering, as was the Menai bridge, built hundreds of years later, with its 600-foot extension. The third example quoted was the Stevenson Creek experimental dam, built in California, and from which very valuable theories had been evolved.

"It has been heard from many quarters," said Professor Gillespie, "that we live in a materialistic age, but it seems to me that we are not nearly so materialistic when we worship in comfortable churches as the native who sat in filth and poverty, contemplating the problems of the universe. The profession of engineering has lifted us above that," he concluded.

As Others See Us.

A skit, depicting a meeting of the local branch, was put on by a group of C.G.E. students who cleverly imitated well known local members. Intended to be humorous, it proved decidedly entertaining and laughter-provoking.

The Sister Professions.

Recalling College days when rivalry between students of the various courses is keen, only to decrease as graduation brings common problems, W. T. Fanjoy porposed the toast to the sister professions. Replying were four representatives of the four other professions, Ministerial, Law, Teaching and Medical, all of whom indicated in brief but well ordered addresses, the relations of their respective professions to the others. The Rev Mr. Hughes, Mr. McElderry, Mr. Mattice and Dr. McNulty represented the sister professions.

Observe Tenth Anniversary.

Previous to the close of the meeting, Chairman Cruthers spoke of the Old Boys' Re-union to be held in Peterborough next year. Since next year will the tenth anniversary of dates of the re-union and of the annual dinner do not coincide, he urged the local branch, and though the that the members catch the spirit of the re-union and co-operate in bringing back many of the old members to the annual dinner.

BUFFALO, N.Y., Nov. 21. — The Buffalo lodge of Elks conducted the funeral service this morning of Godfrey Prenevau, aged 52, and who was born in Peterborough, Ont., on Oct. 13, 1876, and died Saturday night at his home, No. 33 McKinley avenue, Kenmore, N.Y., held at 9.15 o'clock in Services were held at 9.15 o'clock in the morning in St. Paul's church, Kenmore, with a requiem high mass sung by the Rev. He was proprietor of the Mohawk Smoke Shop here at No. 81 West Mohawk street, at the time of his death. He came to Buffalo from Peterborough, Ont., with his parents when he was ten years old and attended the old French school here in Washington street. During his early life his father operated the Palace hotel here in Seneca street and the Napoleon hotel in Main street here. Later the son took over the management of both hotels. THOMAS WALLACE.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LAKEFIELD, November 21. — The funeral of the late Thomas Wallace took place on Monday afternoon from the residence of Mr. and Mrs. James Hendren, with Rev. T. W. Wesley officiating. Mr. Wesley spoke beautifully from the 23rd Psalm, taking especially the fourth verse: "Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death I will fear no evil for thou art with me, thy rod and thy staff they comfort me."

The "Shepherd's Psalm" is the one which contains much to comfort and help one, especially those who have grown old on life's journey. The kindly Shepherd who guards His sheep against all danger and leads them safe to the fold. The walk through the valley is without fear, because of the comforting presence of the rod and the staff. The message of comfort and cheer which is contained in this beautiful Psalm was given to the bereaved ones in a masterly fashion.

The members of L.O.L., Duke of Wellington Lodge, No. 457, Douro, were present in a body, the deceased being a member of that lodge, and deeply interested in its work. Three members of the Lodge acted as pallbearers, viz., Bros. J. Cunningham, Robert Bolton, A. Robinson, and three from L.O.L. No. 122, Beresford Lodge, Lakefield, Bros. Sidney Hunter, George Welbourne and Richard White.

Interment took place in the family plot in Lakefield cemetery.

Mr. Wallace was born on the ninth line of Smith 83 years ago; his 83rd birthday was Armistice day, and his entire life was spent in the village or within a few miles of it. For 17 years he was lock master at Lock No. 4, being the first to hold that position. While engaged there he nearly lost his life on several occasions in the river and at the locks. Nearly six years ago he was superannuated, and he spent his declining years in Lakefield. The last few years he resided with his niece, Mrs. James Hendren, who gave him devoted care.

Mr. Wallace was well known in the village, and was one of the Veterans of '66, being one of the little company who answered the tocsin which rang out in the dead of night from the belfry of the little old Anglican church, in June of 1866, calling the volunteers to arms to repel the invasion of Canada by a hostile foe. The little group of forty-five now numbers two, John Edwards, Sr., and Alexander Fairbairn.

Mr. Wallace was a devoted son and brother and took a keen interest in the affairs of the village and was, as far as years and infirmity allowed, an active member of his lodge.

Old friends who travelled many miles in bad weather to attend his funeral, bore testimony to a kind friend, a good neighbor and a respected citizen.

Lunch, consisting of coffee, sandwiches and cake, was served after the card playing. The prizes were won by Mrs. Matthew Sergeant and James Benor, for games and by Mrs. Harry Tinney and W. J. Abernethy for lone hands. With the exception of the gentleman's lone hand score, there were ties for first honours in every case.

District Churches

Bethany United

(Examiner Correspondence)

BETHANY, Nov. 21.—On Sunday evening, Rev. A. Poulter occupied the pulpit in the United Church, after an absence of six weeks, due to anniversary services in his own and other churches. Rev. Mr. Poulter presented the missionary responsibilities in connection with the United church in a very interessting way. A map of the world was used, with ribbons extending from Canada as a centre, to the different mission fields under the supervision of the United Church of Canada. Rev. Mr. Poulter dwelt briefly on the work in India, Africa, Trinidad, New Hebrides, China, Japan, Korea and the home mission work in Canada.

He told what portion of the dollar went for foreign work—30 cents in all—while the other seventy cents was used for home mission work.

Previous to the address, by request of the pastor, the congregation sang the hymn, "Eternal Father Strong to Save," which was followed by prayer, led by the pastor, while the congregation stood with bowed heads. This was for the friends of victims of the two terrible sea disasters which have occurred in the past week.

Roseneath United

(Examiner Correspondence)

ROSENEATH, Nov. 21.—The United Church congregation was favored on Sunday morning by an address by Rev. A. C. Hoffman, from Sachuan, China. Reading his scriptural lesson from II Kings vi:8, Rev. Hoffman commenced his address by saying how grateful we should be compared to the people of China. How many things we have to enjoy. Think of the millions of dollars needed yearly to save these foreign people from starvation. Where does this money come from? It does not come from foreign nations because they haven't got it.

Therefore it is to Christian nations they apply for their needs. Missionary work is the supreme thing in life, either at home or abroad. It is not a primary stress in financial affairs. Rev. Hoffman continued by saying large parts of China are living to-day under conditions that existed in Europe in the dark ages. He told of the Yangtse Valley and the great need of help and the loss of life seriously involving our governments whose desire is for peaceful negotiations toward China's warfare.

With five hundred and fifty Christians in Church membership and their optimistic Christianity, which is hard to beat, it takes enthusiasm from everybody to bring essential success of the missionary enterprise.

Shall we penalise our native Christians in Church membership and their optimistic Christianty which is hard to beat, it takes enthusiasm from everybody to bring essential success of the missionary enterprise.

Shall we penalise our native Christians because of their circumstances? Rev. Mr. Hoffman spoke of Mr. Mao, who is one of the leading men in the Chungkind Church, and Mr. Liu, another Chinese church leader, who claim that the voluntary system of religious education will produce a stronger Christion people, by saying, "Only as we enter into the mind and heart of Christ, by simple reliance on a Presence and Power greater than our own, shall we realize genuine salvation and unity."

After the service, Rev. Mr. Hoffman opened his grip of Chinese novelties and explained what they were and their uses, which was most interesting.

Rev. C. W. Foster, Toronto, will be in charge of the service in the United Church next Sunday evening. Rev. M. R. Brown will be in Lindsay to attend the memorial service and the unveiling of a window in the church in honor of his father, the late Rev. Brown.

The Sunday school of the United Church are holding a Christmas concert, the date to be announced later.

REV. J. G. LEWIS DIES OF SEIZURE

Was Formerly a Pastor of Mark Street United Church in 1903.

VANCOUVER, Nov. 21.—Rev. John G. Lewis, 69, for seven years a resident of Peterborough and active in church circles here, died suddenly at his home 3622 Seventeenth avenue west, Vancouver, B.C., Sunday evening, November 11. Mr. Lewis continued in the active service of the church up to the time of his death, and took part in the Sunday morning service of the Chown United Church, Vancouver, of which he was associate pastor, on the day he died.

Mr. Lewis was pastor of the Mark Street Methodist Church for a four-year-period, from 1903 to 1907, and also resided in Peterborough, at 421 Stewart street, for three years from 1913 to 1916, when he temporarily withdrew from church work because of ill health. At that time he attended George Street Methodist Church. In the territory about Peterborough, Mr. Lewis also served at Omemee for two years, Pontypool for one year, and Warkworth for two years.

Heart Attack

The death of Mr. Lewis resulted from a sudden heart seizure which came shortly after retiring on Sunday evening. He had spent the evening at home, with Mrs. Lewis and his son, J. L. Burton Lewis and Mrs. Lewis of Seattle, who were spending the week-end at the family home.

After saying good night to members of his family Mr. Lewis lay in his bed, reading some passages of scripture. When he came to 2 Cor., 3 and 4, he read the following aloud to Mrs. Lewis and commented upon its beauty: "...the God of all comfort; who comforteth us in all our tribulation, that we may be able to comfort them which are in any trouble, by the comfort wherewith we ourselves are comforted of God."

As he laid aside his Bible he was seized with a sudden heart attack and died immediately. Funeral arrangements were completed under the auspices of the Vancouver Presbytery of the United Church.

Mr. Lewis, who was active, first in the ministry of the Methodist Church and then of the United Church, for forty-three years, moved to British Columbia from Ontario in 1919, living first in Ladner and then in Vancouver. He is survived by his widow and three sons, Hunter C. Lewis of the faculty of the University of Chicago; Edward Dewart Lewis, faculty of University of California; and J. L. Burton Lewis, editor of The Washingtonian, a state magazine published at Seattle. He also leaves two sisters, Miss Margaret Lewis of Peterborough, and Miss Katherine M. Lewis of Regina, and a granddaughter.

OMEMEE, Nov. 21 (Examiner Correspondence).—Many expressions of regret were heard from his numerous friends in Omemee, in the sudden death of Rev. J. G. Lewis of Vancver. He made many friends while on the circuit of the Methodist Church, now the United Church. Prior to his removal from Omemee to Vancouver nine years ago, Rev. Mr. Lewis was stationed on the Omemee charge. His death was due to a heart attack, with which he was stricken while preparing to take part in the Sunday morning service of Chown United Church, Vancouver.

PRESS BEST MEDIUM TO REACH PUBLIC

Sir Charles Higham Extols Benefits of Newspaper Advertising.

LONDON, England, Nov. 21 (Canadian Press).—Sir Charles Frederick Higham, author and publicist, speaking on "Scientific Distribution," said there was no advertising medium so useful as the press, and none that was responded to with such speed and profit. Newspaper advertising paid better to-day that it ever did. Most of the goods now consumed by the public were sold under a branded name, and the most economical method of distributing these was by press advertising, properly done. The dealer would always stock an article which was nationally advertised in the daily press, because he was convinced, first, that the article must be good or it would not be advertised at all; and, secondly, that the public would respond to it because they knew that they were getting good value for their money.

The Government had found newspaper advertising extremely valuable in increasing the sales of British goods through the Empire Marketing Board, Sir Charles said.

JEWELLERS OFFER SOME FINE PRIZES

Four Valuable Prizes Are Offered for Best Trade Slogan.

Four Canadians are destined to have a happier than usual Christmas this year, and the privilege of being included in the fortunate quartette is dependent solely on the wit and wisdom of each individual.

Somewhere in Canada some bright mind is going to think out a suitable slogan for the jewellery trade, and win a magnificent diamond ring mounted in the very latest style. Its value is $1000, and that there is no catch in the proposition is attested by the fact that the offer is made by by the Canadian Jewellers' Association, Inc., which represents practically all the leading houses in the craft.

At present the jewellery trade has a slogan, "Gifts that Last," but this has been criticized, because it features only one phase of the jeweller's service to the community. With the hope of securing a catchy phrase that would emphasize the quality of the jeweller's wares and their dependableness, and the fact that he offers in jewellery, watches, silverware, clocks, etc., merchandise not only pleasing from an artistic standpoint, but essential to every home, the Canadian Jewellers' Association is offering four prizes of a total value of $1,800.00 for the best suggestions.

In addition to the diamond ring, there is offered as second prize, a Colonial Table with a complete complement of flat ware and a teaset and tray, the total value being $385.00. Third prize is a sterling silver teaset of four pieces, with an E.P.N.S. tray, valued at $265.00, while the fourth reward is a lady's or gentleman's watch, either pocket or wrist style, in a solid gold case, of a value of $150.00.

The feature of the competition appealing most strongly to the public is the fact that there is no obligation to purchase anything, nor any restriction on the contestants, excepting that each person may submit only one slogan. It is open to every Canadian to ask his or her jeweller for an entry card and write on it a suggestion of a slogan, mailing it to the Toronto office of the Association. The contest will be open all of this month, closing at midnight on Nov. 30th, and the names of the winners will be announced on December 15th, so that the prizes may be forwarded in good time for presentation before Christmas. They will be sent to the jewellers from whose stores have come the winning slogans, and will be displayed in the windows before being presented.

Slogans are apparently an essential feautre of present day merchandizing, as is evidenced by the many in use. The jewellery trade offers a wonderful opportunity for a striking slogan, as the beauty of the goods carried, their artistic value and their character as essential factors in the adornment of the person and the home offer a wide scope for an apt descriptive phrase.

MR. JUSTICE RANEY'S PLAN.

Mr. Justice Raney's suggestion that before a driver's permit is issued the applicant's liquor permit should be examined, is more interesting than practical.

The drunken driver must be driven from the highway, but His Lordship's plan, even if it could be carried out without a wave of resentment on the part of the public, would not accomplish that end.

It is not always the habitual drinker who is the most dangerous driver.

In fact, a much greater menace is the motorist who is not accustomed to drinking very much and who is foolish enough to take a few drinks and then attempt to drive a car.

There have been several such cases in the local police court recently, cases in which men who could not by any stretch of the imagination be described as immoderate drinkers, have been found guilty of driving a car while under the influence of liquor and have served jail sentences as a result.

Mr. Justice Raney's plan would not have prevented such drivers from securing a driver's permit, for their liquor permits would have disclosed no justification for refusing their application.

If appeals to common sense fail, the law against driving a motor car while intoxicated must be enforced so emphatically that the folly of risking a jail sentence will impress itself upon all motorists.

EXPERT SWIMMERS.

The fact that twenty-six members of the Y.W.C.A. have been successful in passing one or other of the various life-saving tests merits congratulations, not only to the successful swimmers and their instructor, but to the community generally.

It is surely of value to the whole city that so many girls should have gained such proficiency in this most useful art, especially when it is remembered that previous classes also developed a large number of successful candidates, and the number of girls and young women who are familiar with reserve technique, the various methods of release, and the Schafer method of resuscitation is large enough to offer considerable protection against accidents.

Ability to swim is an excellent thing in itself, and when it is combined with expertness in rescuing drowning persons and ability to resuscitate them after being brought out of water, it becomes a very real asset.

The swimming pool at the Y.W.C.A. has done much to develop expert swimmers and life-savers among the girls of Peterborough, and the progress made in this direction is most gratifying.

In fact, what has been accomplished in this by no means large pool draws attention to the lack of a community indoor swimming pool of sufficient size to serve the public.

Facilities for swimming should be possible the year round.

OFF TO A FLYING START.

With Mayor Denne as general chairman of the committee, the date decided upon and steps taken to complete the organization and begin work at once, Peterborough's Old Home Week is away to a flying start.

The large attendance, in spite of Monday night's weather conditions, and the enthusiasm shown were happy auguries for the success of this huge community enterprise.

And almost equally so is the offer of Robert Duncan, of Rochester, to organize a Peterborough old boys' association in that city for the purpose of securing a representative attendance of former Peterborough residents now living in Rochester.

A real Peterborough old boy, Mr. Duncan is ready to do his bit to make the celebration worth while.

His offer is in line with the suggestion made by The Examiner some time ago that one of the first steps to be undertaken by the local committee should be the encouragement of old boys' associations in a number of cities where there are numerous ex-Peterborough citizens.

There is no reason why there should not be trainloads of old boys and girls from Windsor and Detroit, Rochester, Toronto and other cities for Old Home Week in Peterborough, and plenty of enthusiastic volunteers such as Mr. Duncan will be found ready to lend a helping hand.

The enterprise is launched and everything points to an outstanding success.

THE VESTRIS INQUIRY.

There are features in connection with the United States inquiry into the loss of the Vestris that indicate that the desire to indict a British crew, to injure the prestige of a British steamship line, and to build up a cheap reputation for United States Attorney Tuttle and other officials, is stronger than anxiety to get at the real causes of the disaster.

The attitude of Attorney Tuttle inspires no faith in the investigation.

With an eye to scare-heads in the most sensational of the American newspapers, he has been brow-beating and bullying every British witness called before the commission.

Perhaps the fact that he has evidently but a sketchy knowledge of the sea is partially responsible for the manner in which he is conducting the inquiry.

An investigation by individuals who know nothing of the matters they are called upon to examine could not under any condition be a thoroughly satisfactory probe, but when it is conducted as Tuttle has started to conduct the Vestris inquiry it becomes a travesty on justice.

The Ottawa Journal recalls that when an American inquiry into the sinking of the Titanic was being held a Michigan Senator, conducting the probe, asked one of the officers of the ship whether water-tight compartments "were for passengers to crawl into in the event of an accident."

The nautical knowledge of some of those in charge of the present investigation seems to be on a par with that of the Senator.

To again quote from the Journal, "much is being made, for example, about alleged incapacity on the part of the crew in launching the lifeboats, wonder being expressed over the fact that some of the boats crashed against the ship's side and had holes broken in them. Well, to anybody who has ever sailed in a ship, or been in a storm at sea, the wonder is that the crew of the Vestris were able to get out those lifeboats at all. The Vestris was listed at 45 degrees, and there was a heavy sea. How, in the circumstances, the crew of the ship were able to get the life-boats away without having them smashed like egg shells against the sloping side of the ship, is in itself a marvel. That many of the lifeboats were successfully launched reflects the greatest credit upon the skill and efficiency of whoever were responsible."

WHAT DEMOCRACY READS.

Not long ago, an eminent literary critic, commenting on the flooded state of the book market, sarcastically suggested that publishers might find it to their advantage to revise their methods and standards of determining whether a book was worthy of publication. Instead of being judged upon its literary merits, he thought it should be weighed, and sold by the pound. Presumably, the critic was not aware at the time he offered his suggestion that an American publisher had gone one better, and had achieved an amazing success by selling many of the world's best books literally by the ton.

One hundred million volumes in ten years, or, a sale reaching, in one year alone, twenty million copies, is the remarkable record of this modern purveyor of literature for the masses, who has written a book to explain how he came to accomplish the feat, and what it signifies as an index to the literary tastes and desires of a democracy representing almost as many readers as there are people in the United States. It is an interesting revelation of the adaptation of modern business methods, essentially American in the application of the principles of mass production, to a field hitherto governed, more or less, by other standards, and of the tendencies that have to be reckoned with in the mind of the mob whose desire for knowledge is in these days so liberally catered to.

How to tell a good book from a bad one is a troublesome question that scholars and critics have frequently discussed without arriving at any very definite conclusion. Obviously and, indeed, proverbially it is a matter of taste, commonly expressed in the jargon which assures us that "what is one man's meat, is another man's poison," and so on. But then come along the literary philosophers who want to know what is Taste? Is it the faculty which, according to Hume the historian, enables a reader to distinguish between genius and elegance, on the one hand, and fustian and affectation, on the other? Is it what Burke defined as the exercise of judgment, based on a sound understanding; what Addison believed was "the faculty which discerns the beauties of an author with pleasure, and the imperfections with dislike," or what Carlyle insisted meant "a general susceptibility to truth and nobleness?"

None of these high-falutin sentiments seems to have entered into the calculations of the American publisher, whose books have sold by the tens of millions. His motto, as he frankly confesses, was: "find out what the public wants, and give it to them," cheaply and in large quantities. What mass production, advertising, intensive salesmanship and the psychology of business had accomplished in the motor industry, or in the production of articles for domestic use, could, he believed, be done as effectively in the sale of literature, and the results appear to have abundantly justified his faith.

The methods adopted would, no doubt, have staggered publishers of the old school, the Murrays, the Longmans, the Constables, the MacMillans and the Harpers who, through their literary advisers, or from long experience of "the trade," cultivated a knowledge of books and exercised a studied discrimination in their selection and distribution. If a certain type of book did not sell, it soon found its way into the class technically known as "remainders," or eventually passed into oblivion by way of the second-hand book stalls.

But that is not the modern process, as exemplified in the recent American experiment. If a book has no soul, it has, at all events a body, capable of repair and medical treatment, so to speak; and, therefore, when, under the new method, any particular volume shows a falling off in demand, it is admitted into the "hospital," to be diagnosed and doctored with a view to sending it forth again, revived and fit to sell. Often, it seems, the treatment required is merely a change of title. A Life of George Sand, failing to attract, becomes "The Love Life of a French Woman," and immediately bounds into popularity. Stevenson's "Markheim" falls flat under that title, only to find favor as "Markheim's Murder;" and what does not take as "The Golden Fleece" of Gautier, acquires a tremendous vogue when re-issued with a name that suggests a romance of the underworld.

Those who are wont to bemoan the decadence of the present age will not find much comfort in the analysis which discloses the tastes and desires of this so-called democracy of literature, ministered to by such wholesale methods. Even in the demand for classics the sex appeal predominates. Next comes the class of books that are supposed to make for self-improvement, reminding one of Goethe's allusion to "the noxious mist, the dropping poison of half culture;" these being followed by works dealing with free thought, and by books of an entertaining type. The classification thus revealed can hardly be said to indicate any high moral or intellectual tendencies. Yet there is consolation, perhaps, in the reflection that it is better for one hundred million people to read some kind of books than not to read books at all. —Ottawa Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Thanksgiving may be over, but Premier Ferguson seems to be talking turkey to the newsprint industry.

"Everybody home in 1929," is offered as a suitable slogan for the Old Home Week organization.

Windsor's population has increased to 68,544, but the report neglects to say what percentage of this total is engaged in the liquor export trade.

Oshawa Council has decided to recommend to its citizens the purchase by the city of the gas plant and local distribution system from the Ontario Hydro Commission. The price fixed for the two systems is $520,000.

"Pussyfoot" Johnston has gone to Asia to battle in the cause of temperance. He has made no statement as to why he didn't make the United States dry before seeking fresh fields to conquer.

Less than five weeks until Christmas. Really, that shopping should be well under way by this time.

Hospital is a Boon.

Dear Sir: I visited the Apsley hospital about the middle of August, and could look at it from the standpoint of a nurse who had trained in a large hospital, done private, institutional, and overseas (in England) work. The building had been erected for a dwelling but was never used as such, and sold immediately to the Red Cross for an outpost hospital, for which service it is pretty well adapted. In time, a few changes will be made, doors widened to allow beds to be wheeled to the porch. I cannot now remember numbers certainly, but in June eleven babies were born there; and what a boon it is any place for an expectant mother to be able to go to an hospital, where everything can and will be done. The nurse and the housekeeper were splendid young women, very enthusiastic about their work. They were there because they loved their work. They were sensible and wise, and capable enough to be able to use materials at hand, and do it well. Why should not conscientious women do so. The Red Cross is a big institution, but it has a lot on its hands. Apsley is a small village, but far, very far, from a struggling one, and has done, is doing, and will do well by its hospital. Any hospital, the wealthiest one on the continent, is a gift, and no hospital is averse to receiving gifts, but they do not beg them.

Sometimes, like other hospitals, the Apsley one is crowded, sometimes it is empty. It lacks certain conveniences, which in time will be added. There are certain things which the young ladies there might like, but they do not consider themselves martyrs for the lack of them. The nurse not only cares for patients in the hospital, but when need arises she goes where she is needed—be the trip taken in a car or a lumber wagon.

Apsley people and Apsley nurses may well be proud of their little hospital, and neither that nurse nor the people will let it stand still.

GOD'S MINUTE.

Ye are the salt of the earth; but if the salt have lost his savor, wherewith shall it be salted? It is thenceforth good for nothing, but to be cast out, and to be trodden under foot of men, Ye are the light of the world. A city that is set on an hill cannot be hid. Neither do men light a candle, and put it under a bushel, but on a candlestick; and it giveth light unto all that are in the house. Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven.—Matt. 5:13-16.

Our Savious and our Intercessor, Thou camest into the world not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give Thy life a ramson for many. Thou didst go about doing good. Looking upon the young man, Thou didst love him.

Thou didst weep over Jerusalem. In the spirit of Thy love and sacrifice for lost souls, inflame our hearts with a sacred passion for the redemption of men. O Thou, the sinners' Christ, pour upon us a tender and undying yearning to save precious souls! Give us a greater zeal than our fathers had. May we take no neighboring saint for our standard, but dwell with our God for power. Amen.

A Thought

FORBEARANCE.

..The young are seldom forbearing, because they so little understand the frailties of poor human nature. Oh if you could only witness the terrible struggles passing in the heart of the friend whose vivacity annoys you, whose fickleness provokes your, whose fickleness provokes you, you blush....Oh! if you saw the tears that are shed in secret; the vexation felt against self (perhaps on your account), you would indeed pity them. Love them; make allowances for them; never let them feel that you know their failings. To make any one believe himself good, is to help him almost in spite of self, to become so.

MANUFACTURER OF GYPSUM.

Probably the most important developments in the gypsum industry in Canada have taken place in the products manufactured from gypsum. A number of years ago only a small proportion of the gypsum mined in Canada was calcined in this country. In 1927 approximately 192,000 tons were calcined and made into wall plaster, gypsum wall board, gypsum blocks and insulating material.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., Nov. 21. — (Canadian Press).—The export trade in Canadian grain here today was of a limited character owing to the indifferent demand from foreign buyers.

A fair amount of business was done in car lots of grain in the local market and prices were unchanged.

Prices for spring and winter wheat flour were steady with a moderate trade passing for domestic and country account.

A feature of the millfeed trade was the stronger feeling that developed for bran and shorts and prices were marked up one dollar per ton. This was attributed to the good demand and the small supplies on hand. Standard grades of rolled oats were steady.

The trade in fresh and storage eggs continued good and the undertone to the market was firm. Receipts were 268 cases.

The inquiry for butter was confined to small lots but values were firm. Receipts were 4,025 boxes.

The demand for beans was good and prices were unchanged. Imported grades were sold at $5.25 per bushel, and canadian grades at $4.85 to $4.90 per bushel, ex-store.

Potatoes were steady under a fair demand. New Brunswick green mountains sold at 65c per bag of 90 lbs, in bulk and Prince Edward Island grades at 70 to 83c in bags.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, Nov. 21.— (Canadian Press.)— Corn advanced rapidly in price yesterday, and carried other grain along, with deferred deliveries of corn going to within half a cent of the season's highest level. Trans-Atlantic estimates that Europe will require 129,000,000 bushels of United States corn, of which only 34,000,000 bushels have been bought thus far, attracted widespread notice, flood reports from the south-west counting also as a bullish influence. Increased estimates of world needs of wheat were likewise at hand.

Closing quotations on corn were strong, 1-2c. to 1¾c. net higher, wheat ¼c to ¾c up, oats unchanged to ¼c advance, and provisions varying from 10c. decline to a rise of five cents.

Upturns in the value of corn accompanied advices that Argentine appears now to be leaving the European corn market practically to this country, with no shipments of Argentine new corn expected to reach Europe until next June. Furthermore, arrivals of corn in Chicago yesterday were reduced to as few as 92 cars, against 427 cars a week ago and 176 cars on the corresponding day last year.

Meanwhile, fears were expressed in some quarters that flood conditions, especially in the Mississippi valley, would damage corn still in the fields, and brings about material delay to the crop movement.

Country offerings of corn yesterday to arrive were slim, and other markets were reported as outbidding Chicago at downstate points in Illinois. In this connection, talk was current that, taken as a whole, the movement of corn during November has been above normal, but has quickly gone into consumer use, permitting little or no accumulation of stocks. Under such circumstances, the advance yesterday in corn prices continued right up to the close. Oats showed some sympathy with corn, but were inclined to lag.

In the wheat market an outstanding feature was word of 56,000,000 bushels increased estimates of world requirements of wheat for the season ending July 1 next. The new estimates totalling 880,000,000 bushels, were spoken of as about the largest ever known. It was also announced that export sales of No. 2 hard domestic wheat, Gulf of Mexico November loading, had been made yesterday at the same price as Chicago May delivery.

Provisions averaged lower, reflecting a downturn in hog values.

BUTTER AND EGGS

TORONTO, Nov. 21.—Egg prices were firm at unchanged levels in moderately active wholesale trading in Toronto yesterday. There were no developments contributing to a further advance other than those which have carried local prices to a range of 58c to 60c a dozen for fresh extras, delivered in Toronto. The seasonal decrease in production and heavier withdrawals on storage supplies to meet current requirements were again the major factors in the day's market.

HAVELOCK WOMEN HEAR FINE ADDRESS

Mrs. J. A. Sexsmith Speaks to Institute on "The Power of Purpose."

(Examiner Correspondence)

HAVELOCK, Nov. 21.—"The power of purpose," was the subject of a very interesting paper given by Mrs. J. A. Sexsmith on Thursday afternoon at the regular meeting of the Belmont Women's Institute held in the Township Hall.

"Man's reach should exceed his grasp or what's a heaven for? Purpose," she said, "gives a new impulse, a new interpretation to living. Purpose is the backbone of a life of courage. It shows the highest justification for living is love—in some form. It may be for a cause, a country, an ideal, a family, or an individual.

"Purpose at its best means our kingship over conditions, our mastery over self, fighting for the right and fighting it to the end. Purpose makes man his second creator and by it he can make himself largely what he will. He can choose his own realm. He can unite body, mind heart and soul in working for a great cause or his aim may be low, mean and selfish bringing out all that is weakness in his nature. We can all have purpose and should have it and we should live to it at its best. There is no purpose that no one is too humble to live by. It is 'faithfulness in little things.'

Did Much For the World.

"The late Mr. Burbank, of California, did much for the world by his concentrated study and work on fruit, vegetables and flowers. One year having many acres of Easter lilies he refused to put them on the market but destroyed them because they did not come up to his idea of perfection. Dr. Saunders, of the Experimental Farm, Ottawa, by giving the west the Marquis wheat has put into the hands of producers many millions of dollars. A mother may make the care of her home and children a real purpose if she puts into her labors the best that is in her.

"Mrs. Lincoln, mother of the late president, possessed but one book, the Bible, and from this she taught her children daily. Abraham Lincoln had been at school for two or three months at such a school as the rude country afforded and had learned to read. Of quick mind and retentive memory he soon came to know the Bible almost by heart and looked upon his gentle teacher, his mother, as the embodiment of all the good precepts in the Book. Afterwards when he governed thirty millions of people he said, 'All that I am or hope to be I owe to my angel mother. A few weeks ago the Chancellor of England hastened down to a cottage by the sea where lay his aged mother, her life slowly ebbing out. 'All I am or have,' said England's Chancellor, 'I owe to my devoted mother. For me she toiled and sacrificed that I might be well qualified for life's duties.'

"'Who taught my infant lips to pray to love God's word and day and walk in wisdom's pleasant way: My mother.'

Purpose Unites Separate Days.

The conquest of a weakness in character, a concentrated attempt to be of greater usefulness in some way may be our purpose and aim. Purpose unites the separate days of our living by the thread of continuity as scattered beads form a necklace by the golden strand running through them. Many men in this life, men of position, power, wealth and opportunity are merely drifting. They live but have no definite purpose in living. In easy-going, careless, free way they are carried along by the tides of life with no self-consciousness that they are drifters. The late Sir William MacKenzie, speaking to a friend, remarked: 'My object in life has not been to acquire great wealth, but to do something worth while for my country.' A man does not drift into goodness, the chance part of an aimless voyage. He must fight ever for his destination, ready to battle with calmness and constant courage against fog, darkness, adverse winds and dangers that should only inspire to greater effort. There is hardly a peril of the sea more dreaded by mariners than a derelict. It carries no lights on bow or stern, no passengers, no rudder, no pilot, no crew, no cargo to no port. Helpless in itself it is a menace to others. Lack of definite real purpose in an individual is the royal road to drifting, desertion and derelict.

"In studying the biography of those who have accomplished much for mankind we find they were moved by a mighty purpose. Why did the representatives of five great nations come together to destroy the slave trade in Africa and from every coast come the columns of light to journey towards the heart of the continent and rim all Africa with little towns and villages that glow like lighthouses for civilization. Because one day Westminister Abbey was crowded with the greatest men of England in the midst of whom stood two black men who had brought Livingston's body from the jungles of Africa. There in the great Abbey faithful Susi told of the hero who worn thin as parchment through thirty attacks of African fever refused Stanley's ventures, turned back towards Ulala, made his ninth attempt to discover the head waters of the Nile and search out the secret layers of the slave-dealers only to die in the forest with no white man near, no hand of wife or son to cool his fevered brow or close his glazing eyes. Faithful to the last to that which had been the great work of his life he wrote these words with dying hand: 'All I can add in my solitude is may heaven's rich blessing come down on every one who would help to heal this open sore of the world."

"The late Dr. Barnardo in his work for homeless boys left behind him a movement more enduring than any of marble or stone. The future is still ours. The trees in October willingly let go their leaves to fall into the ditch. Their life is not in last year's leaves but in the infant buds that crowd the old leaves off. Put forth new activities, open new furrows, sow new seed. All the to-morrows are ours but they are few and short. Fulfil his dictum who said: 'I am as one going once across this vast continent. I would lean forth and sow so far as hand can scatter my seed. Let the angels count the bundles.'"

Mrs. Harry Tinney gave a very amusing reading entitled "Some Poor Husbands" relating a discussion by some women at an afternoon tea party regarding the mean tricks that the majority of men have, especially when they have been married long enough for those habits to show themselves and some horrible examples of these shortcomings were recited, each believing the faults which her husband possessed to be the worst that could be named.

A demonstration on painting weeds and grasses was given by Miss Minnie Williams, of Havelock. This feature was greatly appreciated being very interesting and helpful.

Mrs. A. Russell, the president, presided for the business session. In order to raise funds it was decided to make a three-storey Christmas cake and hold a drawing for it, the tickets to sell at twenty-five cents. The roll call was answered by suggestions for inexpensive Christmas gifts. Community singing was enjoyed and the meeting closed after which a social half hour was spent.

FIFTH TROOP AND PACK.

The 5th Troop and Pack held their usual meeting on Tuesday last. After prayers the Scoutmaster asked all the Scouts to bring in as many toys on next meeting night as possible, so that arrangements may be made for Christmas.

The Troop then fell in for inspection, the Wild Boar came first, Wolf second, Fox third, Beaver fourth and the Bulldog a good second fourth getting the same marks as the Beaver.

The Troop was then called out for some games. No. 2 Patrol proved themselves too good for the other Patrols, the camp fire was then called, the Wild Boar having charge put on a very good stunt. The Scoutmaster then asked all the Scouts to meet at the Prince of Wales School on Saturday for a ball game.

The Wolf Cub Pack are going strong now, the Sixers and Seconds are working very hard, and are going to do big things in badge work this year, so says Sixer Jack McKone and Donald Ross.

The Pack and Troop are open for new members. The Troop meets on Tuesday nights at 7.15 p.m. and the Wolf Cubs on Friday at 7.00 p.m. in All Saints Hall, also Scoutmaster H. Wilks will welcome any young man over 17 years of age into the new Rover Patrol. Rover Scouts are needed very much in our city. What about coming and joining us and help to make our city better and brigher by your help in leading the boys onto higher and better things? Give up one night a week and join our Rover Scouts. Rovering is the greatest game of life.

"Dr. Walter Henry Nugent, minister of Central Presbyterian church for the past nine years, has been called to Austin Presbyterian church, Chicago, to succeed Rev. Robert Clements, who resigned last spring. Austin church is one of the most outstanding Presbyterian churches in Chicago, and is located in one of the best districts.

Dr. Nugent has notified the session of his church that he has considered the call and will accept about the first of the new year. In point of service, Dr. Nugent is the oldest Presbyterian minister in the city. He came to Central church almost nine years ago from Central Congregational church at Newburyport, Mass. At that time his congregation here was meeting in a frame building at the corner of East Thirteenth and Pine streets. Under Dr. Nugent's leadership a new location was secured at East Thirty-second and Ankény streets, where a fine new building was erected and dedicated in September, 1924.

Active Worker.

Dr. Nugent has been active in denomination and civic affairs outside his own church and has held almost every office in the gift of his brother ministers. He was president of the Portland Ministerial Association last year and is now chairman of the headquarters committee of the Oregon Anti-Saloon League. He is a trustee of Albany College, trustee of the Westminister Foundation, secretary of the Presbyterian General Assembly's committee on apportionment, chairman of the program and field activities committee of the synod of Oregon, member of the national missions and education committee of the Presbytery of Portland and a trustee of the Presbytery. He is a member of the Kiwanis Club and several fraternal organizations.

Mrs. Nugent has been active in religious education work in the state and she holds the position of director of religious education in Central Presbyterian Church. Under her direction the Sunday School has obtained state-wide recognition.

steady at 68c to 70c for fresh extras in cartons, and firsts moved into consumptive channels at prices of 60c to 64c. Distributive trading was fairly active, and dealers experienced a moderate demand for storage supplies.

Butter values were unchanged, and demand showed some improvement over the dull opening on Monday. No. 1 pasteurized creamery ruled at 40¼c to 40¾c a pound, delivered in Toronto, and No. 2 grade creamery brought 39c to 39½c in most instances. Prices to the retail trade were also steady at 43c to 44c for No. 1 creamery prints.

The cheese market was quiet, and prices were unchanged at 21c to 21½c a pound for finest No. 1 Government graded new large waxed cheese, delivered in Toronto. Receipts were light, but proved ample for the limited distributive demand at prices based on a range of 23½c to 24c a pound for new large cheese to retailers.

The poultry situation showed no change, and trading continued dull.

Y.W.C.A. OBJECTIVE IS NEARLY REACHED

Of $1,500 Required $1,260 Has Been Paid—Lists Not Complete.

The November meeting of the Young Women's Christian Association was held yesterday afternoon, Mrs. H. R. H. Kenner presiding.

The opening devotional exercises were in keeping with the Y.W.C.A. world week of prayer and fellowship.

The financial reports read by Miss E. Morrow showed a most successful campaign, $1,260 being paid in to date and several lists not completed, so that the committee feel confident the objective of $1,500 will soon be reached.

Mrs. E. E. Harvey reported the last meeting of the Local Council, and also gave the report of the educational department. The basketry class was successfully started and also an advanced class in basketry. The Saturday morning story hour is largely attended and much enjoyed. The English literature class on modern novelists to be taken this year by Prof. Davis commenced yesterday and promises to be a most interesting course. Prof. Davis is highly recommended and comes under the Toronto University extension course. Tea will be served by the committee at the conclusion of the lectures and Miss Margaret Dickson will sing.

Mrs. V. Eastwood spoke of several camp sites considered by the committee.

The physical director's report was a very enthusiastic one. Three hundred and fifty pupils are already entered in gymnasium classes and many are already joining the badminton clubs. Two big Hallowe'en parties were enjoyed by all members and friends of the Y.W.C.A. In the swimming pool weekly swimming meets had been held and life-saving examinations taken by 26 of the pupils. The coming swimming exhibition with a splendid program of water sports and races was announced for this Friday evening.

The residence superintendent reported 70 girls in residence and a very busy month. A special Hallowe'en dinner was much enjoyed and also a social evening when the girls were guests of the residence committee.

The general secretary's report outlined the splendid attendance and interesting programs of the seven clubs with an enrollment of 100. Two new clubs were formed during the month. A special afternoon tea and evening's program was held for new-comers to Canada and two very successful week-end conferences at Stoney Lake, one for Y.W.C.A. girl leaders and one for members of the Wohelo Club.

Mrs. Harvey closed the meeting with prayer, and tea was served by Mrs. Morrison.

BOOK CIRCULATION SHOWS INCREASE

Peterborough Public Library Is Becoming a Most Popular City Institution.

That the Peterborough Public Library is one of the city's most popular institutions was certainly proved to The Examiner by F. De la Fosse, the librarian, in an interview yesterday.

All departments of the Library are up-to-date with the exception of the reference section, and the Library Committee are busy bringing that section up to the mark. The most popular department is fiction, because fiction depicts human life and so is not a loss of time. From 65 to 70 per cent. of the total reading done by the readers consists of fiction. There are two sorts of fiction, that of the Galsworthy and Wells type on one hand and the detective and adventure type of Packards, Oppenheim and Fletcher on the other. The short poems by Robert Service and Pauline Johnston are the best liked in their class, although Longfellow is the most popular of the poets. This is probably due to the fact that his works are studied in school.

The circulation of the Library is increasing steadily. Up until the final week in October, 1927 (this does not include the juvenile section), the circulation was 63,791 books. For the same length of time this year the circulation was 72,000 books, an increase of 8,219 books. The lending libraries throughout the city does not affect the Public Library in any way. The magazine section is another popular department, and the committee tries to cover every field immediately adding to their lists any magazine that the readers like.

Another important section of the Library is the one that includes clippings from newspapers and magazines. This section is sought after chiefly by students from the Normal School and the Collegiate who use them for oral compositions and essays. There are 14 folios of pictures to be lent out to anybody interested in art and drawing or anyone who wishes to prepare art lessons.

Another valuable asset to the Library is a book containing an index to the New York Times. This enables one to find anything that was printed in the Times during the last 14 years.

An important book in the Library is the Book Review Digest, which gives criticisms of the various books that are printed.

VALUABLE BOOK FOR ADVERTISERS

SEE CANADA FIRST.

The twin coastal cities, Vancouver and Victoria, at this time of the year appeal with endless charm to the holidaymakers, wanderers, and tired business men and women, for the weather is ideal and the foliage in the gardens and parks of wondrous color. Not a day passes, too, but sees the twelve golf courses gay with happy and enthusiastic players, while riding in the early mornings and afternoons is particularly favored. There are splendid motor highways on Vancouver Island, and innumerable ones running into Vancouver City from all directions. The winter season's attractions include theatres and concerts of the highest calibre, while the Hotel Vancouver at Vancouver and the world-renowned Empress at Victoria are the centres of the social and commercial activities of the two cities and districts. During the winter the Canadian Pacific Railway operates the only through train to Vancouver from Toronto. The "Vancouver Express" leaves the Union Station every night at 9.00 and reaches the coast four days later. Comfortable and convenient connections can be made with all western points by using this famous train.

UNCLE WIGGILY

By HOWARD R. GARIS

To-day's Bedtime Story

UNCLE WIGGILY'S FUNNY SLED.

(Copyright, 1926, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Uncle Wiggilywas reading the morning paper in his hollow stump bungalow one day, the forty thirteen little rabbit boys and girls were getting ready to go out and play in the snow, when, all of a sudden there was a loud banging noise in the kitchen.

"Goodness me, sakes alive! What's that?" cried Mrs. Longears, who was knitting a pair of stockings for Uncle Wiggily's ears. You see his ears were so long that the regular ear muffs he could buy in the six and seven cent store weren't big enough. So he had to pull stockings over his ears when the weather was too cold.

"What was that noise, Wiggy, my dear?" asked his wife, dropping her knitting.

"I'll go see," offered Mr. Longears.

He hopped out to the kitchen and there he saw Nurse Jane Fuzzy Wuzzy looking at Tingle and Tangle, two of the lively little rabbit girls. Tingle and Tangle were sitting on the floor, one on each side of a chair and between them was a broken ironing board.

"Well" said Nurse Jane as Uncle Wiggily entered the kitchen. "Now you two have gone and done it!"

"What did they do?" asked the rabbit gentleman.

"They were playing teeter tauter sea saw on my ironing board," spoke the muskrat lady housekeeper, "and they went up and down so fast that they broke it. Now I have no ironing board."

"I'm sorry," said Tingle.

"So am I," added Tangle.

"Well, I know you didn't mean to do it, my dears," said Nurse Jane.

"Never mind," said Uncle Wiggily. "It couldn't be helped. See, Janie, there was a big knot hole in the middle of your ironing board. That's why it broke when Tingle and Tangle teeter tautered on it. I'll go get you a new board."

Away he slid down hill.

"If you do that it will be all right," squeaked Miss Fuzzy Wuzzy.

"And you can use the pieces of the old one for kindling wood to make a fire," said Tingle.

"Well, that will help a little!" laughed Nurse Jane.

So when the two little rabbit girls went out to play, Uncle Wiggily put the broken board down cellar to use for kindling and then he started to hop over the fields and through the woods to look for a new ironing board for his muskrat lady housekeeper.

After a while Uncle Wiggily reached a place where, in the summer, there had been a saw mill. Men with a puffing engine had sawed trees into boards, making piles of lumber and sawdust. The piles of boards had been taken away but in the sawdust Uncle Wiggily found part of a smooth plank that was just what he wanted.

"This will make a fine ironing board for Nurse Jane," said the bunny rabbit to himself. "I'll take it to her."

Tucking the board under his paw, Uncle Wiggily started back to his hollow stump bungalow. But while he was walking along the top of a hill, which was covered with slippery ice on the slanting down part, all of a sudden Mr. Longears happened to think he had had no adventure.

"I don't want to go home without something happening," said Mr. Longears and then, as he looked behind him he said: "But I think something is going to happen right away!"

Truly enough it seemed so, for there, running after him along the top of the hill, was the Fuzzy Fox.

"Now I've got to run!" said Mr. Longears and he began. But the Fox came on very fast and when Uncle Wiggily tried to go faster the ironing board got tangled in his legs and he fell down. Before he could get up the Fox had come much nearer.

"Oh, run, Uncle Wiggily! Run fast!" called a Snow Bird.

"I will!" cried the rabbit and away he hopped. But the Fox was coming nearer. Then Uncle Wiggily dropped Nurse Jane's ironing board and when he stopped to pick it up the Fox was still closer.

"I guess he's going to get me!" thought the rabbit gentleman, sadly.

"Why don't you slide down the slippery hill?" chirped the Snow Bird. "You can slide much faster than the Fox can run and then he can't get you. Why don't you slide?"

"I have no sled," answered the rabbit.

"Sit on the ironing board. That will be a sled," said the Bird.

Quick as a wink Uncle Wiggily put the board down on the icy hill and sat on his funny sled. Away he slid down hill on the ironing board so fast that the Fox couldn't get him and soon he was safe at home.

YOUNG PEOPLE PRESENT PLAY

Valley Farm is Greatly Enjoyed By Audience in St. John's Church Hall.

SNAPPY PRESENTATION.

That local talent put on good plays was certainly proved by the A.Y.P.A. of St. Johns church last night when they presented a snappy four act play entitled "Valley Farm," by Arthur Lewis Tubbs. The play was fascinating throughout and kept the audiences' attention perfectly. Excellent music was furnished between the acts by Jack Marshall's six piece orchestra and George Nichols sang a rollicking comedy song which was greatly appreciated by those present. The play opened with a country scene, changed to the city and then back to the country again.

Jack Pritchard as Harold Rutledge the hero of the play was exceptionally good, acting his part well and going through the settings like an old timer at the job.

The story was was one of much interest beginning on the farm of Silas Holcomb played by Mr. Bert Hayter, who lives with his sister, Alvira, played by Miss Olive Jenkinson and his daughter Hetty played by Miss Margaret Guthrie. Their hired servant Verbena, Miss Winnifred Melton, is always reading love stories and getting in the way of everybody. Lizy Tnn Tucker the Holcombs' neighbour, is always borrowing and is likewise the gossip of the countryside. Her part was played exceptionally well be Miss Isabel Thirnbeck. Edward Rigby as Azariah Keep who is in love with Alvira and who is always going to propose but never does, provides many interesting moments. Hetty is the talk of the country because she is always with Harold Rutledge the city man. When they get married and go to the city to live Perry Dean, played by Bert Graham, a son of the soil who was in love with Hetty disappears and is not heard of for a long time. Hetty finds that the life in the city is not so good. Mrs. Rutledge, Miss Mary Thornton, was against the marriage and tries her best to spoil it, and is ably assisted by Isabel Carney played by Miss Florence Hutchinson who had wanted to marry Harold Rutledge herself. They finally succeed in doing so and Hetty runs away back to the farm, assisted by Perr who shows up in time to help her Because of his love for Hetty, Perry assisted by David Hildreth, Dave Batchelor, finally succeeds in bringing the two lovers together again. The part of Jennings the butler was ably played by Harold Hutchison. The play will be put on again to-night.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY THE LAW OF HEREDITY MAKES MAN THE MASTER OF HIS FATE.

The law of heredity is the conservative element in the life history of the race. It tends to keep the animal true to form. Heredity is responsible for children resembling their fathers and mothers. All through the animal and plant world, there is potentially an endless succession of each line, whether it is a potato, a grasshopper or an ape.

Man is beginning to use the law of heredity to free himself from the law itself. We no longer have to be subject to the chance workings of fate. By knowing how the law operates and learning to control the process we steal nature's thunder and use her methods to our advantage.

Without human interference, animals and plants have no say about their future. Human beings may and do interfere with the process. Instead of growing hair or wool or feathers on his back as do the animals to protect themselves from the inclement weather, man uses the fur and wool of the animals instead. He raises these animals by the thousand for this very purpose. Instead of migrating to warmer climates during the winter months as do the birds, man provides suitable shelter and clothing. If the environment is too cold for his body, instead of changing his body or removing it to warmer climates, he changes his environment. He brings the warmer climate to his body.

Thus while the law of heredity would keep us going in the same old rut from generation to generation, man through his brain power and the use of intelligence manages to make progress, to change his environment and even his descendants, physically and in every other way, and then uses the law of heredity to conserve the gains made. If we can breed a better stock of human beings and refuse the breeding of the poorer strains, by and by heredity will bring about an improved race.

Thus, heredity, the master of evolution in the animal world, becomes the slave of evolution in the hands of human beings.

BROKEN

CHAPTER XXVII

THE STORY THUS FAR: GILES CHITTENHAM returns to London from the United States—where he has contracted a secret and unfortunate marriage with SADIE BARROW—to help wind up the affairs of his younger half brother, RODNEY ARDRON, who has recently killed himself for love of the notorious flirt, JULIE FARROW. In Switzerland Giles meets Julie Farrow, through his friend, LOMBARD, and makes love to her with the intention of spurning her in revenge for her treatment of Rodney. But he finds out that she is a cousin of the Julie Farrow whom his brother loved. They love each other—but he tells her the truth—that he is already married. She plunges into a gay, wild life, trying to forget him, and promises to marry SCHOFIELD, a rich, older man. Lombard tells Chittenham that unless he gives him money, he will tell the world of his marriage, and that he and Julie spent a night together at St. Bernard. Chittenham decides to get a divorce from Sadie, and finally gets Julie to admit that she still loves him. Lombard comes for his answer.

Chittenham was not surprised. He had told Lombard that he should hear from him that morning and he had not written. A personal interview would be better after all. He took his check book from a drawer and laid it on the table. Lombard was welcome to that two hundred pounds—it was not a high price to pay for last night's happiness. Later on, when he and Julie were safely married, he would have his reckoning with Lombard.

The two men made no attempt at a greeting. Chittenham merely said: "You're in rather a hurry, aren't you? However, you've saved me the trouble of sending to you. You can have your two hundred."

Lombard smiled—an unpleasant smile. "I want five hundred."

"You agreed for two."

"The price has gone up since last night."

There was an eloquent silence, and Lombard said calmly:

"Five hundred is not a high price to pay, surely. I cannot imagine that Schofield would carp at it in return for what you received last night." He shrugged his shoulders as he saw the passionate rage in Chittenham's face. "It's no use getting melodramatic, my dear fellow. I'm not blaming you. I envy you your good fortune, but as I told you yesterday I am in the devil of a mess, and after all, all's fair in love and war as I am sure you will agree."

"It was you outside Miss Farrow's flat last night?"

"I waited three hours—very patiently you will admit."

Lombard backed towards the door as Chittenham made a threatening movement towards him.

"It's no use getting violent," he said quickly. "If you make a scene here and throw me out it will only get into the papers and do you no good. If you take my advice you'll be sensible and pay up."

"I'll see you in hell first."

Lombard stood his ground quietly. He was very pale, but his was the whip-hand and he knew it.

"I don't want to make myself more unpleasant than is absolutely necessary," he said. "But desperate ills demand desperate remedies. You and I have been friends. I came to you first as a friend. I am still willing to give you the first chance. If you refuse, I shall go to Schofield and tell him what I know."

"And he will call you a damned liar, as I do."

"I don't think so. Besides, I can prove what I say—"

"By God—"

Lombard opened the door, keeping hold of the handle.

"I warn you not to use violence."

With an effort Chittenham controlled himself.

"I give you just five seconds to get out of here," he said.

"Very well. You know what I intend to do. I shall tell Schofield what happened in Switzerland and again last night."

"Tell him, and I'll break every bone in your body."

Lombard went on evenly, not heeding the violent outburst:

"And I shall tell Miss Farrow that the woman she has been making her friend is your wife."

Chittenham was white to the lips, but he laughed.

"You can spare yourself the trouble. I have already told her myself."

Lombard's face changed, and for a moment he did not speak.

"And if you come here any more with your blackmailing tricks I shall hand you over to the police," Chittenham said.

Lombard's face twitched nervously. "And is that your last word?"

"My last word."

For a moment the two men glared at one another, and it took all Chittenham's will power to maintain his self-control, then Lombard said hoarsely.

"By heaven, I'll make you sorry for this before I've done."

"Get out, or I'll make you sorry for it now."

The door closed between them.

For some moments after Lombard had gone, Chittenham stood staring at the closed door.

Had he been a fool to let him go? His every impulse was to follow him and thrash him within an inch of his life, and yet—as the fellow had said—what good would it do to make a scene? There was Julie to think of and the future.

But Chittenham had determined on one thing—he would see Julie at once and tell her the whole truth. It was no use waiting any longer, in absolute honesty lay their only chance of real happiness.

But fate was against him. He went to Julie's flat only to find that she had gone out to lunch. The maid who had answered the door thought she had gone with Mr. Schofield, but was not sure—she did not know when she would be returning.

Chittenham's heart was hot with jealousy as he went away. How could she have gone out with Schofield after all she had said to him last night? He would not have her going about with other men; she belonged to him.

He went to several restaurants where he thought she might be, but could not find her. There was nothing for it but to wait till the afternoon when they would meet at his mother's house.

He purposely arrived rather late. He felt angry with Julie—angry with himself and with the whole world. Why had he not been perfectly honest with her last night? Today he could find no excuse for the conduct which last night had seemed perfectly justifiable. If only he had told her the truth as he had boasted to Lombard! By doing so he would have broken Lombard's weapon in his hand.

He was shown upstairs to his mother's drawing-room and found it in darkness save for a heavily-shaded lamp on one side of the room.

Mrs. Ardron who was near the door, crept to him and whispered that he must be very quiet.

"It's so wonderful!" she breathed; she squeezed his hand excitedly.

Giles stood beside her, angry and silent.

Now he was more accustomed to the darkness he could see that there were about a dozen people in the room, sitting in a ring and apparently holding hands. There was a queer aromatic scent in the air, and a curious feeling of nervous tension.

"He is perfectly marvellous," Mrs. Ardron breathed again. "Do you know that he knew at once that I had had two husbands?"

Giles did not answer, and she went on whispering.

"He tells me that I shall be married again—"

"What damned rot!"

"Giles—darling!" She laid her hand on his lips, and he relapsed again into an angry silence.

He saw now that the light from the shaded lamp was falling on the face and figure of a man whom he supposed must be the great Chryer—a strange-looking man with a pale, ascetic face and long dark hair, who lay back in a chair, his eyes closed and his hands clasped against his breast.

Presently he began to speak in a sing-song, dreamy sort of voice.

"Two women and one man—one man and two women—they stand before me in the darkness not knowing of the tragedy that divides and will still divide their lives—" He drew a quick breath and their followed a little silence, broken again almost at once by the same sing-song voice. "Two women and one man—in the darkness all of them, and two of them will come out into the light, but the third will never see the sunshine again. Darkness—blindness! The blindness of the eyes—here close beside me—"

His clasped hands released one another, and moved forward in a curiously groping fashion as if seeking to find something. Giles felt his mother's hand on his arm and knew that she was trembling. He did not know whether to be amused or angry. What fools women were, to be taken in by such a charlatan! He wondered what would happen if he switched on the lights, and yet—there was something about those wandering, restless hands, with their tapering narrow fingers that looked so like a bird's claws, that held him fascinated.

A shiver of apprehension swept through him. Such things should not be permitted. The man Chryer ought to be dealt with in the same manner as before long, he would deal with Lombard—blackguards, both of them!

He had moved back a step to find the switch of the light when suddenly those groping hands swooped down with a curious pouncing movement and fastened on something or someone in the silent ring of listeners.

A piercing scream rang through the silence of the room, a scream in the frightened voice of a woman, and then the cry of his own name: "Giles! Giles!"

Every nerve in Chittenham's body seemed torn. He stumbled against a chair in his efforts to find the light, and he swore aloud as he pushed his mother aside.

"I've had enough of this swindle!"

It seemed an eternity until his fingers came into contact with the switch, and still that cry went on: "Giles! Giles!"

It was Sadie's voice he knew, and when at last the room was flooded with light he saw that she was standing up, her hands covering her face, her childish body swaying to and fro as if in great pain or terror, while the wailing repetition of his name came from her lips monotonously again and again.

It was like a scene in a dream—the ring of half-frightened women—and the strange figure of the man Chryer as he rose slowly to his feet, a shocked, awakened look in his somnolent eyes. Then Mrs. Ardron began to cry hysterically, and the whimpering sound seemed to break the spell which was upon everyone.

Acid Stomach

Excess acid is the common cause of indigestion. It results in pain and sourness about two hours after eating. The quick corrective is an alkali which neutralizes acid. The best corrective is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. It has remained standard with physicians in the 50 years since its invention.

One spoonful of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia neutralizes instantly many times its volume in acid. It is harmless and tasteless and its action is quick. You will never rely on crude methods, never continue to suffer, when you learn how quickly, how pleasantly this premier method acts. Please let it show you—now.

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 50 years in correcting excess acids. Each bottle contains full directions—any drugstore.

What's become of the "Superfluous Woman?"

THESE were the women that the census taker used to put down as "Females without Occupation." You know. Women with grown-up families. And the familiar ailing relatives that had to be supported by some other member of the family.

What's become of these so-called "superfluous women?" Health has everything to do with it. Just talk to women who've been succeseful along their own particular lines. They'll all tell you they take Nujol regularly.

"I learned that good habit from our school doctor," you'll be told. "She advised all the girls to take it, especially whenever we had to cut down on our regular exercise. You know how headachy and dull you're apt to feel. Well, you'd be surprised to see what a difference it makes if you take some Nujol for a few days beforehand."

No harm trying. For Nujol can't possibly upset you, even when you're below par. It contains absolutely no medicine or drugs. Perfected by the Nujol Laboratories, 26 Broadway, New York. Sold only in sealed packages.

Times have changed

Nujol not only keeps any excess of body poisons from forming (we all have them) but aids in their removal. Buy a bottle of Nujol from your druggist today.

WOLF TOO KEEN FOR BEST DOGS TEXAS BREEDS

Old Stubby Leads His Pack Back To Farmer's Stock.

BEST TRAPS USED.

Canine Sharper Plays Dead After Being Shot, Then Makes Getaway.

HUNTSVILLE, Tex., Nov. 21.—Once more Old Stubby, big gray timber wolf, and his pack of marauders have returned to the piney woods south of Huntsville, and are again up to their old game of killing goats, hogs and cattle. During the summer Old Stubby takes his followers to other hunting grounds, but with early winter he reappears with his pack in the vicinity of Huntsville.

Huntsville hunters have tried for several years to bring the grizzled, weather-beaten lobo to justice, but the cunning veteran leader has survived the hunter, hounds, trapper and poison, and with each passing winter he and his clan grow bolder in making their raids. One of his front feet is off at the first joint, from whence he derived his name, Old Stubby. Although his foot is amputated, it hardly seems to hinder his running, for some of the best packs of wolf hounds in East Texas have given chase to him, only to be out maneuvered.

Mate is With Him

Old Stubby's mate, Molly, a light gray wolf, is often seen in the company of the veteran leader.

Old Stubby, when he hears the hounds on his trail will not run through the grass and underbrush. He is too wise for that. On the grass and bushes his scent is easily followed by the dogs, especially if there is any dew or dampness from a recent rain. This cagey old lobo knows that if he stays in the sand he will leave no scent for the hounds to follow. He will make his run down a sandy road and never leave it until he has run for miles and outdistanced the dogs. If forced to leave the road he will cross every bare spot of sand which is found among the low sand hills of his range, throwing the dogs off his trail.

Stock owners of Walker County declare that Old Stubby and his pack are the worst killers they have to contend with, for they will kill more than they can eat.

The closest call Old Stubby has ever had came a few days ago. A veteran wolf hunter of Huntsville told the story.

"We picked up Old Stubby's trail from the place where he had made a fresh kill of a goat," the hunter said. "A recent rain had made conditions fine for hunting. The dogs would draw together behind, the leaders and for two or three hundred yards the race would wax hot. Then all would be still; dogs would spread out and work in every direction for the trail. Then some old dog would go, only to lose it again shortly.

"We knew that Old Stubby could not last very far on a straight run with our trained pack of hounds. He seemed to know it also. In fact, so far as we could tell he never left the big piney woods section he was playing hide and seek in. Five of us scattered out on horses so we might possibly get a shot at the phantom of the forset.

Gets Bullet Wound

"I took a stand behind a patch of bushes near a sandy trail which I thought Old Stubby would come down. I was careful to conceal myself so that the wind would be blowing from the direction the old wolf would come. I had hardly gotten in my ambuscade when I glanced down the path and there came the old desperado not over 300 or 400 yards away, apparently tired and almost exhausted. His tongue was out and he was making that familiar sound of a wolf when about all in.

"When he approached within 50 yards of me, I fired. The old wolf yelped and fell to the ground. I figured Old Stubby had made his last race, and all that was needed now was for the dogs to put the finishing touch on him, then we would stretch him out in the bright morning sun, and carry back glad news to the stock owners of the country.

"I started walking toward the apparently lifeless form lying on the ground. When I got within ten feet of what I thought was the dead body of Old Stubby, he sprang to his feet and dashed off through the pine thicket nearby like a gray streak. It was all done so suddenly that I did not have time to raise my gun. I looked around and found blood on the ground; so I figured I must have inflicted only a skin wound which dazed the old fugitive for a while. The dogs soon appeared on the scene, but they were so exhausted that we decided to call them off and give up the chase, for Old Stubby was not as badly wounded as I had thought."

Mr. Grundy, before entering the ministry, was deputy registrar of Peterborough during the early eighties, in the time of Registrar Colonel Haultain, and also for a short period during the long term of office of the late Registrar B. For more than twenty years past, he was associated with the Glenwood Manual Training School at Chicago Heights, as travelling agent. He was born in England and came to Canada as a young man, later moving to Illinois, where he practiced in the Baptist ministry for many years. He is survived by his wife, a son, Walter P. Grundy, and six daughters: Mrs. C. J. Welsbrod, Mrs. E. W. Pettingill, Mrs. Adena Hunt, Mrs. A. T. Wells, Mrs. D. S. Murdoch and Mrs. John Read. As a jolly wind-up to a very successful hunt, the members of the Pakaskeg Hunt Club were entetrained last night, with their wives, at a banquet held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Jopling, in Bridgenorth. The meal, which had roasted venison as its "piece de resistance," was served "a la camp," with tin plates and jam jars which had huge spoons as servers. Thomas Hooper was the king-pin of the evening, officiating as chef and later giving a song and a speech, the latter having to do with "Behaviour of All Boys in Camp." Mr. Hooper's choice of menu included most of the camp favorites, with about forty pounds of roasted leg venison from the hind quarters of deer which fell before the bullets of the mighty hunters; mashed hot potatoes and carrots; hot biscuits, plum pudding for dessert, and plenty of the famous "Tommy Hooper" tarts, with piping hot coffee to wash it all down. Just before the service of the meal, a small model in miniature, being an exact duplicate of the camp at Pakaskeg, was brought in by Dr. and Mrs. E. H. Wood and served as the centrepiece of the dining table, where it was lit by electricity and cast a warm red glow over the proceedings. It had windows and stovepipe, in duplication of the camp, and was surrounded by evergreens. The toast to the ladies was proposed by Phil Stambaugh, of Youngstown, and responded to by Mrs. E. H. Wood. Mr. Hugh Hamilton, of Youngstown, read a paper of his own competition, which brought back a stirring memory to those present. On Armistice Day, the hunters, seventeen in number, stood in military lines outside of their little camp and listened to an eloquent address by Mr Hamilton, which centred about the brave deeds of the Canadian and American boys in France. Then they stood with bowed heads for one minute and finished by firing three volleys from their rifles. By request, the same address was repeated by Mr. Hamilton last evening. Other short speeches were made by the Camp judge, T. Brightman, and Dr. E. H. Wood, while several recitations from Dr. Drummond's works were given by Mr. James Jopling. The banquet opened with the singing of the Canadian and American National anthems, in turn, and the pronouncing of grace by Mr. T. Brightman. During its service, telegrams of regret at not being present were read from the other two members from Youngstown, Ohio, Messrs. Joe Alcorn and George Smith. Local members of the club are Messrs. "Sandy" McManus, Clayton Telford, T. Brightman, Fred Dobson, Senior, Fred Dobson, Junior, Thos. H. Hooper, Dr. E. H. Wood, and James, Walter, Harry, Bert and Fred Jopling. Mr. Will Sherwood, of Toronto, is also a member.

THE MIRROR OF THE MODE

By Mary Marshall.

This dance frock of flaming red chiffon with simple sleeveless bodice and sunburst pleated skirt would find favor in the eyes of almost any member of the younger dancing set.

The sunburst pleated skirt is one of the youthful fashions that demand youthfulness on the part of the wearer. It ought I think to be marked with a red danger flag for the woman over twenty-five.

Despite its tremendous popularity last summer it seems to be as much a favorite with the younger set as ever. However as a sports skirt it has certain disadvantages during the cooler months. It must be made of fairly light material and it does not well withstand the effects of rainy, damp weather. As an adjunct to the slip on or tuck-in sweater it is at this time of the year a rather poor choice.

For the youthful dance frock it is charming and if I were to choose a type of frock that would almost surely find favor with every young girl I know it would be a simple chiffon gown with a skirt of this description. The sketch shows precisely the sort of frock I mean. The belt is above the hips, but still not too high. The bodice is extremely simple, with a moderate decolletage and the only trimming about the frock is a large red velvet rose at the right side. The new flaming red is the color I would select because this like the sunburst pleated skirt demands youthfulness.

I overheard a woman say: "All my new dresses are made with much longer skirts. Short skirts of course, are entirely out of fashion." And yet three or four months ago this same young woman wore her own skirts above her knees and looked with contempt on women who wore them longer.

It is with skirts as it has so often been with hair. The woman with a bob looked with a species of pity on all her longer-haired friends—until the psychological moment arrived when she decided to let her own hair grow. And then she was ready to assert that short hair was entirely out of fashion.

But there really has been nothing at all sudden in the return to favor of longer hair and longer skirts. Some women of fashion still wisely retain the bob and there are some women who may wisely retain the fairly shortskirt for sports and street wear, so long as they may do so without making themselves conspicuous. And after all the really long skirt is worn only for evening and formal afternoon occasions. Other skirts, in spite of their added inch or so, are still relatively speaking, decidedly short.

THE WHATNOT

A Place for Little Bits of Everything of Local Interest

By MARION

JUST by way of variety I'm going to tell you to-day about some of the things Peterborough men either find fault with or poke fun at in their wives.

I hope at the end to show a moral that will indicate to the men that these things are not REALLY so serious

* * *

At a bridge party one evening recently one of the table parties was discussing something written by a woman about her husband, and one of the men took up cudgels in behalf of his sex.

* * *

"Some of the things the women kick about," he said, "are utterly foolish. Men could find just as absurd things to protest about their wives—but no gentleman would!"

Then he went on to do it!

* * *

One of the things which he told—only as an instance, he was sure to remark—was the asking of questions by his wife.

"It doesn't matter whether she has any reason to think I have knowledge of the subject at all," he said, "she asks the questions just the same."

* * *

"'Who are those people, Harry? The woman looks familiar, but I don't remember ever seeing the man before,' is one of her favorites. Maybe I've never seen either of them."

* * *

"'Look; is that Mr. Jones, who just moved into the house on the corner?' is another. And: 'Who do you suppose they are. Do you think they are those friends of the Simpsons going there for dinner?' is still another. How should I know?"

* * *

"She thinks, too, that I'm an encyclopedia. I would need to be the champion memorizer of the universe to answer all the questions she asks me. They range from queries about something regarding China she has read in the paper to request for information as to why a bulb burned out or what the weather will be like to-morrow."

* * *

"I generally fall back on, 'I don't know; maybe you're right.' It doesn't always fit, but in general it's most satisfactory."

My dear man, don't you know that your wife is flattering you most horribly? The poor dear was brought up to think that men always knew more than women, and she probably fell for you because you strutted your stuff when you were angling for her.

* * *

In your courtship days, did you ever admit that you didn't know anything? But now you have caught her you think you can take this much bait off your hook.

* * *

Her questions are foolish, of course. No one could be expected to know all the answers—certainly I wouldn't expect if of YOU.

But you might make a little effort to continue the deception you practised some years ago. Maybe she still believes in your superiority, in spite of all your failings. Why not try to live up to that idea

* * *

And just try to trip yourself up next time you are tempted to shout down the back stairs, "Where's my . . ."

* * *

How could she know? You put it wherever it is!

* * *

And even if you didn't, and the children got away with it, why hold her responsible? It's bad enough having to look after children without picking up after a man whom one thinks knows everything!

To-night is a good time to start. Wife will likely ask you "Where are the stamps? I want to send the coupon for the Christmas helps." Just think it up now, and you'll be able to tell her—thus starting on the path that will lead back to that happy state that existed long ago.

* * *

And it will be to your advantage, anyhow, to find that stamp, because these helps, printed in a four-page folder, tell how to make Christmas gifts at home. It will save you money—and give your wife a lot of pleasure.

And if wives or husbands have any more "pet peeves" I'll be glad to hear them. They look funny, don't they, when they get into print?

* * *

And if one can laugh at a thing it ceases to become an annoyance.

Which gives me another idea for a Whatnot on the "Sense of Humor."

WOMEN APPROVE TRAINING GIRLS

Lady Aberdeen Outlines Scheme For Domestic Schooling of Girls.

LONDON, England, Nov. 21 (Canadian Press).—The scheme for the training of unemployed women for domestic work before they proceed to the Dominions was discussed at a meeting, representative of Scottish women organizations, held in Glasgow recently. The Marchioness of Aberdeen presided over a large attendance. The meeting approved the scheme, and appointed a small committee to consider the details.

Lady Aberdeen said much thought had been given lately to various migration to domestic employment overseas. It was part of a larger scheme which owed its origin to the recommendations of the Industrial Transference Board.

"Migration, to be satisfactory, must include women as well as men in its schemes," Lady Aberdeen said. "Anyone who has lived in Canada, or knows anything about life in the outlying parts of the Dominion, generalizes that the importance of obtaining a sufficient number of suitable women immigrants along with the men can scarcely be exaggerated." She pointed out she had seen this need, for not only had her husband been GovernorGeneral of Canada, but until recently he had been a Canadian farmer on a large scale.

Lady Aberdeen had seen many examples of youths sent out by their families, brought up in good homes, and forced to live in shacks, when they got to Canada, amidst indescribable squalor and disorder, unable to cook themselves a decent meal or make their beds. Under these circumstances their health broke down, and they were down and out.

Her own particular ambition, she said, was to recruit all the surplus sisters from all classes to go with their brothers, take service on a Canadian farm whilst their brothers did likewise, and thus gain experience until their own land and house were ready for them, and very soon there would be an exchange of sisters into wives in the most natural way possible. Meanwhile the brothers would never go through the tragic homeless experiences leading to disaster.

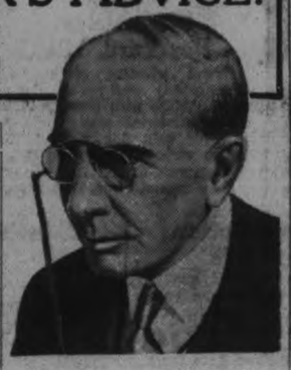
A DOCTOR'S ADVICE:

GO LIGHT ON LAXATIVES!



Everyone needs a laxative AT TIMES. But there's no need for making it a HABIT. If you have the habit, you can be rid of it in thirty days. Or less! And this is how:

The next time you go to take any strong cathartic—don't. Instead, take a little cascara. That's not a vicious drug, but the bark of a tree. The laxative made with cascara couldn't harm a child. It is, in fact, the one cathartic many physicians will approve for children. Gentle as it is, cascarizing is just as thorough in cleansing the colon as the more powerful purges that actually sap a person's strength.

Proof that there's no habit from cascara begins the very day after taking. Instead of being clogged worse than ever, the bowels are more inclined to move OF THEIR OWN ACCORD. You may have to take cascara several times to establish regularity. But the times you need this gentle stimulus grow further apart. And you NEVER find you must increase the amount.

Cascara's ideal form is the candy Cascaret that pleases any palate, and you'll find them at the first drug store you ask

MINING BRIEFS

Harry R. Harcourt, M.E., of the Jackson Manion Mines, has received a wire from the property ot the effect that the diamond drill hole being put down from surface cut 6½ feet of ore, averaging $14.25 per ton, and 3 feet averaging $2.05 per ton at a distance of approximately 300 feet from the shaft. This is 100 feet further north of the nearest lateral operation.

* * *

It is reported that, commencing December 1st, Lake Shore will step up production to $500,000 monthly and that two additional tube mills are being installed towards this end. The foundations of these are now said to be in process of being poured. It is further stated that an additional filter will be taken in. At the lowest levels of the mine two new almost solid quartz veins are said to have been discovered. These two breaks are reported to be 40 feet in width.

Kirkland Gold Belt (Wood Kirkland) is now said to have uncovered their break for 3,000 feet on surface. This is said to widen out to 80 feet in places showing values up to $18.50 per ton. The Nipissing Central Railway are now putting a spur line into the property.

* * *

The crosscut now starting from the 250-foot level of the Amulet is expected to cut the "B" ore body within ten days. It will then be continued to intercept the "C" ore body, states a despatch from Rouyn.

* * *

The electrical survey being carried out by the United Verde Extension on their Mount Nickel property in Sudbury is now said to have been completed. Diamond drilling will commence immediately.

* * *

Maritime advices are to the effect that an engineer's inspection of the Evangeline Mine shows encouraging copper deposition with widths up to three feet of massive chalcopyrite. This will be diamond drilled immediately.

Arthur Lakes, consulting engineer of the Noble Five Mines, B.C., wires that the recent work has proven the company's Deadman vein to be thirty feet wide. These dimensions are said to have been proven by crosscuts, which, as yet, have not reached the wall. Twenty feet of this vein is said to be clean, high-grade shipping ore, with the remainder high-grade mill ore. Just how much 'remainder' means cannot be determined as yet as work has not indicated how far this vein extends vertically or horizontally.

The Interprovincial Exploration Company have completed the sinking of a three-compartment shaft on the Ben Nevis property to a depth of 340 feet. Crosscutting is now under way on the 225- and 325-foot levels to open up at depth the rhyolite and andesite brecciated zone which contains the fractures explored on surface. Values are in lead, zinc, copper and some gold and silver. Lateral work is expected to proceed rapidly. Interprovincial Exploration Company recently increased its capital to 5,000,000 no par value shares of which 3,000,000 shares have been issued with the remainder, 2,000,000 shares, remaining in the treasury.

It is reported that Ventures Ltd., will work a recently acquired property in the Oxford Lake district of Manitoba. This will make the company an operating as well as holding company. Ventures holds control of the Falconbridge Nickel Mines.

MANY SECURITIES SET NEW RECORDS

New York Exchange Witnesses Wildest Rush In Its History.

(By Stanley W. Premosil, Associated Press Financial Editor.)

NEW YORK, November 21 (Associated Press). — With four high-priced issues skyrocketing $35.00 to $83.00 a share, and at least fifty others climbing $1.00 to $10.00 a share to new high records, Wall Street yesterday witnessed the wildest stock market in its history. The violence of the advance scared many small traders and investors into liquidating their stocks, with the result that many of the gains were cut down, and a number of issues showed losses of $1.00 to $5.00 a share.

Total sales set a new high record at 6,841,900 shares, which contrasts with the previous record of 6,714,400 established last Friday.

Heavy Order List.

Orders poured into the market in such gigantic volume that the ticker ran from 30 to 100 minutes behind the market during the greater part of the day, the usual last minute rush of orders delaying the printing of the final transaction until two hours and forty-two minutes after the market closed, the longest delay on record.

Forced by the thousands of complaints against the present service and the widespread confusion caused in brokerage houses throughout the country to take drastic action, officials of the exchange yesterday decided to drop all sales volume from the tape, except for a few minutes after the opening, beginning on Thursday.

Stock Prices on Ticker.

Under the new plan, only stock prices will be printed on the ticker, and it is expected that the quotation service will be speeded up at least 25 per cent. Arrangements are being made by the exchange to supply sales volume of individual stocks to press associations and newspapers pending the installation of special telegraph printers which are being provided for this service, but the details have not been worked out.

It was originally intended to drop all sales volume below 500 shares and to delay the inauguration of the change until the special telegraph printers had been installed in newspaper and press association offices next month, but the extreme delays of the past few days have necessitated a further curtailment in ticker tape characters and an advance in the date of the beginning of the new plan.

Based on an average price of around $85 a share for all listed stocks, yesterday's tremendous turnover involved an exchange of securities valued at nearly $600,000,000.

The average of 20 leading industrial stocks, compiled by the Associated Press advanced $2.71 a share yesterday to a new high record at $252.67, which compares with the year's low of $178.84, and an average of $224.45 at the end of last month. The average of 20 leading rails advanced $2.51 a share to $155.30, but is still about $1.75 below the year's high.

Speculative interest in yesterday's market centred in the sensational advances in Case Threshing Machine, Dupont, International Harvester, and Radio. Case soared $51.00 a share to $500, and dropped back to $492; International Harvester jumped $60 to $494.75, and fell back to $478; and Radio ran up $35.50 to $367, and fell back to $358.

Scientist Makes Rubber From Bituminous Coal

PITTSBURGH, Penn., Nov. 20.—(Canadian Press).—Belief that coal will some time become an important source of the world's rubber supply was expressed before the international conference on bituminous coal to-day. Dr. Fritz Hofmann, Berlin, said he had succeeded in making synthetic rubber from coal but at a prohibitive expense. Eventually he believed it could be done on commercial basis.

LEAFS LOSE FIRST GAME OF SEASON

SENATORS PLAY COMBINATION HOCKEY TO DEFEAT LEAFS 4-1

Ottawa Draws Up On Even Terms With Toronto, Canadiens and Maroons For First Place in the International Section of the N.H.L.

HORNE GETS SOLE COUNTER FOR LEAFS.

OTTAWA, Ont., November 21.—Ottawa Senators hung up their first victory of the National Hockey League season, after figuring in two tie contests, by drubbing the Toronto Maple Leafs before 5,000 in the Auditorium here last night by a 4 to 1 score. The enthusiastic gathering included His Excellency the Governor-General and a party from Government House.

The Senators, flashing a brand of brilliant combination hockey, which was sadly missed in their earlier games, played all over the Leafs, and were masters of the situation throughout, even though the Leafs held them even in the scoring in the first period when Connell misjudged Horne's shot and the puck landed high in the net over Connell's head.

Frank Clancy, who accounted for the first two Senator tallies, played a great game throughout. Ottawa overwhelmed the Leafs in the last period and added two more goals via Teghey and Finnigan, the two young Ottawa wings.

Lorne Chabot, Toronto goalie, gave one of the greatest exhibitions of net work ever witnessed here to hold the Senators at bay when he had only A. Blair in front of him. The rest of the team were in the penalty box.

The teams:

Ottawa — Goal, Connell; defence, Clancy and Boucher; centre, Nighbor; right wing Finnigan; left wing, Touhey; subs., A. Smith, Grosvenor, Elliott, Halliday, Shields, Klirea.

Officials — Billy Bell and Jean Dussault, Montreal.

The Summary.

First Period—
1—Ottawa, Clancy (Nighbor), 11.15.
2—Toronto, Horne (Blair), 6.10.
Second Period—
3—Ottawa, Clancy (Touhey), 5.40.
Third Period—
4—Ottawa, Touhey (Finnigan), 3.45.
5—Ottawa, Finnigan (Grosvenor), 11.20.

Final score—Ottawa 4, Toronto 1.

Penalties—First period (Day, major; Duncan Smith, Arbour, Bailey, Clancy); second period (Day, Arbour, Art Smith, Clancy, Nighbor); third period (Finnigan, Bailey).

HOCKEY SCORES.

The scores of hockey games played last night were as follows:

National League.
Ottawa 4, Maple Leafs 1.
Canadiens 1, Boston 0.
Montreal 1, Rangers 0.
Pittsburgh 2, Chicago 0.

Canadian League.
Toronto 4, Hamilton 4. Ten minutes' overtime.

MILLIONAIRES TIE WITH TIGERS

Each Team Scores a Goal in Hectic Extra Session.

SCORE IS 4 TO 4.

TORONTO, Nov. 21.—Hospitality to Hamilton seems to be the motto of Toronto Millionaires, for before the season opened they shipped up a squad of players to make a team, while last night in the first local game of the Canadian Professional Hockey League schedule, they allowed them to part the points, with a 4—4 overtime tie, which gives each club a single point in the standings. There was not a great deal of hockey shown at any time during the test, although the final scramble for a winning score provided enough excitement to save the show. Opening night did not leave a very high impression with the customers, but the brand of play is bound to improve and as soon as the players strike their true stride and master team play Toronto can count on a championship contender.

Hamilton took both the Millionaires and their followers by surprise, as there was plenty of talent wearing the Yellow and Black. Marty Lauder, who won fame with the Owen Sound champions two years ago, who was picked up by Boston, supplied the big shock when he started at midice. How the Hamilton club collected so many players in two weeks is a mystery, but on their showing last night and prospects they compare favorably with any team in the circuit. Lauder, Brophy and Dunning formed a smart attacking division for the Tigertown, while Quennville and Jock Bennett, although lacking polish to their play, gave Reid in goal sturdy protection. The Hams were also well supplied with subs., who looked better than the Millionaires' on the evening's play.

PITTSBURG WINS FROM CHIHAWKS

Black Hawks Unable To Break Away From Losing Streak —Lose 2-0.

MANY PENALTIES.

CHICAGO, November 21. — The revamped Chicago Black Hawks continued their losing habits, which began last year, falling before the Pittsburg Pirates last night in the opening home game of the season, before a crowd of 6000. The score was: Pittsburg 2, Chicago 0.

The Pirates scored their first goal in 12.35, when Milks took a pass from Darragh and shoved the puck past Goalie Gardiner. In the third period the Pittsburg sextet scored its second goal, Drury sending the rubber into the net on a pass from Milks. Ripley was the Hawks' star, leading the attack that was stopped repeatedly by the great defensive work of Goalie Miller and Holway. The lineup:

Chicago: Goal, C. Gardiner; defence, Wentworth and Loughlin; centre, Keats; wings, Arbour and Irvin; subs, Burns, A. McKinnon, Ripley, Couture and Taylor.

Pittsburg: Goal, Miller; defence, Smith and J. McKinnon; centre, Milks; wings, Cotton and Darragh; subs, Drury, White, McCaffrey, Holway and McCurry.

Officials: Dave Ritchie, Montreal, and W. O'Hara, Ottawa.

The Summary.
First Period.
1. Pittsburg, Milks 12.35
Second Period.
No score.
Third Period.
2. Pittsburg, Drury 8.25

Penalties: First period, Drury and McCaffrey; second period, Ripley, McCaffrey, Cotton and A. McKinnon, third period, none.

FAMOUS CANADIAN RUGBY GAMES, PLAYS AND PLAYERS

By NICK BAWLF— Former star football, lacrosse and hockey player, now coach at Cornell

Queen's University's famous football team, thrice Dominion champions, had won twenty-six consecutive victories and were favored to defeat a powerful Ottawa team when they met in their now memorable game at Lansdowne Park, in the capital, November 28, 1925. The tricolor of Queen's had floated from the masthead for three years, and but for the super play of the famous Ottawa club that afternoon, the red, white and black colors would never have replaced it. The Ottawa's won the game and the Dominion title, 11 points to 2.

Thirteen thousand Ottawans witnessed Queen's downfall. The big red team's giant line stopped "Red" McKelvie's plunging and repeatedly broke up the great Leadley-Batstone-Mundell backfield running attack. Tubman outpunted Leadley. The heretofore invincible Kingstonians were beaten by a team that wouldn't be beat.

The Ottawas were leading the sensational struggle at the beginning of the last period, 3 points to 2. Tubman and Miller and Connell were playing a spectacular halfback game for the Ottawas. Another rouge was added to the Capitalians' score, and then came the break of the game. A high punt was booted over the goalline to Batstone, who was tackled so fiercely by three Ottawa linemen that the ball flew out of his arms. Jim Wright, the burly Rough Rider, fell on it for a touchdown. Defeat was surely a new and sad experience for Queen's.

The Ottawas' plunge or extension run used that afternoon is diagrammed.

The McCann-coached winners used a variation of Dr. Williams' famous Minnesota shift formation.

Quarterback Lynch No. 1 in the diagram would juggle his giants into an unbalanced line with Monahan or Timmis in No. 2 position, flanked on the left by that hard running back, Charlie Connell, and by No. 3, brainy Joe Miller on the right. Lynch would take the ball from the snap and pass it to No. 2 back when the play was a plunge. When he called for his pet play the extension end run, he would fake a pass to No. 2, then lob the ball to No. 3, who, when the line was reached, would relay the oval to Connell. It was a great play. The line-up:

Ottawas—Forwards, Emerson; halfbacks, Miller, Tubman, Connell; quarter, Lynch; snap, Bruce; insides, Humphry; middles Timmis, Monahan; outsides, Starr, Young.

Queen's—Forward, Mundell; halfbacks, Leadley Batstone, Howard; quarter, Baldwin; snap, Lewis; insides, Muirhead, Adams; middles, McKelvie, Norrie; outsides, Walker, Thomas.

Officials—O'Brien and DeGruchy.

To-morrow, the Queen's-Granites versus the Ottawas' game of 1893 will be played.

VIEWS ON SPORTS

P.C.I. have been ordered to play University of Toronto Schools in a sudden-death game at Port Hope on Saturday.

Coach Browne put his P.C.I. team through a fast workout at James Stevenson Park yesterday afternoon in preparation for their next big game in the rounds of the Interscholastic playoffs. The game will be with University of Toronto Schools, winners of the Preparatory Schools group. U.T.S. also defeated Vaughn Road Collegiate, victor in the suburban group series of Toronto, last Saturday. They are reported to be a fast team, but it is doubtful if they are as good this year as some previous U.T.S. teams have been.

* * * * * *

The U.T.S. team did not romp through their games with the same ease that their teams of other years have done. They lack the leadership of that great rugby coach, Mike Rodden, who was the source of much of the success of those former teams. The squad this year appears to be just an ordinary good rugby team, but not nearly on a par with some of their teams of other years.

* * * * * *

The P.C.I. team, with their esprit de corps, fighting spirit and speedy plays, ought to be able to defeat this U.T.S. team. But it means a real battle against a team that will certainly be heavier than themselves.

* * * * * *

The Belleville Intelligencer has the following to say about the game last Saturday: "The Albert College squad will doff the old moleskins for another year, for on Saturday they met a better than they, and though they fought gamely, went down to a 4 to 1 defeat. Peterborough Collegiate Institute should go far this year in the Interscholastic rugby finals, especially if they play the game they did on Saturday. . . . They certainly had Yuill marked right down to the ground, and he didn't stand much chance of getting away. Whenever he carried the ball, about four Petes seemed to pile on him at the same moment, and about the same thing could be said for the rest of them."

* * * * * *

Kingston will not play in the Central League this year. They failed to send representatives to the meeting in Deloro. As a matter of fact, the other teams in the league were happy that they did not make application for entry.

That Canada intends taking an active part in international athletics is apparent in the news that Bobby Robinson and Elwood Hughes are lining up a strong Canadian team to compete at the Millrose A.C. games in New York this winter. Canada is also embarking on the most ambitious program ever attempted in athletics in inviting the different parts of the Empire to hold the Empire "Olympic" games here in 1930. All these great competitions will certainly help athletics in Canada, and by 1932 when the Olympic Games will be held in Los Angeles, Cal., Canadian athletes will likely carry off even greater honors than they did this year.

Miss Hilda Rous, of Port Hope, won the O.H.A. Memorial Scholarship for the University of Toronto. The terms of the deed of gift provide that "it is to be awarded at matriculation to a male student who has served overseas with the Canadian forces in the Great War, or to a student who is the son or daughter of one who has served." At the annual meeting of the O.H.A. held in Toronto last Saturday three similar scholarships were given to each of the other universities in the Province.

W. A. Hewitt writes in the Toronto Star: "According to Bob Zuppke, the University of Illinois coach, the difference between a star and an average football player is the star's ability to 'stretch' himself at critical periods. It is just a matter of a few inches, but it spells the difference between brilliance and mediocrity, between victory and defeat. That is something for the young football player to keep in his head."

LES CANADIENS BLANK BRUINS

Mantha Catches Home Team Napping in Last of Second Period.

PLAY BRILLIANT HOCKEY.

BOSTON, Nov. 21. — (Canadian Press.)—Fifteen thousand people — the largest crowd ever to witness a hockey game in the Hub City—last night saw the flashy Canadiens, of Montreal, blank the Boston Bruins 1 to 0 in a scheduled game of the National Hockey League. Interest in the struggle was so intense that several thousand who had been disappointed in not getting tickets crashed the doors, and police were called to eject them. The match was the first played in the new Boston Garden.

The only goal of the night was scored by Sylvio Mantha, Canadien defence man, near the end of the second period. Most of Bruins were preparing to leave the ice when Mantha grabbed the puck inside the blue line and started down the side wall. He went unchecked until he reached the Bruins' defence line. However, his speed carried him through, and he caught Tohmpson, the Boston goalie, unawares with his ankle-high shot.

The Bruins worked like Trojans to even matters up in the final session, but their efforts crashed on a solid Canadien defence, which was ably assisted by their forwards, who backchecked like fiends.

LOSE TO MAROONS.

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—The Montreal Maroons got some revenge last night for their defeat at the hands of the New York Rangers in the Stanley Cup play-offs last spring by taking the first game of the new season between the two clubs by a 1 to 0 count. Through three periods of as fast and furious hockey as the Madison Square Garden ice has ever seen the Maroons consistently outplayed the locals to get a well-earned decision.

The only goal of the game came near the end of the second period, when Nels Stewart, Montreal wing, staged a solo dash and beat John Ross Roach with a beautifully timed long shot. With no Ranger defence player near him, Stewart placed his shot in the far corner of the net while Roach was defending the near side.

An added drop of sweetness for the Maroons in their victory was that the official presentation of the Stanley Cup, emblem of the world's championship, to the Rangers took place just before the game.

STOP INDIGESTION BEFORE IT BEGINS

Don't wait for sourness, gas, and the gnawing, griping pains of indigestion to attack you before you seek relief. Stop these things before they start. Even the worst stomach sufferers avoid indigestion by forming the safe and pleasant practice of taking a little Bisurated Magnesia—either tablets or powder—immediately after every meal. This instantly neutralizes excess acid in the stomach, prevents its further formation and really makes indigestion impossible. Food digests naturally, healthfully, just as Nature intended, giving the body the full benefit of its nourishing qualities. That is why Bisurated Magnesia is used every day, the world over, by many thousands of former sufferers who now eat what they want with no more fear of indigestion. Druggists everywhere sell and recommend Bisurated Magnesia, and a good time to start its use would be to-day.

Star Spangled Boys Rewarded By Boss

NEW YORK, November 21. — All the members of the New York Americans hockey team are wearing new hats, and all of them will have new windbreakers to sport at the first opportunity. These are the rewards for holding the world champion Rangers to a 1-1 score at the Garden on Sunday night.

The players had hardly reached their dressing room in the Garden when Bill Dwyer, owner of the club, pushed through the door.

"Quite a performance," said Dwyer, "and I am delighted. A victory would have been twice as thrilling but it is quite a task to tie the champions on their home ice and you fellows deserve a lot of credit. Each of you may get a new hat and a windbreaker, and charge them to the club."

As Dwyer moved out of the dressing rooms one of the players remarked:

"One more goal, gang, and we we would probably have had shoes, a suit and an overcoat."

STRONG TEAM WILL BE SENT

Canadian Athletes Are Being Picked For Millrose A. C. Games.

MEET IN NEW YORK.

Canada will send a strong team to Madison Square garden to compete against America's best in the Millrose A.C. games next February. Percy Williams of Vancouver and Jimmie Ball of Winnipeg have sent letters to Bobbie Robinson of Hamilton, who is the originator of the idea of sending a Canadian team, stating their willingness to run for Canada. Johnny Kirkpatrick and several others of the runners who did so well at the Olympics will be invited to join the Canadian team. The team will compete in a relay race and in solo events. Elwood Hughes of Toronto is rounding together a fast girls' team to send to the games also. The first indoor athletic meet of the Ontario branch of the A.A.U. of C. will be held in the Coliseum, Toronto, while the famous runners, Williams and Ball, are in the East so that they may compete.

Vancouver papers are coming out strong for the idea that the Canadian Olympic trials of 1930 should be held in Vancouver, since the 1932 Olympic games will be held at Los Angeles, Cal. British Columbia is planning to organize an athletic club similar to the Olympic club operating Hamilton that trained so many young athletes for the Canadian Olympic team last year. British Columbia and Vancouver in particular, it is thought, should have no difficulty encouraging young athletes in their part of the country since Percy William, a native son, won the double sprints championship of the world.

That the British Empire "Olympic" meet will be held in Hamilton in 1930 is practically assured. At the Olympic games in Antwerp it was agreed upon by representatives from Great Britain, Australia, New Zealand and South Africa that the Empire games be held in Hamilton in 1930. Hamilton now seeks to have the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada endorse the project at their annual meeting at Port Arthur in December. This will be the most ambitious athletic program ever undertaken by Canada and every branch of sports must necessarily get behind the move to make it successful.

Banff will likely be the scene of the Canadian track and field championships next summer. The only organization to apply for the championships has been the Alberta branch of the A.A.U. of C.

Marsters To Carry Lucky Houdini Charm In Battle

HANOVER, N. H., Nov. 21.— Al Marsters now has a good luck token to speed his way to victory for Dartmouth.

Houdini, when doing his famous handcuff trick, always carried a four of diamonds with him. With this on his person, he always escaped. Harold Osborne, president of the United Shote Machinery Corporatnon, was once a student of Houdini's and received from his master the card autographed "Never Held," with the date April, 1907, and Houdini's initials.

This card was sent to Al Marsters, the diamond of this gridiron, by Osborne to be worn in the Green's remaining two contests. Al's number is four, so the charm should be doubly effective. Al wore the card in the Cornell game with good effect and will wear it again against Northwestern.

MUST SIGN WITH PIRATES

Goalie Must Either Play With Pittsburgh Or Remain Idle.

WARNS OTHER CLUBS.

BOSTON, Mass., Nov. 21 (Canadian Press).—Roy Worters, hold-out goalie of the Pittsburgh hockey club, was given the ultimatum of playing for Benny Leonard's team or remaining idle all season by President Frank Calder of the National Hockey League who came here yesterday to watch the Boston Bruins open its home season with Les Canadiens.

"Worters will play for Pittsburgh or not at all," Calder said, "and under no circumstances will we permit outside influence to be brought to bear. Worters must settle with Pittsburgh and any other club interfering or tampering with a player, while salary differences are being discussed, will be severely dealt with."

"As the Worters case now stands," Calder said, "he is under my personal jurisdiction. He was suspended by me and will be reinstated by no other person but me, when I think the proper time comes. Pittsburgh cannot play Worters, even if he should sign, until I release him from suspension.

"I have heard the stories that the New York Americans were quite sure that Worters eventually would land there. Well, they are taking too much for granted. Leonard does not want to dispose of Worters and I think you will find that Worters will play very little hockey unless he is in a Pittsburgh uniform."

WHERE SALT IS USED

The Canadian production of salt, except for small exports, is sold in Canada principally to the dairy, meat-curing, fisheries, and chemical industries, and as table salt for household use. The market for salt in Canada is steadily increasing.

PRODUCTION OF GRAPHITE.

Canadian graphite is marketed as refined flake, the product of concentration of disseminated ore. No lump crystalline graphite (plumbago) is produced in Canada. The mines and mills are situated in the Perth, Bancroft and Calabogie districts in Ontario, and in the Buckingham, Guenette, and St. Remi districts in Quebec.

PRESERVING UPHOLSTERY.

Leather upholstery in the open car should have periodic cleaning and dressing. In this cleansing process, some make the mistake of using gasoline and kerosene. These have the effect of drying and cracking the leather. The proper agent is household ammonia mixed with a generous quantity of water. Applied with a soft cloth it will free the leather from spotiness. A good leather dressing then should be applied.

PROTECT RIM WITH PAINT.

The practice of one of the popular priced car makers of chromium-plating the rims of his sport models, holds a tip for the average motorist. Chromium is rustless, tarnish proof. A look at the rims not thus protected, if they have see nmuch service, probably will reveal rust. It should be removed and the spot treated to a light coat of aluminum paint to prevent deterioration of the tire bead.

NEARLY every woman spends a part of her day in the kitchen. Just imagine the time, the trouble and the energy you would save yourself with a telephone extension right in this busiest of rooms.

With the extension telephone ever at your elbow, you neither vex the calling party by delay in answering—nor find that he or she has tired of waiting and has "hung up". And in ordering your supplies from grocer, butcher and baker . . . how convenient to be able to do so right on the spot. With your eyes fixed on the empty larder shelves, nothing is likely to be overlooked or forgotten.

The cost of such an extension is trivial . . . only a few cents a day. All you need do is telephone our Business Office and ask for particulars. Or, ask any Bell Telephone employee to take your order for this convenient service.

VARSITY ORPHANS READY FOR TIGERS

Charlie Bailie Will Be Only Absentee When Hamilton Tackles Toronto.

TORONTO, Nov. 21.—There is no rest for the wicked or football finalists as the Orphans, conquerors of Balmy Beach and Sarnia are finding out. It is just one blooming thing after another with the Varsity O.R.-F.U. champions, who tackle the Tigers in their jungle lair on Saturday in the Eastern Canada final.

The blue and white, so called miracle team, have had a long, hard grind, but the worst is yet to come. They knocked the spots off several rugged aggregations in their rush to the front, but they will discover in all probability when they bump into the Bengals that their achievements in the past pale into insignificance compared with the task before them on November 24, three days hence.

They did something worth while when they backed the bulky Balmy Beach bunch off the map and their triumph over Sarnia was no mean feat, but in the Tiger tribe they are meeting a collection who do not know what it is to acknowledge defeat. But the courageous champions of the Ontario Union are not feeling blue over the job confronting them nor are they getting white about the gills; they are not that kind of chaps. They will be in there doing their vest best on Saturday and, win or lose, the Hamilton outfit will have every reason to know that they have been in a battle.

Bowling
Alley Gossip
By Pin Boy

Meteors No. 2 made the alleys rumble out a tune of victory in their combat with the Jolly Fellows last week when they took every game. A. McKenzie was the stellar performer, jumbling the bottles for a high single score of 179 while M. Pilling took high three with 414.

The Meteors No. 1 team stole a march on the Insulation No. 1 crowd by taking every game because the Insulation girls with the exception of the Jones' sisters were away below the mark expected. Evelyn Jones took high three honors with 434, and was tied with B. Jones for high single, 206.

The battle between the Fractional Motors No. 1 and Smart Set was far from colorful as both teams seem to have hit a slump judging from the scores. The former dropped two games and won the other by the scant margin of 48 pins. Mildred Vass had high single with 187 and Ethel Parkins turned in some nice work for a high three of 464.

Dorothy Seabrook's quartette of heavy hitters took the Insulation No. 2 aggregation into camp for a three game win, both teams playing four men. High single and high three went to M. Ridley who bowled 162 and 413.

The only real battle of the night was staged by the Pirates who took 2 games from Fractional No. 2. M. Connors for the Motor Makers made the highest single score of the night —239—K. Tobin took the high three score with 476 one pin more than M. Connors.

CHOIR CONCERT BIG SUCCESS

Rev. G. E. Morley, B.A., Delights Audience in St. James' United Church.

VOCAL SOLOS.

The concert held under the auspices of the choir of St. James' United church on Monday evening, was a brilliant success, both as to the performance of the artist, Rev. G. E. Morley, B. A., of Toronto, and the large audience.

Rev. Mr. Morley proved a most versatile entertainer, delighting his hearers with his clever impersonations.

His first selection was "Jean Desprez," by Robert W. Service, a story of juvenile bravery in France during the great war.

As recalls, Mr. Morley gave several short gems by the same author.

The next number was very humorous and was entitled "A Race for a Sweetheart between a Farmer and a City Man."

One of Mr. Morley's best numbers was Nellie McClung's "Mrs. Brown's Change and Rest."

This was followed by two widely contrasting and vastly amusing numbers: "Interviewing the Old Man," and "A Boy's Oration on a Cow."

Mr. Morley was most generous with his recalls, returning three times to the encores of the last number, and his audience enjoyed every moment.

The readings were interspersed by two vocal solos, which were beautifully rendered by Mrs. G. H. Cutmore. Two piano solos by Mr. Townsend were also much enjoyed.

RATS CAUSE BREAK IN CITY PAVEMENT

By NEA Service.

SWAMPSCOTT, Mass., Nov. 21.—A newspaper found in a rat nest under the pavement here recently indicates that the home was tunnelled by the rodents more than a year ago.

Workmen who investigated a rut in the pavement found a 75-foot tunnel leading to the nest. It was a break in this passage which caused the pavement to give way. Two grown rats and a brood of eight were removed from the strange home.

AIM AT RECLAIMING COUNTRY BEAUTY

Strong Movement On Foot Against Disfiguring Landscape By Billboards.

LEICESTER, Eng., Nov. 21—(Canadian Press).—As an outcome of the "Save the Countryside Conference" held here recently it is hoped a bill may be introduced in Parliament this session with a view to saving the countryside from disfigurement by offensive billboard advertising, ugly buildings and oil pump stations. This campaign begun at this conference, held at University College and attended by 150 delegates presided over by Col. R. E. Martin, Chairman of the Leicester County Council, is being extended throughout the country with the resultant rousing of the public to action. In connection with the movement is a "Chamber of Horrors" in Leicester, a collection of photographs made by the honorary secretary of the conference, H. H. Peach, and this is proving effective "advertising" in its way.

The agitation against blatant billboards and other objectionable features of the main travelled roads in these days of motor cars and much travel has been going on for some time but it was not until the conference here that definite mass action was begun to preserve the amenities of the countryside. The conference was national in its character and was attended by men prominent in various walks of life. Features of the gathering were letters from Premier Stanley Baldwin and former Premier Ramsay MacDonald, in sympathy with the movement.

Mr. Baldwin wrote: "The countryside is the heart of England. It is for all those who care for it to do their utmost to preserve it clean and undefiled. While something can be done by regulation and control, a real solution lies only in the education of public opinion, and in the development of habit and practice which will save the countryside from atrocities which are now too often committed."

Ramsay MacDonald was more vigorous: "Every day that goes past some offensive bugalow, or some abomination of a building scheme, or some horror of a wayside oil pump station, or some blatant vulgarity of an advertisement, destroys not only the immediate spot where it is placed, but the whole sweep of the countryside," he said. "Something really must be done to stop it, and nothing can be done until public opinion is shocked by these atrocities and roused to action."

A report of the conference, effectively illustrated showing how the country is being disfigured by unsuitable buildings and advertisements, is being widely circulated and every possible step is being taken to rouse public opinion. The Home Secretary's office has written asking for a copy of the report and this is taken as a sign of official sympathy with the movement, in addition to the Premier's letter to the conference.

A public meeting held in connection with the conference a resolution which was moved by Dr. Vaughan Cornish, President of the Geographical Association, and carried unanimously urged the Government to "stimulate the employment by local authorities of the powers already conferred upon them by parliament for the preservation of scenic amenity in town and country.

Professor Patrick Abercombe, Professor of Architecture at Liverpool University, suggests the formation of a National League made up of people who would undertake not to buy goods blatantly advertised in the countryside, and it is understood the suggestion will be acted upon.

JULIAN C. SMITH HAS FINE CAREER

Holds Prominent Position in Engineering, Industrial and Business Life of Dominion.

Distinguished visitors to Peterborough within the past year have been numerous, but perhaps no more interesting character has been encountered by The Examiner than Julian Cleveland Smith, LL.D., M.E.I.C., president of the Engineering Institute of Canada, who was one of the guest speakers at the annual dinner of the Peterborough Branch of the Engineering Institute, held last evening. After his name, one writer has placed no less than seventeen letters, the degree of LL.D., and M.E.I.C., M.I.E.E., F.AM.I.E.E., all peculiarly significant to the members of his profession. His prominent position in the engineering, industrial and business life of the Dominion means to the Engineering Institute, a wealth of experience and understanding of its problems.

Beginning his career as a draughtsman, Mr. Smith joined the organization of the Shawinigan Water and Power Company as an assistant engineer, in 1902, and his worth was recognized in promotions that have brought him to the vice-presidency of one of the greatest power companies in the world. In addition he is president or vice-president of perhaps a dozen subsidiary companies.

In 1922 he was signally honored with the degree of Doctor of Laws, conferred upon him by Queen's University in recognition of his high attainments, while numerous other honors have been accorded him. He is a member of various clubs in New York and Montreal and of the leading technical associations in England and the United States.

GREEK STEAMER TAKEN IN TOW

Unknown Steamer Comes To Rescue of Rudderless Steamship Near Horta.

SMALL CRAFT FAIL.

HORTA, Island of Fayal, Azores, Nov. 21 (Canadian Press)—The Greek steamship Alexandria which was in distress off the Azores yesterday was taken under tow last night by a second steamship and taken out of danger.

At noon to-day the Alexandria was in sight of Horta and was being towed toward the harbor. The name and nationality of the rescue ship was not known here.

Throughout yesterday when the Alexandria lost her rudder, local launches were dispatched to the north of Fayal and made numerous attempts to reach the helpless steamer, but in every case the fury of the waves drove them off.

THEATRES

AT THE CAPITOL.

JOHN GILBERT IN "THE MASKS OF THE DEVIL" AT THE CAPITOL THURSDAY, FRIDAY AND SATURDAY—BIG STAGE SHOW THURSDAY NIGHT ONLY.

To-morrow evening Manager Stewart of the Capitol is giving his patrons an extra treat in the form of a big stage show consisting of ten people, at the regular price of admission. See the advertisement on this page regarding same.

The feature screen attraction for Thursday, Friday and Satuday is John Gilbert in "The Masks of the Devil."

The devil-may-care Don Juan of "Flesh and the Devil" returns to the screen again at the Capitol Theatre.

Gilbert has temporarily abandoned his highly-charged romantic roles during the past year, but more than makes up for their absence in his new picture.

thhe and in and are the the are an

The actor was born in Logan, Utah, the home of his grandparents, and received his education all over the country, wherever his parents happened to be. Both his father and mother were on the stage, members of a strolling company. Gilbert made his first stage appearance under Eddie Foy at the age of one year, at a theatre in Denver. He was a typical stage child and played many child roles in his early years.

After completing his education at the Hitchcock Military Academy, Gilbert had his first screen experience as an extra in 1915. After that he was a rubber salesman and a newspaper reporter before returning to pictures.

The star worked himself up through a variety of small roles until he played leading man for Mary Pickford in "The Heart of the Hills." For a while he was under contract to Maurice Tourneur, and even made his own pictures in New York City, and directed several other players.

Since his alliance with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Gilbert's screen appearances have been one triumph after another. He first established his reputation in "His Hour." After that came "He Who Gets Slapped," "The Merry Widow," "The Big Parade" and many other successes, including "La Boheme," "Flesh and the Devil," "Twelve Miles Out," "Man, Woman and Sin", "Four Walls" and "The Cossacks."

Gilbert is nearly six feet tall, has brown hair and eyes, and impresses one with his energy and vitality. His ambition is to be a writer and director as well as a star.

AT THE REGENT.

"American Beauty" Gives Human Insight Into Romantic Problems Of Average Lass.

A decidedly human story, presenting a real insight into the life of the American girl of average circumstances, is promised in "American Beauty," Billie Dove's latest starring production for First National Pictures now playing at the Regent Theatre.

As a typically American girl, with the not unusual ambition to marry a millionaire, but at the same time with a troubling affection for a youth in her own circumstances, the character played by Miss Dove is a very real one and gives her what is possibly her best opportunity for an outstanding screen portrayal.

"American Beauty," based on the short story of the same name by Wallace Irwin, was adapted to the screen and produced by Carey Wilson and directed by Richard Wallace.

Lloyd Hughes plays the leading masculine role opposite Miss Dove, with Walter McGrail, Margaret Livingston, Lucien Prival, Al St. John, Edythe Chapman, Alice White, Yola d'Avril, Loretta Young and others in prominent supporting parts. This is a Richard Wallace production.

William Boyd and Alan Hale in "Skyscraper".

They loved each other like brothers —and they said it with uppercuts!

Such is the novel relation of the leading characters in "Skyscraper," William Boy's latest DeMille starring feature which will be presented at the Regent theatre on Thursday.

Boyd, with Alan Hale is his "buddy," portrays a brawny steel worker in this comedy-drama, and indulges in frequent and enthusiastic battles with Hal for the sheer joy of combat, several of the fist-fights occurring high on the narrow girders of a half-completed skyscraper.

In addition to Hale, Boyd's supporting cast for "Skyscraper" includes Sue Carol and Alberta Vaughn in other featured roles.

STRESEMANN CALLS DEBT BIGGEST ISSUE

Sees Solution Possible Only If Total Does Not Exceed Capacity to Pay.

BERLIN, Nov. 21.—Dr. Gustav Stresemann, the Foreign Minister, in his first appearance before the Reichstag elected in May, discussed yesterday the problems of foreign policy facing the Reich. The three old questions of evacuation of the Rhineland, reparations and disarmament, he reviewed and explained the new phases into which they had developed through the recent negotiations.

Despite the blows which he said the Locarno spirit has received, and which the Foreign Minister characterized as a relapse in the progress of international understanding, he declared that the Locarno policies would be continued as far as the Reich was concerned, regardless of the complexion of the Government. It was the only path for a disarmed nation to follow, he said.

Dr. Stresemann's speech was warmly received by the parliamentarians and well-filled galleries, in which were several Ambassadors of foreign powers. That he will receive the support of a big majority in the coming debate is taken for granted.

Assails Occupation Policy

In thirty minutes before the Reichstag Dr. Stresemann attacked the Rhineland occupation policies with his usual vehemence, criticizing the manner in which he said the occupation troops had celebrated Armistice Day as not conducive to furthering good relations between the nations, for to the inhabitants it must have seemed that the troops were impressing upon them the fact that they were citizens of a defeated nation. He also expressed regret that the spirit of the troops in the Rhineland was less kindly than formerly, an attitude which has had a displeasing effect throughout Germany.

"Germany's rights are encroached upon as long as our evacuation demands are not fulfilled," he said. "We are unable to assume political burdens beyond the period set forth in the treaties as a means of obtaining earlier evacuation, nor is there a possibility for us to obtain evacuation by assuming financial burdens as the purchase price."

Dr. Stresemann emphasized again that evacuation and reparations were distinct and separate questions and could not be combined. Regarding the value to the allies of maintaining troops on German soil, Dr. Stresemann said:

"It must be seen that from the point of view of their own interests the further continuation of occupation represents only an apparent asset without practical advantage for them. On the other hand, it acts as a barrier in negotiations based on confidence in questions of European policy. There is no question that in the eyes of the German people, without regard to party lines, the procedure adopted previous to the evacuation negotiations appears as a relapse which must weaken confidence in professions of good will. This applies to those countries which declare they have no interest in a continuance of occupation, but which have done nothing practical toward realising their opinions.

WHY I LIKE TO BUY AT CHAIN STORES.

(By Fergus O'Connor, Douro)

My reasons why I like to buy at chain stores are many. Goods can be procured there cheaper than elsewhere. Edibles are guaranteed and products such as fruit and vegetables are hand-picked and graded in chain warehouses before being displayed in the stores.

Neatness and order is an essential in chain stores, and the clerk knows where this or that is and whether a supply is at hand or not.

Courtesy is found everywhere. The clerk who waits on you is quick and pleasant, and always ready to make suggestions. There is never a delay when business is at its height. The motto "if we haven't it we'll get it" is followed up by every clerk in every store. The grateful "Thank you" is heard from all.

Honesty is found there, that is the scales in every chain store are periodically tested and inspected and you are sure of accurate weight when you buy loose products such as sugar, tea, etc. We could not dare say that the clerk was dishonest because the employer only hires the honest and experienced man or women, and if they were dishonest the great numbers of people who shop there would go elsewhere. If these and innumerable other things were not found in chain stores I would certainly not like to buy there.

Other reasons are that the chain warehouses and stores, the buying of edibles and such like in the hands of capable men and have been for a good many years and therefore will be in the years to come.

OIL SPARE TIRE LOCK.

Even the motorist who is thorough in his lubrication scheme is prone to forget the lock on the spare tire. Squirting a few drops of oil on the lock now and then is an excellent idea, however. It lightens the burden of cahnging a tire by making it unnecessary to break the lock that may have rusted from lack of lubrication.

CARBURETOR OFTEN BLAMELESS.

Many car makers believe that the carburetor often is blamed unjustly for off-color performance. One, for instance, advises that before the carburetor is touched, the plug points and breaker points be checked for clearance and cleaned. After this he recommends that compression be tested to determine valve adjustment. Then it is suggested that the choke be checked. All these failing, he concedes that the carburetor may be wrong. The advice is sound and should be fololwed by any car owner.

BY GEORGE!
I wish I'd bought a Rogers myself

WHO are the men in this community who are saying, "By George! I wish I'd bought a Rogers myself"? Invariably, they are those who bought the first electric radio they happened to see. Without comparison. Without investigation.

Later on, such men hear the Rogers-Batteryless in action in some friend's home. They learn that it was first in the field; that it is backed by a four-year record of proven performance; that more Rogers-Batteryless Radios are sold than all other electric sets combined! And their regret is unmistakable.

The moral is plain: Don't buy any new electric radio without first hearing the pioneer Rogers-Batteryless. We will gladly arrange a free demonstration in your home any evening you name. Come in or 'phone us.

ZERO WEATHER AFFECTS ALL CARS

Rust, Scale and Leakage Constitute Triple-Threat During Cold Weather.

Rust, scale and leaks are the triple threat against which every car owner in a cold climate must guard, if he would adequately protect his radiator and engine block from the expansion stresses and bursting which a "freeze-up" may engender.

That an anti-freeze is an economic necessity is now admitted. Comparatively few however of the many millions of car owners have yet come to realize that even the best of the modern anti-freezes can do little to protect their cars against freezing if the air cooling system has not been properly cared for previous to pouring in the anti-freeze.

To coin a phrase, "an anti-freeze is effective only to the degree that the cooling system is clean and tight."

Proper servicing of the cooling system requires that before using an anti-freeze preparation one make sure that the entire cooling system of his car is free from rust, scale and leaks. Any well ordered garage or service station can attend to this or it can be done by the car owner at home.

Rust and scale are best removed by pouring washing soda solution into the radiator, and then running the motor for ten minutes, idling it as the solution is distributed thoroughly. Then flush out the entire system with clear water in order to remove the last vestige of washing move the hose connection while flushing.

After flushing, all parts of the cooling system should be tightened up, as the loosening and ejection of rust and scale may have tended to loosen them up also, or to have revealed small, hitherto obstructed aperatures through which the non-freeze liquid can penetrate. Parts to be tightened included naturally hose and pump connections, gaskets, expansion plates, drain cocks—which a surprisingly large number of owners neglect to turn off after draining, pump glands and grease cups on the water pump.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 22, 1928

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

Good and bad planetary aspects conflict today, according to astrology, which reads the adverse influences as dominant.

Again it is prognosticated that a leader of the people will arise to deal with great economic questions.

A sinister aspect appears to affect food prices and to warn America to conserve all that the soil produces.

Mars is in threatening mood, encouraging dissensions and quarrels. The aspect affects individuals as well as nations and is bad for domestic peace.

Under this direction of the stars, selfishness and vanity are supposed to be encouraged. Individualism may be accented in many ways that are unpleasant.

There is a benefic aspect that is promising to serious thinkers and should be helpful in making plans, but action should be delayed.

It is an unlucky day to start new enterprises or to make changes for there will be difficulty in readjustments.

Brainworkers should benefit at this time when new ideas will be of supreme value. Writers are fortunate.

While this configuration prevails both men and women who are entrusted with big responsibilities may waver and show indecision.

This is not a lucky day for soliciting money and wives should postpone any requests for new clothes or costly possessions.

Education is wonderfully well aspected, the stars giving promise of much practical training for the young who will reveal extraordinary talents.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a happy year, but it may bring some sort of a financial disappointment.

Children born on this day probably will succeed with comparatively little effort, for these subjects of Sagittarius usually know just how to hit the mark for which they aim. They are distinguished for keeping their own secrets and sometimes are hard to understand.

The surface of Paris streets requiring the attention of the public works department of the city now amounts to more than 10,000,000 square meters.

Unlisted Mining Market Has Had Dull Fortnight

TORONTO, Nov. 20.—There has been nothing to get excited about on the unlisted mining market for the past two weeks. With the exception of a few issues, such as Falconbridge, Wainwell Oil, Manitoba Basin and Cobalt Contact, trading has been very dull.

Falconbridge supplied the most excitement. From a start of $5, shares sold up to $6 on the street before it was traded in on the floor.

Wainwell Oil is another stock which has had an active fortnight. This issue sold at high as 22 cents.

Cobalt Contact has surprised everyone by remaining steady around 20 cents. Canadian Kirkland has also held up well, being in demand at 7 to 7½ cents. Word has recently been received that Aldermac made a large find while drifting on the 500-foot level. The new ore is believed to be an upward continuation of the ore cut last year on the 1,125 foot level from surface drilling. Aldermac should have a substantial rise on this news and looks like a buy at the present price of $1.50.

Metals Development, on account of recent operations on its Clearwater Lake claims, looks to be an attractive speculation at the present price of 20 to 25 cents.

Astoria Rouyn, Harker, Kirkland Gold Belt and Wood Kirkland are a few others which have experienced slight trading.

Consolidated Smelters Has Large Turnover

TORONTO, Nov. 20 (Canadian Press).—Consolidated Smelters with a turnover of 395 shares and a gain of twenty-two points at 317 was the feature of the broad list on the Toronto Stock Exchange this morning. Oil stocks which for the most part were firmer yesterday, failed to hold their advantage. Imperial Oil, selling at 92, was down ¾, McColl Frontenac dropped 3-8 to 36 1-8. International Petroleum lost a half at 50, British American Oil ¼ at 50, and Dominion Oil ¼ at 21¾.

Massey Harris was actively traded in, and after opening at 97, a gain of two points, dropped down to 93 at noon for a net loss of two. Brazilian, another active stock, was also down. Opening at 73½, it sold down to 72¼ for a loss of ¾. Canadian Canners stocks were in good demand. The Common stock sold up ¼ at 22¼. First Preferred a half at 90½, and the Second Preferred up one at 25. Abitibi advanced 1½ to 39¾. International Nickel opened at 193½, but at noon was down 2¼ at 191 in light trading.

Corn Reaches New Peak For Spring Deliveries

CHICAGO, Nov. 20 (Canadian Press).—Corn advanced to-day to above the highest price level which March and May deliveries had heretofore reached this season. Reduction of the German import duty on corn, counted as a decided bullish factor. Opening at ¾ off to ¼ up the corn market soon scored gain all around. Wheat and oats were likewise firmer with wheat starting unchanged to ⅝ up and subsequently showing a general advance.

Wheat, Dec. 115¾, March 121. Corn, Dec. 85⅝, March 88; oats, Dec. 46⅛, March 46¼.

Trading Is Less Active But Prices Are Steady

TORONTO, Nov. 21 (Canadian Press).—The Standard Stock and Mining Exchange continued firm during the morning session. Noranda, after opening at 57.00 and advancing to 57.15 receded to 55.75 for a net loss of 95 cents from yesterday's Trading was not as active as yesterday, but prices were steady.

Ajax Oil made a gain of 4½ at 49½. Picard, yesterday's feature, continued strong and sold at two, a gain of ⅝. Sherritt Gordon lost 10 to 6.65, and Hollinger 25 to 8.25; Teck Hughes was up 5 at 8.30, while Sylvanite dropped 5 to 2.25. McIntyre was up 25 at 20.00. Lake Shore dropped 10 at 18.10. Coast Copper gained 1.50 to 50.50; Abana two to 3.53 and Pend Oreille 25 at 10.00. Hudson Bay lost 10 to 19.90, and Falconbridge 10 to 4.90.

More Records Broken On New York Exchange

NEW YORK, November 21 (Canadian Press). — Speculation in stocks continued at a frantic pace in today's market, but the price movement displayed increasing irregularity. With trading demoralized by the long delays on the ticker, which was an hour late early this afternoon, there was a more general disposition to cut down long commitment on the part of large and small operators.

Call money continued in a plentiful supply at renewal rate of six and a half per cent.

Radio was again a spectacular performer in to-day's market, soaring 21 points to a new high record at 379, or nearly 300 above the year's low. Union Carbide, Pittsburgh Coal, National Biscuit, Keith Albee Orpheum Preferred, Wright Aero, and Midland Steel Products Preferred sold four to eight and a half points higher.

Oils were in brisk demand at rising prices on the reports that storage stocks were being heavily drawn upon. The heavy turnover in Sinclair was attributed to pool operations by the Cutton interests. Mexican Seaboard turned weak. Dupont and International Harvester, which recorded sensational advances yesterday, broke seven and one-half and five points respectively in the mid-day selling movement. Adams Express and International Nickel each fell about five point and May Department Stores, General Railway Signal, American Radiator, and Republic Steel dropped three points or more.

Insurance Company Has Most Successful Year

The monthly directors' meeting of the Pilot Automobile and Accident Insurance Company, Limited, was held at the head office of the company recently. Reporting on the progress of the company the managing director, Mr. D. McIntosh, stated the results to date would justify the anticipation of a very satisfactory and successful year. The loss ratio was low and the increased income over last year would be almost double the objective set.

The actual figures submitted were as follows:—

Premium Income.—20th April to 31st December, 1927, $25,614.48; Agents, 97.

Premium Income.—1st January to 31st October, 1928, $159,884.72; Agents, 196.

New Company Controls All Dunlop Products

From 1894 to 1899 the Dunlop Tire & Rubber Goods Company operated in Canada under the title of The American Dunlop Tire Company, being a branch of the American Dunlop Tire Company, of Belleville, N.J., which was controlled by the Dunlop Rubber Company, of Great Britain.

In 1899 Canadian capitalists, headed by the Hon. E. B. Ryckman, K.C., purchased from the Dunlop Company of Great Britain, all its interest in the American Dunlop Company, and on March 1st of that year a new Canadian Company was formed—the present Dunlop Tire & Rubber Goods Company, Limited.

In 1917 the control, which lay in the common stock of the Company, was acquired by the Tyre Investment Trust, of London, England, which it was expected would consolidate all the Dunlop Rubber Companies of the world. This amalgamation, however, was not accomplished at that time.

The present development is that the Dunlop Rubber Company, of Great Britain, has secured control of the Tyre Investment Trust, and by so doing, has secured a majority interest in the common stock of the Canadian Company, as well as complete control of the Dunlop (Far East) Company (Japan). With the acquisition of these two companies, and the controlling interest in the Australian Dunlop Company, which was negotiated last year, the Dunlop Rubber Company, of Great Britain, now has an organization, controlling all "Dunlop" products, which covers the entire globe, with a capital structure of approximately $200,000,000.

The Canadian Dunlop Company is affected to the extent that it has now the active co-operation of the British Company and of each of its subsidiaries throughout the world, whereas formerly it was assisted only through an interchange of formulæ and factory practice.

News From the Mines

Through

Solloway, Mills & Company

Howey.

President J. E. Hammell, at a meeting of the directors of Howey Mines, Monday, announced that the erection of the first mill unit of 500 tons capacity would be proceeded with as soon as the power situation has been clarified. The eliminating of many portages by constructing a dam which would flood four rapids between Snake Falls and Snowshoe Falls has already been taken up with the Government.

Results on the four levels were as follows: 125-foot level—962.0 lineal feet of ore of an average width of 20.7 feet, and an average grade of $6.91 in gold per ton; 250-foot level—426.5 lineal feet of ore of an average width of 14.6 feet and an average grade of $7.00 in gold per ton; 375-foot level—537.0 lineal feet of ore of an average width of 7.0 feet and an average grade of $6.54 in gold per ton; 500-foot level—569.0 lineal feet of ore of an average width of 15.4 feet and an average grade of $7.85 in gold per ton. According to Mr. Hammell, the grade is improving on the 500-foot level. The width of ore which was formerly reported as 7 feet has been increased to 15 feet and the average grade of $7 a ton has been maintained. Development in the eastern part of the property has been very encouraging and diamond drill hole No. 23 gave 10 feet of $10 ore.

Teck-Hughes.

The annual meeting of Teck-Hughes Gold Mines was held in Buffalo, Monday afternoon. Due to illness, the president, Charles L. Dennison, was absent. Reports were presented by General Manager D. L. H. Forbes and William C. Himrod, treasurer. Mr. Forbes reported that ore reserves are nearly double the quantity at the end of the last fiscal year. Mr. Forbes also stated that diamond drilling below the 19th level had indicated that values below this horizon were equally as good as those which have been obtained between the 13th and 19th levels. The new shaft is reported to be down 170 feet and work is expected to be speeded up when new equipment is installed. Shareholders adopted a resolution of confidence in the officers and management of the mine. The directors were re-elected.

Expansion of the C.P.R. in the West.

The recent optioning by Consolidated Mining and Smelting of the valuable Hall mineral claims at Lac la Ronge and Rottenstone Lake has revived the rumor that the Canadian Pacific, which is closely allied with this mining company, are planning to extend their lines into the mineral fields of northern Saskatchewan, and thence on to the east to Sherritt-Gordon in Manitoba. Three years ago the C.P.R. engineers surveyed the Flin Flon and Sherritt-Gordon areas. At present some of the railway's survey parties are on location work in Northern Saskatchewan.

TOTAL SALES SET RECORD

Four Issues Leap $35 To $63 a Share On Market.

6,811,900 SHARES SOLD.

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—(Canadian Press).—With four high-priced issues sky-rocketing $35 to $63 a share, and at least 50 others climbing $1 to $10 a share, to new high records, Wall Street yesterday witnessed the wildest stock market in its history. The violence of the advance scared many small traders and investors into liquidating their stocks with the result that many of the gains were cut down, and a number of issues showed losses of $1 to $5 a share.

Total sales set a new high record at 6,811,900 shares, which contrasts with the previous record of 6,714,000 established last Friday.

Orders poured into the market in such gigantic volume that the ticker ran from 30 to 100 minutes behind the market during the greater part of the day, the usual last-minute rush of orders delaying the printing of the final transaction 2 hours and 42 minutes after the market closed, the longest delay on record.

Drastic Action Taken

Forced by the thousands of complaints against the present service and the widespread confusion caused in brokerage houses throughout the country to take drastic action, officials of the exchange to-day decided to drop all sales volume from the tape, except for a few minutes after the opening, beginning Thursday.

Under the new plan only stock prices will be printed on the ticker, and it is expected that the quotation service will be speeded up at least 25 per cent. Arrangements are being made by the exchange to supply sales volume of individual stocks to press associations and newspapers, pending the installation of special telegraph printers which are being provided for this service, but the details have not been worked out.

It was originally intended to drop all sales volume below 500 shares and to delay the inauguration of the change until the special telegraph printers had been installed in newspaper and press association offices next month, but the extreme delays of the past few days have necessitated a further curtailment in ticker-tape characters, and an advance in the date of the beginning of the new plan.

HOME MISSIONS IN NEW ONTARIO

Rev. William McDonald Speaks At St. Andrew's W.M.S. Thank Offering.

The annual thankoffering meeting of St. Andrew's W.M.S. was held on Tuesday afternoon and was quite largely attended. The president Mrs. A. Porteous, was in the chair and opened the meeting with the doxology and the Lord's prayer. The Scripture reading was contributed by Mrs. C. H. Edwards. Miss Lancaster and Mrs. J. Forbes Allen led in prayer, the latter offering the dedicatory prayer. Miss Daisy Davidson was present and rendered a beautiful vocal solo, accompanied by Mrs. Dorothy Allen Park.

Rev. William McDonald was the speaker of the afternoon, his subject being home missions in Northern Ontario. The speaker's field of labor lay in that district for thirty years, watching small hamlets grow to flourishing towns, so in that way was able to bring a very vivid story of home mission work done in that part of the province.

Mr. McDonald's address was very instructive and was much enjoyed. The meeting was brought to a close with the benediction by the Rev. C. V. McLean.

Diogenes Only Stayed Three Days In City

Attesting to the honesty of Peterborough Engineers, one speaker at last night's Annual dinner of the Engineering Institute, Fraser S. Keith of Montreal, in reporting on an imaginary visit of Diogenes to Peterborough, stated that the historic figure had come to this city, stayed three days and departed, without his lantern.

The statement caused considerable perplexity until Mr. Keith repeated Diogenes' own explanation—he had found so many honest men that he had thrown his lantern in the Lift lock and departed, his mission concluded.

IN PETERBOROUGH CHURCHES

BETHANY TABERNACLE.
"Jesus is able to save from the uttermost to the uttermost all that come unto God by Him," was the scriptural truth that rang out last night with conviction and earnestness from Evangelist Rev. H. Ed. Weinzierl into the ears and hearts of his listeners gathered in Bethany Tabernacle.

Rev. Weinzierl took his text from the record of Jesus calling the live, Matthew from his business of gathering taxes, in Luke 5:27. The speaker brought out that Matthew was interrrupted in the midst of a prosperous business career by hearing the call of the Lord, "Follow Me." He immediately responded and instead of only amassing a few thousand, his example has been a help to thousands and his gospel has been read to the blessing and spiritual help of countless numbers. Matthew accomplished more by following Jesus than he would have had he remained gathering taxes.

Mr. Wenzierl, himself a prosperous business man before he was converted, brought a number of incidents of business men answering the call of God and the blessings that followed. He said Zacchaeus, the chief of tax gatherers, heard Jesus' "come down" and he came down and salvation came to his house. With clear elucidation of God's way of salvation and a stirring, earnest appeal for his listeners to follow the example of Matthew and follow Jesus, the speaker stirred his hearers deeply. He drew from the experiences of great Christian leaders as Charles Wesley, Charles Finney, John McNeil, D. T. Moody, F. F. Bosworth, Paul Rader, who left all and followed their Lord.

Mr. Weinzierl, who has a splendid voice, and sings with touching earnestness, sang a solo before he spoke last evening, and then led the congregation in the singing of the campaign chorus, "If Ye Follow Me."

The unfaltering faith in the power of the Lord to do mighty things in soul or body for those who will follow, and the faithfulness to the message of the Gospel that Mr. Weinzierl possesses and revises in every expression is in the power of the Holy Spirit defeating the powers of darkness and sin in the hearts and lives of many

Do not miss these meetings; some blessing may await you there that would prove the joy of your life. Every evening at 8 o'clock and afternoon at 3 o'clock

WEDDING BELLS

BUTTAR—PERRIN
A very pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Perrin, Bailieboro, when their only daughter, Ethel Pamelia, was united in marriage to Mr. Arthur James Buttar, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Buttar of Bewdley, on Wednesday, November 7th, at 12 o'clock, Rev. Mr. Swain of Bailieboro officiating.

The bride entered the room on the arm of her father, to the strains of Lohengrin's Wedding March, played by Miss Mary Found, of Lindsay. The bride was becomingly attired in bridal crepe, flounce trimmed with silver lace, and veil neatly caught with orange blossoms. She carried ophelia roses and maidenhair fern. The bridesmaid, Miss Ina Rosevear of Harwood, cousin of the bridegroom, was prettily gowned in maize satin, trimmed with tulle and gold and rhinestone bandeau, and carried pink sweetheart roses and maiden-hair fern.

The bridegroom was supported by a brother of the bride, Mr. Frederick Perrin. The bridegroom's gift to the bride was a fox fur; to the bridesmaid, a necklace of cecelians; to the groomsman, gold cuff link; and the pianist, a sterling silver ring.

Immediately following the ceremony a wedding luncheon was served. The house was prettily decorated, the ceremony taking place under a nicely-decorated arch, while the room was decorated with pink and white carnations and streamers. The happy couple left amid showers of confetti on their honeymoon to Toronto, Brantford, Midland and Niagara Falls. The bride's travelling attire was a brown crepe back satin dress, brown and gold velvet hat, with shoes and stockings to match, and Hudson seal coat. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Buttar will reside on their farm near Bewdley.

PAYNE—GILMOUR.
At two o'clock this afternoon, the wedding was solemnized by Ensign Green at the Salvation Army Temple, of Catherine, eldest daughter of Mrs. R. Gilmour and the late Thomas Gilmour, to Ernest A. Payne, eldest son of Mrs. S. Payne, of North Monaghan, and the late Richard Payne. The ceremony was performed in the presence of the immediate relatives and friends of the contracting parties, who wore the navy blue uniforms of the Army, brightened only by small floral boutonnieres. The bride is a songstress and the bridegroom a bandsman of the Salvation Army.

Attendants were Miss Florence McGee, of Fenelon Fall, and Mr. Kenneth V. Payne, brother of the bridegroom.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride, where decorations were carried out in pink and white, and a dainty buffet luncheon was served to the guests.

Bandsman Payne and his bride left for a fortnight's visit in Fenelon Falls. They will live in North Monaghan.

FIERCE STORM SWEEPS GREAT BRITAIN

Anti-Hydro Interests Hold Rally

Vigorous Attack Made

R. R. Hall, K.C., Addresses Southampton Audience at Anti-Hydro Meeting.

"BRITISH FAIR PLAY."

Commissioners Are Called 'Stool Pigeons' and Deceivers By Speaker.

SOUTHAMPTON, Nov. 24.—With R. R. Hall, K.C., ex-M.P. for Peterborough, and former director of the Otonabee Power Company, denouncing Ontario Hydro Commissioners as deceivers," the anti-Hydro meeting staged by the private power interests seeking to forestall Hydro in the Bruce by the private power interests seeking to forestall Hydro in the Bruce County field warmed up to considerably high pitch here last night.

Besides Mr. Hall, the company had been able to enlist as platform speakers Mayor C. M. Bell, an admitted Hydro opponent; William Cargill of Cargill, a former Parliamentarian; Senator Donnelly of South Bruce, and W. H. Groves, company representative in Bruce.

If anything, this anti-Hydro meeting was a little larger than the pro-Hydro meeting of Thursday night, but the company had engaged the picture house for the night, and put on a free movie show in connection with its appeal. But a large portion of the audience were at times moved to applause and even cheers as Hydro was denounced by Mr Hall and severely criticized by the other speakers.

"British Fair Play"

Aside from Mr. Hall's vigorous accusation of literal misrepresentation on the part of the Hydro Commission under Sir Adam Beck, the Mayor's appeal made on behalf of the compnay, and the one upon which it is obviously staking its hopes for the defeat of the Hydro by-law on Monday, was that of "British fair play" for the invading American company. That note was reiterated throughout the night and received some sympathetic response from the audience, who apparently assumed that the company was to be mulcted of the dollars it had invested.

Allegations as to Hydro autocracy and disregard of the interests and concerns of the people it was created to serve were plentiful throughout, and warnings issued to Southampton ratepayers that if Hydro came they would have to pay for plants and equipment in their power charges. Although most speakers inferred that Hydro's charges were always higher, and sometimes higher than estimates, the burden of complaint from ex-Mayor Hunter of Kincardine seemed to be that Southampton was offered Hydro power at the low rate of $40 per hose power or an equivalent of a 4-cent rate, while Kincardine had to pay 6 cents.

Mr. Hall, Peterborough, declared the people of Peterborough had been "deceived and misled" by the Hydro Commission. Peterborough wholesale power costs had jumped from $17.50 to $32.50 per horse power. Fifty thousand dollars, he declared, of Peterborough's money in the hands of the Commission had been spent without Peterborough's knowledge, and not one copper had been set aside on the Central Ontario Power System for sinking fund purposes. The whole liability of Peterborough to the Commission had been increased to the extent of $140,000 Southampton might as well put its head into the lion's mouth as get into Hydro's clutches. The Toronto newspapers were afflicted with Hydrophobia, which meant water on the brain.

From the audience Mr. Hall was asked by Chief Engineer James of Hydro why he was not fair, and say that Midland's, Stayner's and Coldwater's consumers' rates had been reduced away down from pre-Hydro days. Mr Hall had complained of increased wholesale rates

IN A COTTONWOOD TREE.

NEW DENVER, B. C. — Canadian Press. — When a cottonwood tree was cut down near here recently it was found to contain in its heart a telephone line block, the piece of wood to which the glass insulator for the wire is attached. The tree had grown completely around the telephone block, which was in perfect preservation. Counting of the tree rings disclosed that it had been attached to the tree 30 years ago.

This fact was borne out by G. Williamson, manager of the telephone company, who recalls when the telephone wire was first installed, establishing communication between Silverton and New Denver during the great mining boom days.

WIFE FIGHTS WILL SIGNED ON DEATHBED

Mate of Gambling King Was Willing To Give Him Up To Rival.

BUT NOT HIS WEALTH.

Pretty Divorcee Collapses As Authorities Seek Slayer of Rothstein.

NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—Arnold Rothstein, the stormy petrel of gambling, was a poor loser, they say, in games of chance and he paid with his life for welching on I. O. U.'s amounting to $325,000, but regardless of his code in the smoke-filled rooms where a turn of the cards meant fortune, he felt honor-bound to provide for those who brought romance into his life.

So, as he lay on a hospital bed and death beckoned, he held a pen in his trembling fingers and affixed a straggling cross to a will that deprived his wife of a sixth of her half of his estate and gave it to his latest light-o'-love, Miss Inez Norton, beautiful Southern divorcee.

Thus the man's prospensity for embroiling those about him in strife and turmoil persists beyond the grave. For the widow, Mrs. Carolyn Rothstein, who seems to have been willing to give her husband to the other women he loved is not so willing to give that other woman a million and a half.

Files Other Will.

Her attorneys have offered for probate a will signed last March in which Miss Norton is not mentioned and will seek to have declared invalid the one in fhich she is so handsomely remembered. On the other hand, Maurice F. Cantor, Rothstein's attorney and the lawyer who obtained Miss Norton's divorce, declares the deathbed will was dictated by the gambler quite some time ago when he became convinced he was to die soon and violently.

Rothstein did die that way, shot down by one of the men who held his promise to pay and could get no money from him because he charged the game was crooked.

Details of that game are not lacking. It was a big game, even in a city where big games are common, and Broadway was buzzing with the story the next day. It was held in an apartment, the modern setting for the same old melodramatic thrilling gambles that once took place in the camps of the old frontier in the West.

Rothstein Was Beaten.

Rothstein was taken to a decisive "trimming" after he had won early in the game and pocketed his winnings in cash, while tossing out I. O. U.'s for what he lost thereafter. When the game broke up everything was friendly. No one expected Rothstein to have more than a quarter of a million in cash in his pocket and his chips of paper were accepted at their face value.

As the days passed and he neither paid nor made arrangements to pay his creditors a conference was called and he was invited to come and explain. He came but his explanation was a charge that he had been swindled and had no intention of paying.

Whereupon someone "put a slug into him." A few minutes later Rothstein staggered into the Park Central Hotel, several doors distant, and collapsed.

In the hospital where he was taken he called for Cantor, his lawyer, and demanded the will he had made against such an emergency but had not signed. When it arrived he waved away the doctors probing for the bullet in his body, affixed his cross to the paper and fell back dying.

Paid Only Way He Knew.

In that will Rothstein was trying to pay the two living women who shared his love and, if the will is upheld, will share his fortune.

There is his widow, Carolyn, who never appeared in public with the gambling prince because in his love for her, he feared she might be the target that stopped the bullet he knew would be aimed at him some day. In his own way Rothstein always loved his wife, even when new

POETS ARE UNHONORED IN CANADA

Declares Wilson Macdonald At An Address To Normal School Students.

NO JEALOUSY EXISTS.

Canadian People Belittle Poets of Own Nation, Although Praised Abroad.

Speaking before the Kiwanis club on Friday, Wilson Macdonald, internationally known Canadian poet, startled Peterborough people into serious thought, not unmingled with chagrin when he declared that Isabella Valancy Crawford, buried right in Peterborough, was in many way a greater poet than Henry Wadsworth Longfellow — yet while they had posted themselves well regarding the latter, they had almost forgotten the former.

Last evening, lecturing in the Normal school auditorium to a most attentive and appreciative audience of students, members of the teaching profession and citizens interested in his works, Macdonald continued his campaign for the promotion and recognition of Canadian poetry when he reviewed the struggles of earlier and present day poets—their recognition in England, on the continent and in the United States, and finally in Canada, their own land.

In his lecture last evening, the distinguished visitor revealed, by his careful and generous treatment of the works and lives of the greatest Canadian poets, with whom he holds an honored place, that there is no petty jealousy existent among those of the present day group. His fellowship with Dr. Charles G. D. Roberts, his kind and respectful reference to other Canadian poets both living and dead and his proud stand against that snobbishess among Canadians that prompts them to belittle the poets of their own nation despite the highest praises from critics in English and United States Universities—these things won for him the admiration and loyalty of his audience.

Principal Duncan Walker, of the Normal school presided as chairman and it was his thoughtful suggestion which brought the gathering to its feet in the singing of the National anthem at the opening of the meeting — particularly appropriate due to the reported illness of His Majesty King George V.

Following the address of the evening, he expressed the appreciation of all present for the message delivered by Mr. Macdonald.

Issues a Challenge

"I challenge anyone to dispute the truth of the statement made by poets and critics outside the Dominion who have said that there is no group of poets in the world to-day who can surpass the present-day Canadian group" Thus spoke Mr. Macdonald at the out-set of his lecture. He declared that the same could not be said of Canadian Artists or musicians, yet there exists in Canada a superiority complex over things not worth while and an inferiority complex with regard to things worth while. Then, speaking in kindlier vein, he touched upon the love of poetry possessed by the men of the prairies, of the high seas and of athletic pursuits, and pointed to two classes who do not love poetry—the girl who is without ambition, and the woman who is a bridge fiend.

Mr Macdonald continued in his lecture, giving here an incident in the lives of Canadian poets, then a reading from some of their works. Charles Mair, one of the old guard who recently died at the age of 90 years, Alexander McLaughlin, who imitated Burns and Charles Heavyseage, the first real Canadian poet, were mentioned. Later came the "Renaissance" in Canadian poetry with the birth of Charles G. D. Roberts about the year 1862. The speaker contradicted the rather common belief that Bliss Carman surpasses Roberts. He then read Carman's great poem 'Low' Tide at Grandpre.'

Duncan Campbell Scott, whose greatest work was "The Closed Door" was eulogized, and then came Archibald Lampman, William Wifrid Campbell, Theodore Harding Rand, Frederick George Scott, Tom McInnes and the three women poets, Isabella Valancy Crawford, Marjory Pickthall and Pauline Johnston.

Mr. Macdonald, in speaking of the poets touched upon them individually and at the conclusion of his lecture, to prove his theory that poetry should not be all tragedy and pathos, recited some of his more humorous selections including the well known "Maggie Schwartz."

Autographed Books

There was an enthusiastic rush for the twenty-five or more volumes of his works which were available at the close of the meeting, many Normal School students showing particular interest.

Congratulations from all parts of Canada poured in on him yesterday and to-day.

PETERBOROUGH'S SECOND OLDEST RESIDENT HOLDS BIRTHDAY

John Harper Relates Many Interesting Stories of Early History of City.

85 YEARS OLD SUNDAY.

Was Born On Charlotte Street In Old Frame House Near R. G. Sturgeon's.

Born in Peterborough on November 25th, 1843, John Harper, the city's second oldest surviving resident, is in the best of health to celebrate his 85th birthday to-morrow. He was uptown yesterday afternoon, and The Examiner finding him in one of his favorite haunts, enjoyed a cheery chat with him. Mr. Harper has a delightful way of telling his stories of the early history of Peterborough.

"I was born on Charlotte street in a frame house very close to the building now occupied by R. G. Sturgeon. My mother was Margaret Millburn and she came to Peterborough when it was called Scott's Plains, 111 years ago, with a party of immigrants. My father, Robt. Harper, was a tailor, and in his younger days used to ride courier.

"I remember when there were no brick buildings on George street, and and the market square was covered with stumps. My father built one of the first three brick houses; it stands on Charlotte street, and is occupied by R. G. Sturgeon. There was another brick house over on Hunstreet near the creek, and the only other one besides ours was on Simcoe street, where the Montreal Bank now stands.

"The post office was a log cabin and stood just about where Mayor Denne's feed store is located on Water street. The muskets after the Mackenzie rebellion were stored in the post office, and I remember as though it were yesterday, the night the post office was burned. The muskets were all piled out in the road and the bucket brigade tried to save the building, but it blazed merrily on in spite of their efforts.

No Roads in those Days.

There were no roads in those days, and Charlotte street was a crooked way around large stumps for a few blocks. Nearly all the travelling was done on the river. George May had a horse power boat that plied its way between Peterborough and Rice Lake. There were two horses on the boat—a chestnut and a gray—and the horses walked round and round driving the propeller. It was a favorite saying then when arguing with a man from down the river to finish with, 'Well, what do you know? You came up on May's boat. Mr. May later got two steamboats; one was called the Royal George; they were flat bottomed, and very slow old tubs, but it was a big development for those days.

"There was a large root house on the market square, and the supplies for the Peter Robinon immigrants were stored in it. We had to feed the new settlers for two years.

"The bridge over the creek on Charlotte street was a rough one, built on logs, stringers laid over the logs placed close together and earth put over the top for the surface. There was a big barn where the curling rink now stands, and my father the first year he went farming threshed the crop right out on the street, storing the grain in the barn. The late Dick Winch got married that fall. We left the straw on the street, and as Dick was setting up house he brought along bed ticks one day, filled them with the straw and took them home to sleep on.

A.A.U. PRESIDENT TO RESIGN OFFICE

Dr. A. S. Lamb Will Sever Connections With Athletic Bodies at Convention.

MONTREAL, Nov. 24 (Canadian Press).—Dr. A. S. Lamb, president of the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada, secretary of the Canadian Olympic committee, and manager of this year's Canadian Olympic team, is going to sever his connection with these two bodies, his resignation to take effect at the annual convention of the A.A.U. of Canada at Port Arthur in December. CHAIRMEN ARE APPOINTED TO PLAN FOR WEEK

Citizens' Meeting Adopts Report of the Nominating Committee.

TO APPOINT SECRETARY.

Nucleus Is Suggested For Each Committee Called Together At Early Date.

Plans for an Old Home Week for the city and county of Peterborough commencing on June 29th next were further formulated last night when the city council chamber was filled by a representative gathering of citizens. The report of the nominating committee appointed at the first citizen's meeting to suggest the various committee chairmen and a nucleus on each committee was adopted. His Worship Mayore Denne will be the chairman of the executive committee, while ex-Mayor J. J. Duffus has been appointed vice-chairman of the general organization and Frank Adams the treasurer. The appointment of a permanent executive secretary and the other help that he may require was left in the hands of the executive committee which will consist of the chairman of each committee.

Nineteen committee chairmen were appointed last night and a few citizens were selected to each committee to act as a nucleus which are to meet on the call of their chairman and select their members from the citizens of Peterborough and county.

The executive will be called in a few days to appoint the secretary who will then open an office in the city buildings and the citizens will be requested to send in the names of all Peterborough boys and girls. The publicity committee will get ready suitable information to be sent out. All the work of informing the old boys and girls will not be left to the secretary as the citizens are requested to write their friends and invite them and also to turn in the names to the secretaries along with their own name.

Every House Open

Every house in the city that week will be expected to have an open door to the thousands that are going to come back to their old home. J. J. Duffus suggested that the Old Home Week be combined with the hundredth anniversary of the city of Peterborough which suggestion was left to the executive committee to deal with.

E. A. Peck, M.P., chairman of the honorary reception committee emphasized getting the publicity ready at as early a date as possible. Mr. Peck considered this the most important work in the early stages of the planning.

The secretary will take the names of the county old boys and girls for in planning for the week the whole county of Peterborough and even surrounding townships outside of the county will be considered as the sponsors of the event.

The various committees will meet either in the council chamber of the board room of the Chamber of Commerce which will always be open to those planning the big event. The clergy of the various churches will be asked on some Sunday in the near future to announce to their congregation to send in the names of their friends. Various organizations have already taken steps to form committees to look after the notifying of the old boys and girls who were once connected with their body.

One of the days during the week will be devoted to the old boys and girls of the county and the head of this committee will be the Warden with the various reeves of the municipalities forming the committee which will plan the events for that day.

Report of Committee

The report of the nominating committee which was adopted last night is as follows:

"We recommend that the following officers and committees be appointed for the Old Home Week. In submitting the names of those to compose the Committee, your Committee does not do so with the intention that the composition of the committees is complete as given, but that those named will form a nucleus and that they will add to their committees such persons as will be of service on each committee.

NINE PERSONS ARE KILLED, MANY ARE REPORTED INJURED IN BIG SOUTHWESTERLY GALE

Strange Fatalities Occur in British Isles From Freakish Storm.

STEAMER GOES DOWN.

Violence of Wind Causes Delay To Several Liners Scheduled To Depart.

LONDON, Nov. 24. — (Canadian Press)—Having swept over the British Isles leaving nine known dead and disabled and crippled shipping in its wake, the south-westerly gale to-day was howling across western Europe.

The storm was fully as severe as that of week ago. In addition to the nine deaths there were numerous persons injured in scattered localities and much destruction of property.

One of those killed was a sandwich board man in Liverpool whose signs caught the wind and threw him under a motor truck.

The chimney of a school in Hull collapsed as the pupils were leaving the building and one school girl was killed. The other pupils escaped with bruises.

Steamer Goes Down.

The fate of the crew of the German steamer Herrenwk which sunk in a gale about 645 miles west of Ireland was in doubt although it was known that a number had been saved. The Danish steamer Estonia, cruising around in the vicinity radioed that it had picked up thirteen of a crew of twenty six. A dispatch from Copenhagen, however, said that 16 members of the crew had been rescued.

The violence of the wind at Southampton caused delay to several liners scheduled to depart. These included the Tuscania, bound for New York. The Majestic was late in berthing on her voyage from New York. Shipping was also interrupted in the Mersey river, the Canadian Pacific liner Montcalm landing her passengers at another port.

Ships in Collision.

Fog rather than wind was blamed for the mishap to the Greek steamer Virginia, abandoned by its crew off Portugal. The crew was rescued by a Spanish trawler, and after being landed at Oporto charged that the ship had been struck by an unidentified vessel which had made no attempt to aid her. The Virginia tonight was reported under tow for Oporto by those who had found her abandoned and floating.

Railways Are Blocked

A terrific gale swept the North Riding of Yorkshire. It was accompanied by torrential rains, which swelled the streams to flood proportions. Lincolnshire suffered similarly. At Carlisle a fallen tree blocked both the main railroad lines to Scotland.

A number of fishing fleets, caught away from their bases by the gale, were subjects for anxiety. It was believed, however, that all these small craft managed to make port without loss of life.

The fury of the gale was perhaps felt more strongly at sea and along the coast than in the interior. The Spanish steamer Cantabrita was driven ashore at Ayre, Isle of Man. A rocket brigade was standing by tonight, and an attempt will be made to refloat the vessel at high tide. The crew of twenty five was reported to be in no immediate danger

UNDERWORLD TRAPPED HIM IN HER HOME

After Failing To Snare Him With Her Wiles, She Signals Police.

HOUSE IS RAIDED.

Council Member Is Vindicated Year After City Rocked Over Arrest.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 24.—An amazing story of an underworld conspiracy against a rampant foe of vice in the city council, the result of which was a series of scandal that rocked the city a year ago, has just been exposed here by the woman lure in the conspiracy and brought about almost a dozen indictments.

The story was told by Mrs. Callie Grimes, an attractive young widow, who, sweeping aside a long-time friendship between her family and that of Councilman Carl T. Jacobson, led him into a trap in her home in 1927 and sprang it by signaling with a window shade to a squad of crooked policemen who lay in wait outside.

Brought to Court

Jacobson haled into court with the woman on a misconduct charge, scored as a hypocrite by his former associates, disbelieved by all but a trusting wife and daughter, thus finds himself vindicated because the conspirators failed to carry out their promises to pay Mrs. Grimes a lump sum of $2,500 and $100 a month for life.

Disgruntled that she had not received her figurative thirty pieces of silver and refusing to be intimidated by threats of what would happen to her, Mrs. Grimes sought out trustworthy officials and "blew the lid off" the conspiracy.

Jacobson was appointed to the council to fill a vacancy caused by the removal of a previous alderman convicted of receiving bribes. From the first he conducted a spirited campaign against the vice element and repeatedly led raids in person upon disreputable houses and gambling resorts. In the course of time he stepped upon the toes of Albert Marco, "king" of the invisible government of the underworld, now serving a prison term.

Jacobson has related frequent attempts to buy him off, offers of thousands of dollars if he would "keep out of things." He refused them and paved the way for a humiliation and disgrace to himself he did not deserve.

Mrs. Grimes' mother was an old friend of the Jacobsons. It was natural then that when Mrs. Grimes felt herself aggrieved in the matter of certain assessments against a little house she owned she should seek out Councilman Jacobson to ask him to aid her. Jacobson promised his help and did make some efforts in her behalf.

What the Raiders Said

In July, 1927, the city was rocked by Jacobson's arrest in a raid upon the home of Mrs. Grimes. The raiding policemen said they had acted upon a telephonic tip, that they had seen lights in the house go out shortly after the councilman had entered it, that they had entered and found him in a state of undress and that he had pleaded with them for a gun with which to kill himself and avoid disgrace.

Mrs. Grimes' story at that time was replete with details of what she said was their romance.

"Mr. Jacobson began his love-making the first time he saw me . . . He said he had admired me from the minute he first laid eyes upon me . . . He said he would see that my little girl was taken care of and that he would give me money."

Of the raid she said: "I was shocked and surprised when the officers broke in. I never was so fightened in my

FAIR NIGHT IS PASSED BY KING

His Majesty's Condition Is Reported To Show Improvement.

PLEURISY EVIDENT.

LONDON, Nov. 24 (Canadian Press).—After passing a fair night, King George had improved to-day, although for the first time it became known that pleurisy was present. Announcement of improvement in the official bulletin at noon gave further relief to public anxiety. Despite the appearance of the word "pluerisy" in the physician's report, members of the Royal Household gave no sign of any additional concern.

It is understood that pleurisy in the King's type of lung condition is nothing out of the ordinary and no cause for anxiety.

The visit of the King's physicians, Lord Dawson of Penn and Sir Stanley Hewett to the palace to-day lasted two hours. Lack of anxiety in the Royal Family was indicated when it was announced that the Queen would attend the Royal Choral Society's Concert at Albert Hall this afternoon. Word was passed out that His Majesty is maintaining excellent spirits.

Macedonia Rebels Start Civil War

BULGARIAN PEOPLE TERRIFIED AS GOVERNMENT DESPATCHES TROOPS TO CAPTURE LEADER

Sofia Admits Powerlessness in Face of Revolution in Country.

SEEKS AID.

Rebel Leader Terms Cabinet Members Greatest Enemy of Macedonian Race.

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Nov. 24.—After an exchange of defiances, the Bulgarian Government last night dispatched troops to Petritch to attempt to capture Ivan Michailoff, leader of he belligerent faction of the Macedonian revolutionary party. In view of Michailoff's rejection of a Government ultimatum it is not expected that he will allow himself to be taken without bitter fighting.

The situation had assumed an uglier aspect earlier yesterday, when the Government began rushing large contingents of troops from the outlying districts in order to reinforce the Sofia garrison. Last night strong sentry forces were placed around all Government buildings, while the police guard protecting members of the Cabinet was doubled.

The Government yesterday had sent an utimatum to Michailoff ordering him to discontinue all acts of terrorism and to abandon his march on Sofia.

Michailoff in reply simply declared that Federal members of the Bulgarian Government deserved death, terming them the greatest enemy of the Macedonian people. The Government thereupon ordered his arrest.

Foreign Minister Athanese Buroff made official admission in Parliament that the Bulgarian Government is powerless to crush the revolutionary organization effectually suppressed, they must procure the good influence of Bulgaria's neighbors, since hundreds of thousands of Macedonians are now living under Jugoslavian and Greek rule.

Buroff, unlike some of his Cabinet colleagues, is absolutely opposed to the Macedonian activities.

His statement added to the fears of the population, which now believes that general martial law is inevitable. Thousands of peasants terrified by the latest excesses of the rebels continue to flee from the Petritch district.

Peasants Flee.

Adherents of the late General Protogueroff, who was slain by Michailoff's followers after a split in the Macedonian revolutionary ranks, declared that if Michailoff persists in his march on Sofia they will publish all the past misdeeds and plots of the Macedonian revolutionary organization.

They said that such publications would be tantamount to signing their own death warrant, since they had been involved in many of these acts against public safety and the Government.

Large Black Bear Is Shot In Township of Asphodel

NORWOOD, November 24. — A large black bear, weighing over 200 pounds was shot in the township of Asphodel on Thursday morning. A few of the sports in that district had gone out for a hunt when they came across the tracks of a bear in the wet snow leading into one of the fields of A. Lealtch. The trail was followed and in a short time John McColl and James Comstock came upon the bear. Bullets from both guns put an end to Mr. Bruin, and a team was secured to remove the carcass to Lealtch's barn, where many of the neighbor's viewed the animal. The hunting party consisted of James and Harold Comstock, John McColl, Alex and Norman Lealtch, and Clarence Douglas.

DRAMATIC CLUB PRESENTS PLAY

Lakehurst Society Plays "The Young Country Minister" in Lakefield Hall.

PARTS WELL TAKEN.

(Examiner Correspondence).

LAKEFIELD, Nov. 24.—The presentation of the five-act comedy drama, "The Young Country Minister," by the Lakehurst Dramatic Society under the auspices of Knox Church Ladies' Guild, filled the Lakefield Town Hall on Wednesday evening.

The play was well acted, amusing and interesting enough to hold the closest attention of the crowd till the last. Very often in this sort of production, designed for church organizations, the plot is scanty and cheap sentiment fills the gaps, but this was not the case in "The Young Country Minister," as the plot was well sustained and proceeded with a continuity which kept up the interest. The love interest was strong but not overdone, the humor too was apparent, and the applause indicated the appreciation of the audience. The villains ran true to form and in the end faded out in the fashion approved for stage villains when the "sob sister" gets no chance.

The parts were so well taken that comparisons would be unfair, but in

CONDITION OF KING IMPROVED; BRITISH NATION IS RELIEVED

Temperature Was Lower Last Bulletin Officially Said.

NO FURTHER MISCHIEF.

Both Physicians Are Satisfied With Condition of Royal Patient.

LONDON, Nov. 24. — The whole British nation, stirred with an intense solicitude for the health of its Sovereign, was relieved last night by the issuance of a favorable bulletin.

King George's physicians, Sir Stanley Hewett and Lord Dawson of Penn, in their formal statement last night said:

"The King had a quieter day. His temperature is lower, and there was no further extension of the mischief in the lung."

Official information given at Buckingham Palace just before midnight was that the King continues to make satisfactory progress.

The Duke of York left the Palace shortly before 11 p.m., and drove to his home in Piccadilly, where he spent the night.

Physicians Satisfied

It was understood that both physicians were satisfied with their Royal patient's condition last night, and His Majesty's household felt reassured after the evening bulletin. It is believed that the sound constitution of King George is enabling him to fight the chill with good results. The public found another good omen in the fact that Lord Dawson was able to fulfill a private engagement last night.

The physicians have been in frequent attendance throughout the day, and, in order to have a complete diagnosis, they made a careful X-ray examination of the infected lung. Last night they arrived at the Palace at 7 o'clock, but it was nearly 9 before they issued their bulletin of encouragement.

It is now hoped that the worst of the illness has passed, and that the physicians have the disorder under control. There was a large gathering of the public waiting outside the palace to hear the good news.

The extent to which the illness of the King has stopped all Court activities was shown in last night's issue of the Court Circular. This is usually a fairly full document, relating all the Court activities of the day, but last night it was limited to a four-line announcement that the Queen of Spain, the Duke of York, Princess Louise, Princess Beatrice and the dowager Marchioness of Cambridge visited Queen Mary yesterday.

Succession of Callers.

There was indeed, a constant succession of callers at the Palace yesterday, including Lord Allenby, Sir Laming Worthington-Evans and Lord Chancellor Hailsham. The

70 Year Old Farmer Clubs Wolf To Death

CHICOUTIMI, Que., Nov. 24. —A wolf driven from the wood by hunger attacked a 70-year-old farmer, a resident of Ste. Rose de Lima, Saguenay district. The septuagenarian won the fight in ten minutes and the wolf lay dead.

Joseph Girard, the aged farmer was out looking for some of his sheep that had strayed from their usual grazing grounds. As he neared the woods he came face to face with the wolf. The animal, giving the farmer no chance, jumped at him and the battle was on.

Girard, who was armed with a stick, defended himself as well as he could, but it was not before the beast had left the imprints of his teeth on the farmer's body that the old man won out.

The wolf measured 6 feet and weighed over 90 pounds.

ON O.A.C. TEAM.

The highest score ever made in the history of the Royal Winter Fair, 905 points out of a possible 1,000, was the gratifying achievement of a young man from the village of Lakefield, Frank Dench, son of B. Q. Dench. A fourth year student at the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, he was a member of the O.A.C. judging team which contended for and won the inter-college competition at the Royal this week.

Young Dench was on the O.A.C. team which competed at the National Dairy Show, held in Memphis, Tennessee not long ago and next month will go as a member of the Ontario team to compete at the International Livestock Show in Chicago. He is the first Peterborough County boy to hold membership on the O.A.C. team in many years.

ANNUAL SAFETY MEETING HELD

Deloro Smelting and Refining Company's Employes View Safety Measures.

MAKE FINE RECORD.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MARMORA, Nov. 24.—Employes of the Deloro Smelting and Refining Company were never so strongly represented at a meeting in that village as in Deloro Hall on Wednesday evening. Responding to the invitation to be present at the third annual mass meeting, organized by the Deloro Safety Committee. This was the admission of R. A. Elliott, who presided. First on the program was a Lupino Lane screen comedy, "Listen Sister." Then came two excellent violin solos, the contributor being T. Llewellyn Jones and accompanist A. V. Yates. an industrial film on prone methods of resuscitation which followed proved very interesting. Community singing of the plant's safety song, "We're out for real safety promotion," was heartily indulged in. After another industrial film which showed correct and incorrect ways of hosting had been interestingly followed. Mr. Elliott read the names of those who obtained diplomas in the 1928 first aid course. Four of that class, H. F. Berry, F. Groves, W. K. Savage and K. Buchmann then gave a splendid first aid demonstration of the treatment of a man who had fallen from a ladder and the resuscitation of a man who was supposed to have touched a live wire. Two more delightful violin solos by Mr. Jones were succeeded by a few remarks by the chairman. He explained the three safety first banners on the walls as having reproduced thereon the three winning slogans in the recent contest. He further called attention to a chart placed to the front of the platform which read:

	Days Lost
1923	643
1924	511
1925	246
1926	184
1927	88
1928	134 (up to date)

1925 was the year of the movement's inception and interesting facts stated by Mr. Elliott included these. From the end of April 1926 to the end of June 1927 there were no compensation cases. On Saturday next another straight seven months will have elapsed without a lost time accident should none occur in the meantime.

The Personal Factor.

L. V. Dixon, of the Dunlop Tire Company, Toronto, was called upon as the speaker of the evening. Mr. Dixon chose as his subject "The Personal Factor in Safety First Work." After expressing pleasure at the privilege of addressing so large an audience the speaker mentioned the fact that safety first had become a hackneyed subject, a by-word and a catch

When Pain Comes

Two hours after eating

What many people call indigestion very often means excess acid in the stomach. The stomach nerves have been over-stimulated, and food sours. The corrective is an alkali, which neutralizes acids instantly. And the best alkali known to medical science is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. It has remained the standard with physicians in the 50 years since its invention.

One spoonful of this harmless, tasteless alkali in water will neutralize instantly many times as much acid, and the symptoms disappear at once. You will never use crude methods when once you learn the efficiency of this. Go get a small bottle to try.

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 50 years in correcting excess acids. Each bottle contains full directions—and drug store.

AFTER A RATHER LONG ABSENCE from the workshop of John Plain I expected to hear some interesting things when I went to see him a few days ago, but it would not be quite true to say that I had expected to hear anything so remarkable as the story he told me on the occasion of my last visit. I am trusting to my memory and may not quote his words exactly, but I am sure that what I now set forth is essentially the tale he unfolded to me.

"The Prince of the Fallen Angels presided over the supreme council of the rulers of the darkness of this world who had been sent up from every part of the heavenlies to represent the principalities and powers. The order convening the council had been imperative and not a member was absent. It had gone forth that a movement was to be inaugurated to introduce a new era in the long war which had been waged by the powers of darkness against the forces of light. The plan was to put on the religious market a new device designed to enlarge the power of spiritual wickedness. Every face exhibited the intense interest felt.'

A STRANGE CONFERENCE.

"Routine business was the first order of the day, in the course of which reports were received from the prince of every government on the earth. Most of the reports were optimistic. On every continent politics were reported as corrupt, society rotten, the church formal and without spiritual power. The heathen religions continued to sway their multitudes, Mohammedanism was sensual, the Greek church autocractic and intolerant, while Protestantism had attacked the Bible through both its pulpits and schools.

"Christian missionaries among the heathen were reported to be zealous, but there were but few of them, and their efforts were retarded by lack of both interest and support on the part of the churches that sent them. Many new and beautiful churches and amply endowed places of learning were being constructed throughout Christendom, but they represented culture and pride rather than piety and worship, and were regarded as accessories to the kingdom of darkness.

SATAN SPEAKS.

"When the last report had been presented, Satan arose. The confidence of the spiritual earth rulers in their prince was absolute. Every eye was fixed upon him. Full of wisdom he had a solution for every problem. Beginning to speak, he said: 'The time has arrived for an advance movement among men. I have convened you for this purpose. It is of more than ordinary importance. I want to thank you for the splendid way in which you have carried on our warfare against the kingdom of heaven. No fault can be found with the quality of your allegiance either to my kingdom or to myself. At times your zeal has led some of you to overdo your work, so that excess of evil has resulted in reaction against us. Nevertheless blame cannot be attached to you where such reaction has resulted. I have nothing but unstinted praise for you.

THE PROJECT PRESENTED.

"'The project about to be divulged I count the most difficult of any I have ever set before you. The time is short. We are approaching the end of the age, and whatever additions are made to my kingdom must be made quickly. We are operating in every avenue of possible gain, except one. I propose that we shall now enter the circle of the very elect, and by concession of everything but the essentials of truth, seduce the good from the path of salvation. We will enter, permeate and paralyze the churches. We will operate the plan only among people of character, culture and knowledge. Miracles will be evolved and much criticism and investigation provoked.

SATAN AND SALVATION.

"'Many centuries ago I taught you the simplicity of the plan of salvation perfected and launched by Jesus Christ for the saving of sinners. It was made so easy that children and fools might understand it. Faith in Him as Son of God and Saviour of men was all that was required. We have succeeded in surrounding these only essentials of salvation with great masses of debris, which have deceived the multitudes and kept them in our hands. Many of those who have joined the churches have not been lost to us. More of those connected with the churches belong to us than can be claimed by Jesus Christ.

"'Now I propose to create a church of my own, which will so counterfeit the genuine that it will not be detected save by experts in the knowledge of God. Supernatural works and all the graces and beauties of Christianity will be its credentials to men. It will heal the sick even as did the church of Jesus Christ before we accomplished its enfeeblement. It will teach love, joy, humility, peace, gentleness, long-suffering, patience, hospitality, integrity, justice, liberality and nearly all the fruit of the spirit of God. And I have arranged that all of this will be done in the name of Christ.'

A MASTERPIECE.

"'I shall see to it that this church enters heartily into the spirit of the age in which we live. It will emphasize application in the study of the Scriptures, offering as an inducement a gold-plated key by which to interpret them. It will place a premium on the embellishments and be assiduous in cultivating the amenities of life. It will not enter into controversy, but will state its doctrines in ambiguous language and retire into dignified silence behind the miracles which it will perform. Its membership will be given a peace and rest in their lives such as I have never yet conferred upon my worshippers. I will place confidence in their hearts, oil upon their tongues and a radiance upon their faces.'

THE PRINCE OF NEW ENGLAND.

"'But how,' inquired the Prince of New England, 'if they have all the appurtenances of the real church, can they belong to your kingdom and promote your interests?'

"'The church which I am about to institute,' replied Satan, 'would deceive even you, were you not privy to its formation. None of these things which I have named is an essential of salvation. I propose to appropriate such of the fruits of salvation as I can and leave the salvation out.'

"The Prince of Scotland asked, 'But how will you conceal the essentials of salvation from the people?'

"'By allowing them to suppose that they are included in the system,' was the reply. 'As I have said, there are but two of them. The first is that Jesus Christ is Deity. We will tell them that Jesus is the Son of God, but that they, also, are sons of God. As they become exalted in their own opinions consequent upon this teaching, the necessity of exalting the doctrine of the deity of Jesus will disappear. Thinking they worship Jesus, they will be really worshipping themselves, which is equivalent to worshipping me.'

ANOTHER PRINCE SPEAKS.

"Being given permission to speak, the Prince of Switzerland arose to his feet and said:

"'Your plan for evading the teaching of the doctrine of the Deity of Jesus cannot but work well. In the first place, there is comparatively little said about that doctrine in the Bible, though it is of the first importance, and Jesus made it the foundation of His church. Then there is a vast amount of skepticism about it, even in the minds of church people. And finally, if we preserve reticence concerning it and place great stress on the teaching that the people themselves are sons of God, they will become puffed up with the sense of their own excellence and forget that which is important. But how can you hide the blood? From cover to cover the Bible is full of that. I cannot see how the people can be deceived in this.'

SATAN SPEAKS AGAIN.

"'I have thought this thing clear through,' said Satan. 'The Scriptures declare that the 'blood is the life.' We will ring the changes upon this, and by the time we get through with it the blood will have disappeared and the life only remain. We will continually show forth the beauties in the life and character of Jesus and discount the value of His sacrifice and death. We will also show how shocking to refined sensibilities is the thought of blood. It will not be long until the sort of culture we teach will reject the blood as a sanguinary and abhorrent topic. We will teach them that the imitation of His life is sufficient. When questioned concerning the blood we will simply declare that the 'blood is the life,' and it is the life we are after. We will have nothing unpleasant in our religion. And you will admit, I am sure, that so long as the membership of this church do not believe in the Deity of Christ and blood atonement for sin they may believe and practice everything else in the Bible and still belong to us. Is it not so?'

"Every head inclined assent.

"'Then procure your Bibles and get to work. Discover and teach the people everything that is noble, generous and uplifting. Eliminate only the things which are essential to salvation. Teach that there is no such thing as sin, suffering or sickness.'

BELIEVING A LIE.

"The members of the supreme council were stricken with amazement. It had been a day of surprises, but never in all their varied experiences with God, heaven, Satan, hell or the world had they listened to a declaration such as this. Satan had coined a new doctrine which staggered even the devils. They sat speechless. Sinners for whom Jesus died were to be told that there was no such thing as sin. Sufferers were to be assured that they were but the victims of hallucination, and the helpless, bedridden sick were only the slaves of mortal mind.

"You will be dumfounded to find the numbers of people who will accept your unparalleled lies. They will flock to the standards of the new church by tens of thousands. They will pour out their money until you can build temples for worship surpassing for beauty and elegance any in the world. Your work is set before you and you are commissioned to do it."

When John Plain had finished his tale, I asked him if he cared to tell me the name of this religious organization. But all the answer he would make was, "He that hath an ear to hear let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches."

Part of a Business Education

THE ability to work with others is one of the most important things to carry away from any college, whether it be in the case of a man or a woman.

It is because they can never manage "to get along" with their fellow-workers that certain types of men have a hard time placing themselves permanently in the business world. A man who cannot work with others is only half-fitted for any job.

LAUGHTER AND HEALTH

AMONG all my friends there is none I prize more highly than the doctor, and nothing is farther from my thought than to say anything against him. I have been told, on excellent authority, that I was greatly indebted to his skill on my arrival in this world. And I have sense enough to know that even if he be not on hand at the hour of my departure it will be impossible to proceed with my burial without his professional aid. God bless the doctors and keep them alive, even when they are unable to do as much for others. Some of my best friends have studied medicine and practised on me.

I wonder how many of them would subscribe to this old-time prescription?—"A merry heart doeth good like medicine." It was first given by one of the wisest of men; and, I have no doubt, it arose out of a very wide experience. Scarcely can it be denied, even by the best representatives of the medical faculty, that there would be less sick bodies and fewer diseased minds were this happy prescription taken instead of some stupefying mixture from the pharmacopoeia.

It will be a bad day for the human race if it ever loses the art of laughter. It will be a pity if life ever becomes so intensely earnest that it will arrive at the condition where it will consist of one uninterrupted round of duty written in one long paragraph without punctuation other than a period that represents the end.

If it be true that "man is the only creature endowed with the power of laughter" and that no burdensome duties are imposed as a recompense for an indulgence therein, there should be far more laughter and less sickness in the world. With it there will come a quickening of the pulse, a brightening of the eye, and a bracing of the nerves.

A Pen Picture

A NUMBER of old men are walking together down a steep hill. They do not all belong to the same class or position in life, as some by their dress show they are members of a profession which distinguishes them from the rest. They are old venerable men whose experience and age combine to make them valuable witnesses of past events; men whose position in their homes and in the government would command respect. One of the number is clearly different in some ways from the rest. He is not old, yet he appears to have authority. To his words the others listen attentively, and his actions are closely watched.

What is he carrying? Down the steep road they walk, leaving the fortifications behind, while on their left hand is a high hill. What is the younger man going to do with that thing in his hand? and whither is he leading his old companions?

At last he stops, and, turning round, addresses them with solemnity and vehemence. He points upwards, then around, and then towards the place which they had left with him a short time since.

Now, as he speaks, fear and horror fill their minds, their limbs seem to totter, and their faces are blanched with terror, for the heart of each is sick within him.

The speaker clenches his words with a sudden impetuous movement, and leaves the place.

According As Each Received a Gift

THE Apostle Peter states a principle which is always in operation when he says, "According as each hath received a gift." And we can well thank God for that word "according"! There is one thing that human nature never does, which the divine nature never fails to do—and that is, to preserve true ratios. God always suits the back to the burden, even if He has no responsibility for the burden! From him to whom much has been given, much shall be required; from him who hath little, little. God never demands a ten-talent dividend from a one-talent man. On that wisdom and justice you can pillow your tired head and heart. But the exaction will be "according to the gift"; and oh, when we see ourselves as God sees us, how pitiful, how contemptible, shall we seem!

How nice it would be if some folks were as smart about getting up as they are about their get-up.

FAITH IN FORCE

THE most important body of truth in the world is that represented in the term Christian faith. The longing to know self, God, and the relations between the two, makes it impossible to abandon the desire to have a clearer perception of duty and destiny. The effort to dismiss God and moral accountability is just as futile as the attempt to banish self-consciousness. Faith is force. Convictions are commanding. A man with no fixed and final faith has no more moral lifting power than one standing in quicksand has physical lifting power.—"The Seven Finalities of Faith," by Dr. A. Z. Conrad.

Find the Answer

LET us remember that Christ's silence is not refusal to bless. There may be some hindrance in ourselves, and a work of preparation is needed in us before the blessing can come. Instead of doubting or blaming the Master, we should look within ourselves and ask what it is that keeps the answer waiting.

—John Plain.

The conflict of life is largely the conflict of wills.

Special mercies are often granted to prepare us for special discipline, and to sustain us under it.

There is nothing that more needs denying than our own wisdom, the energy of the fleshy mind, as it exerts itself in the things of God.

WHY IT IS DIFFICULT.

The impossibility of arriving at an immigration policy for Canada that would please everybody was illustrated by an incident near the close of the Ontario Provincial Convention this week, when Hon. R. B. Bennett, the Federal Conservative leader, took occasion to mildly chide some of the previous speakers because of their attitude toward this question.

They had been stressing the necessity of bringing more British immigrants and viewing with some alarm the fact that foreign born settlers were greatly outnumbering the new arrivals from the British Isles in the western provinces.

Mr. Bennett evidently failed to share their alarm and reminded them that Western Canada is populated by people from many countries who have been assimilated and who are now great Canadians.

"The purpose of this party," he concluded, "is to create great Canadians. Sometimes we, in the Eastern part of this country, are not appreciative of what is going on in other parts."

The difference of opinion between the Conservative leader and some of his Eastern followers on this point is a commentary upon the difficulty that confronts Hon. Robert Forke, Minister of Immigration, in endeavoring to formulate an immigration system that will be most satisfactory from a general viewpoint.

DRIVE OUT THE WOLVES.

The necessity of government action in dealing with the wolf menace is again stressed as hunters return from their two weeks in the woods, with graphic details of the great destruction of deer by wolves.

When in the district north of Apsley the howling of four different wolf packs can be heard at the one time and when deer hunters have brought out more wolves than deer, it becomes obvious that the Department of Game and Fisheries should be on the move

Many hunters are inclined to blame the Government for the present conditions, claiming they are caused by the lowered bounty on wolves.

This step was taken because of somewhat extensive "bootlegging" in these bounties, the Government declaring that wolf carcassea were shipped in from Quebec in order that the heavy bounty paid in this Province might be collected.

Whether or not cutting down the rewards has had anything to do with the matter the situation is undoubtedly serious.

In some sections of Ontario deer hunting has been ruined by the activities of the wolf packs and in such districts it is prophesied by farmers and hunters alike that if some effective campaign is not taken to rid the country of these pests that it will soon be impossible to locate a deer.

As a matter of fact one district party returned this year without a single pound of venison and other hunt clubs fared nearly as badly.

FISHING THE CHIEF ATTRACTION.

Questionnaires sent out by the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce to summer resort proprietors in the Kawartha District, have brought many informative replies from which one very significant fact is obtained.

Fishing is regarded by the great majority of the summer resort owners as the chief lure that brings them guests.

The extent to which this sport enters into the resort business is variously estimated from as low as 20 per cent. up to 100 per cent., but most replies put a very high value upon the drawing power of fishing

And furthermore in most cases wheer business was not as good as a year ago poor fishing is given as the chief reason, while proprietors who claim to have had a good summer also declare that the fishing during the last season showed a falling-off.

It is apparent that there is unanimity of opinion among summer hotel proprietors in all parts of the district that unless effective steps are taken to improve the fishing in the Kawartha waters, tourist traffic is bound to decline.

Many suggestions as to how this improvement is to be effected are made in the replies received and the questionnaires have produced some valuable information in regard to a very important subject.

To complete the inquiry there might be some additional data of value obtained were the guides in the district to be asked for recommendation as dealing with the situation.

They, of all men, should know the facts and be in a position to make some constructive suggestions.

A POINTED REBUKE.

A pointed and timely rebuke to those temperance orators who make intemperant speeches, has been administered by none other than that consistent and earnest advocate of temperance, the Toronto Globe.

The Globe's chiding has been occasioned by misrepresentations of conditions in Ontario under the Liquor Control Act, by speakers who have been telling the Province there has been an "enormous increase in drinking under Government Control" and an "increase in accidents, in crime and in poverty."

Such exaggerations as these have been pointed out by The Examiner on several occasions, and the opinion was expressed in these columns that the cause of temperance was being injured by immoderate and unreliable statements of this kind.

The Globe shares that view and advises "sticking to the facts" explaining its position as follows:

It is hardly necessary to state that The Globe is no friend of the Liquor Control Act. It has always opposed it to be an unwise measure and opposed to the highest and best interests of the community. Eighteen months' operation of Government Control has not produced any revolution in social and moral conditions or in the drinking habits of the people as would cause this paper to change its conviction. But extreme statements such as have been quoted, and others from the same source describing fortunes made by bootleggers selling "canned heat," are absurd, and will be deprecated by every true friends of the cause of temperance. No cause is ever best served by misrepresentation. The evidences of the failure of the Liquor Control Act to do what it set out to do are apparent, but exaggerated statements regarding the drinking propensities of the people and prevailing crime conditions—bad as the latter are—are ill advised, and will do more harm than good.

A POINT OF HONOR.

The Globe very properly complimented Mr. Edward Bayly, K.C., Deputy Attorney-General of the Province, for his prompt action in facilitating the new trial granted to William Haskins who was sentenced to five years hard labor for manslaughter, but has been declared to be wrongly convicted in view of an affidavit taken by two young women who state that the killing was done by another man. "As soon as doubt was cast upon the course of justice in this case," says the Globe, "Mr. Bayly became active in behalf of Haskins, although his department had been keen in prosecuting when everything seemed to point to Haskin's guilt. Mr. Bayly thus played the true part of a crown attorney. It was right that Haskins should be given the benefit of the doubt at once, and in facilitating this the Deputy Attorney-General upheld the traditions of British justice in a way which will help to keep them respected." We can fully endorse every word of this, but we wonder why it did not occur to the Globe to speak of a parallel case in which the Attorney-General's Department has not been so alert or so prompt. It is a case in which the honor of the whole Province of Ontario is concerned, and where the personal honor of a gentleman well-known in the world, highly respected by the most eminent men of his time, has been impugned, and he himself has been subjected to indignities and robbed of his means in a way that reads like one of the conspiracies of former centuries. And all this because at the request of the Prime Minister of the Province he undertook to do the Province a service, and carried out that service to the profit of the people of Ontario to the extent of several millions of dollars. He was charged in the heat of political feeling with conspiracy and convicted, sentenced to jail, served his sentence, and fined $200,000. The person he was supposed to have conspired with was also tried. Evidence which had not been available in the former trial was produced, and this conspirator was proven innocent. The first prisoner was then left under the stigma of a sentence imposed for conspiracy when it had been proved that he could not have conspired with anybody, but had merely performed a service for the State. One would have expected from the Globe's eulogy that Mr. Bayly, K.C., would have been the first and at once to rush forward and plead for a new trial for this much wronged gentleman. But neither he nor his superior, Hon. Mr. Price, have as yet gone on record as supporting the plea for a new trial in this case. It is the case of Mr. Aemilius Jarvis, whose reputation bears this unjust and wholly undeserved stigma, and who has petitioned for a new trial so that his name may be cleared and his character vindicated as it ought to be by his fellow-citizens for whose sake he innocently incurred this reprobation. We are aware of the multitudinous duties that overwhelm the Attorney-General's Department, but we fail to understand why a little attention has not been given to this case. Even the time given to read this article would be sufficient for one familiar with the facts, as Mr. Bayly can scarcely fail to be, to make up his mind that there has been a miscarriage of justice. Mr. Bayly, entitled as he is to the eulogium of the Globe, with his delicate sense of what is honorable and fitting, could not lose a moment once he turns his attention to the case before calling the attention of Hon. Mr. Price to the urgent necessity, for the honor of the Province of Ontario, of demanding a new trial. There has been an unaccountable delay at Ottawa in dealing with the case. The absence of the Prime Mhinister in Europe may have delayed it. But he is back in harness again. Hamilton is much interested in Mr. Jarvis' plight, and several of her most prominent citizens have placed themselves on record as to the need of a new trial. We appeal to Hon. Mr. Price and to Mr. Bayly, to take time to consider the matter. It is not a question of money, for which the Provincial Treasurer might be inclined to halt action. Mr. Jarvis, we firmly believe, has no regard for the money in comparison with that richer, treasure, his good name. This inestimable enrichment, which he only desires to have given the half-mark of the courts of his native land, is to him above rubies, and none know better what reputation means to a man of honor than the Attorney-General and his Deputy. This act of justice will rebound to their good name almost as much as to the good name of him for whom it lies in their power to help in restoring that which he holds so dear.—Hamilton Herald.

EDIOTRIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

The great anxiety shown over the condition of King George is proof of the popularity of His Majesty among the British people.

Predictions of the biggest home coming in the history of Peterborough are justified by the enthusiasm with which Old Home Week is being greeted by old boys and girls everywhere.

A school for girls along similar lines to the Bowmanville Boys School was mooted at the Conservative convention. The success of the Bowmanville experiment justifies the providing of equal opportunities for girls.

The capture, near Brighton, of the trio accused of robbing a Toronto fur store was achievement in which the Provincial Police showed courage and alertness. The officers responsible deserve credit for a good piece of work.

Attendance at the Royal Winter Fair promises to break all records. The Fair is now firmly established as the greatest event of the year from an agricultural viewpoint.

Voice of the People

Letters to be printed in the Voice of the People column must be received at The Examiner Office on the day before it is desired to have them published.

NUMBER WAS APPRECIATED

Dear Editor:

Just a few lines of congratulations on the Armistice Number and can readily say with Mrs. Miller it was a great success. Just to see all those soldiers' photos in uniform brings us back to those days when we had loved ones overseas. The memorials were nice also. I'm sure everyone appreciated that edition. No one can realize only those that know, the large task of printing a paper. It is not all pleasure. The Examiner is very popular in this district, and I hope it remains so.

Sincerely,

MRS. D. WELLMAN,

Bonarlaw.

A Thought

A BEAUTIFUL STATUE.

A beautiful statue once stood in the market place of an Italian city. It was a statue of a Greek girl. A ragged, uncombed little street child, coming across the statue in her play, stopped and gazed at it in admiration. She was captivated by it. She gazed long and lovingly. Moved by a sudden impulse, she went home and washed her face and combed her hair. Another day she stopped again before the statue and admired it, and she got a new idea. Next day her tattered clothes were washed and mended. Each time she looked at the statue she found something in its beauties until she was a transformed child. So, gazing with the eye of faith upon the beauties of the Man of Sorrows will inspire the heart of man and make him desirous of emulating His divine loveliness.

The Question Box

L.R.M. — Question.—What is the gallfly?

Answer.—The gallfly is an insect that deposits its eggs in plants and occasions galls.

M.A.S., Q.—Where did Canada get its title of Dominion?

A.—Sir John A. Macdonald suggested the title of Kingdom of Canada when Confederation was being formed, but it was opposed on the ground that it might be offensive to the United States. Sir Leonard Tilley is credited with suggesting the word Dominion from Psalm 72, which reads, "He shall have dominion also from sea to sea."

GOD'S MINUTE.

Evening, and morning and at noon will I pray, and cry aloud; and He shall hear my voice. Cast thy burden upon the Lord, and He shall sustain thee; He shall never suffer the righteous to be moved.—Ps. 55:17,22.

Our Father in Heaven, look upon us, we beseech Thee in Thine infinite love and compassion. Dwell Thou in us, that, being molded by Thy good Spirit we may have fellowship with Thee as Thy children. Help us at all times to trust Thee. Appoint for us what Thou willest, and make us ready to receive with thankfulness whatsoever seemeth good to Thee concerning us. Go with us in every mission on which Thou art pleased to send us, and in Thy service may we find rest.

Lighten our darkness, we entreat Thee that we may behold Thy face, and, in Thy tender mercy, do Thou temper the storm lest our weak faith fail. Forgive our sins, and day by day deliver us from their power. We commit all our loved ones to Thy keeping. Do Thou watch over them and bless them. And as Thou givest us a taste of Thy joy in loving our friends, lead us into the fulness of the joy of loving all whom Thou lovest, through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

TORONTO, Nov. 24. — There are quite a few stale cattle unsold on the yards after the closing market. MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., Nov. 24 (Canadian Press).—The export trade in grain here yesterday was extremely dull owing to the fact that foreign buyers did not respond to the offering that was made by exporters over night. A feature of the local cash grain market was the strength that developed in Argentine corn and prices were advanced 2c per bushel. Sales were made at $1.16 per bushel. On the other hand, No. 4 yellow corn was easier at a decline of one cent per bushel, with car lots changing hands at $1.05 per bushel.

A moderate amount of business was done in spring and winter wheat. Flour prices were steady.

The demand for all lines of millfeed continued good and prices were well maintained. Standard grades of rolled oats were unchanged. An active business was done in eggs and prices for fresh and storage grades were unchanged. Receipts were 1,560 cases.

The bean market was steady. Imported grain sold at $5.25 per bushel and Canadian grain sold at $4.85 to $4.90 per bushel, ex-store.

The undertone to the butter market was steady under a moderate demand. Receipts were 228 packages.

Extreme dullness marked the local and export trade in cheese, but prices were unchanged. Receipts were 2,092 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, Nov. 24 (Canadian Press).—Wheat turned downward in price toward the last yesterday owing a good deal to enlarged estimates of 1928 wheat yield, both in Argentina and Australia. Reports of increasing receipts of domestic wheat south-west were also the subject of considerable notice.

Closing quotations on wheat were easy, ¾c to 5-8c net lower; corn 5-8c to 1¼c at 1 3-8c off; oats unchanged to 1-8c to ¼c up, and provisions unchanged to 35c down.

Word of favorable weather for wheat harvest operations going on in Northern Argentina tended to emphasize the bearish effect on news that a leading British authority estimated Argentina's probable surplus wheat production at 220,500,000 bushels, compared with 185,000,000 bushels cleared so far this season. At times yesterday, however, the wheat market here showed an upward slant, largely as a result of advices that Southern Argentine crops are suffering on account of severe dearth of rain, moisture deficiency having now continued for ten weeks.

Indications that the movement of domestic wheat south-west is picking up were supplemented by reports that except for flood complaints winter wheat conditions are generally favorable with moisture ample including even the Far West, and appearance of germinated wheat improved. Slackness of export call yesterday for Canadian wheat was also a bearish influence. On the other hand, some European buying of Chicago wheat future deliveries was apparent. Minneapolis messages said millers were also buying futures, and there was talk of some eastern seaboard demand for domestic No. 2 hard winter.

Evidence of enlarged sales of Iowa and Illinois corn to come to Chicago did much to put corn values on the downgrade. Besides, corn belt weather was more favorable for the movement of the crop, and it was asserted that further corn export purchases had been cancelled. Commission house buying carried deferred deliveries of oats up to a new high price record for the season.

Provisions went lower with hogs.

ARE YOU STRICKEN WITH ONE OF THOSE COMMON COLDS?

The term "common cold" is the most paradoxical and misleading applied to any ailment from which we can suffer. It isn't "common" and it isn't "cold." It is instead characterized by fever, occurs in run-down and clogged-up bodies, and leads to grave disorders.

To dispose of a cold, get rid of the condition which occasions it. Restore normal eliminative by removing the irritation of the nerves serving the eliminative organs. CHIROPRACTIC SPINAL ADJUSTMENTS remove the cause of disease. See your Chiropractor without delay.

CONDITION OF KING

Duke of York, the only son of the King now in England, dined last night with his mother, but according to present arrangements, will return to Naseby Hall to-day to spend the week end with the Duchess of York.

If as last night's bulletin gives room for hope, the illness of the King follows a mild course, leading to recovery, there is little doubt that he will be advised a soon as he is convalescent, to take another sea trip, as he did following his last serious illness.

Milder Climate Advised.

His physician at that time counselled his Majety never to spend another winter in England, but to seek a milder climate. The King, however, set public devotion to duty first, and this, added to his well known love of life in his home country, induced him to ignore the medical advice.

A despatch from Johannesburg, received last night, says that while the Prince of Wales is constantly informed of the condition of his father, he has as yet not cancelled any part of the hunting visit he is making in Africa.

The King, whose devotion to duty caused him to stand with bared head in a rainstorm at the Armistice Day ceremonies, has developed congestion in one lung.

Devoted to Offic

A medical man said: "I think most authorities would agree that at the age of 63 the King would do well to relax a little his devotion to the cares of office. It is undeniable that judiciously chosen visits to a warmer clime at selected times would strength en him in facing the winter. I suppose there would be no question of his wintering abroad, as do many of his subject. It is interesting to recall that King Edward paid fairly frequent visits to Homburg, Marienbad and Biarritz, either to take the cures or because of the climate."

It was also recalled that in 1915, while reviewing British troops in France, King George was injured, when his horse frightened by the cheers of the soldiers, reared and fell. His Majesty suffered severely from shock and bruises and was ill for some time. That this may have had some influence upon his general health is regarded as quite possible.

The King's illness first made itself apparent as an ordinary cold. Fever however persisted and finally congestion in one lung was found by his physicians. He was forced to cancel several public engagements, his place being taken by Queen Mary. Then yesterday morning a bulletin was issued saying that there was a "slight extension of the mischief in his lung."

This announcement giving his illness a rather more serious turn, was tempered, however, by the announcement that he was maintaining his strength.

When your Children Cry for It

Mothers, who take one simple precaution, are seldom worried. With a bottle of Fletcher's Castoria in the house they can do what their doctor would tell them to do, when baby is fretful, feverish, colicky, constipated or stuffed-up with cold—give a few drops of this pure vegetable, pleasant-tasting preparation. It comforts Baby and soothes him to sleep in a jiffy. It's perfectly safe for the youngest infant. Use it freely—and as often as needed, specialists advise. A more liberal dose is all it takes to comfort and relieve older children, when feverishness, bad breath, no appetite, colds, etc., show they need a good purging. The mark of genuine Castoria is the Fletcher signature on the wrapper. Look for it to avoid imitations.

almost every case there was no evidence of overdone parts. Miss Isabelle Sutton played well the role of Miss Burleigh, the stately young heiress; Mrs. Hall did equally well in the part of Jerusha Judkins, the post mistress, who, although no heiress had two swains, equally desirous of changing her name; Roxy, the "Fresh Air Kid" (Miss Trethewey), was a merry little sprite, saucy, loveable and pathetic by turns. Granny Grieve's part was well played even to the stiff movements which one might expect of an old woman. Miss Dunford did exceptionally well, for her role was difficult in many ways. Fanny, the maid, was admirably played by Miss Dora Wilson.

The part of the Young Country Minister was portrayed to the life by Mr. Huston, who is himself the minister of Lakehurst United Church, dignified, kindly and just, but nevertheless ready to take off his coat and fight like a man in defence of the right. The minister also had his own romance, winning the beautiful heiress for his own. His romance was "pepped up" considerably by Roxy, who was a born matchmaker. Mr. Robert Tait played the part of the villain exceedingly well from first to last. Timothy Hodd's part, played by done, and his comical sayings came Carl Wilson, was particularly well so naturally from his lips that they might have been original. He won high favor with the audience, and finally he won Jerushu's heart and hand at the moment when he had practically decided that Deacon Potter would get her.

Mr. Robert Tait as Mr. Heath was also worthy of mention as he had a difficult role, and played the part admirably. William Henry and Tom Sparrow, two juvenile rivals for Roxy's affections, were capital and were popular with the audience.

Judge Pardoe (Mr. Earl Chase) and Deacon Potter (Mr. Herbert Tait) and the brief part of the officer (Mr. Bruce Hall) also deserve mention.

The Characters.

The cast was as follows:

Rev. Ralph Underwood, the Young Country Minister, Rev. Mr. Huston; Judge Pardoe, escaped from jail, Mr. Earl Chase; Timothy Hodd, Mr. Carl Wilson; Deacon Potter, Mr. Herbert Tait; Tom Sparrow, who stutters, Mr. Orvil Windover; William Henry, chore boy to Jerusha, Mr. Eldon Montgomery; Mr. Heath(alias Murdock) a crook and fortune hunter, Mr. Robert Tait; Officer of the law, Mr. Bruce Hall; Miss Burleigh, the beautiful heiress, Miss Isabelle Sutton; Miss Jerusha Judkins, the village postmistress, Mrs. Hall; Roxy, the "fresh air kid" and " a live wire," Miss Mildred Trethewey; Granny Grimes, Miss Ora Dunford; Fanny, the trim maid servant. Miss Dora Wilson.

Between the acts selections were given by a splendid five-piece orchestra from Harvey and North Smith, a creditable organization of musical people who have banded together for mutual pleasure and community benefit and has achieved popularity in Lakefield as well as its own immediate district. The selections played were popular ones, some old favorite airs, sentimental airs of the period and planty of jazz. The orchestra added the right note to the entertainment and enlivened the intervals between the acts. Miss Mary Nicholls was the pianist; Mrs. James Irwin and J. W. Blewett, violins.

Before the close of the evening, Rev. T. M. Wesley made a few remarks of appreciation, which were heartily seconded by his audience.

Euchre Party

Fourteen tables were played at the euchre given on Tuesday night under the auspices of St. Paul's Choich ladies.

Mrs. Louis Sabatino and Mr. Ernest Robertshaw were prize winners, and the consolation prizes were won by Mrs. M. Allen and Mr. W. Garvey.

The party on November 27th will be the last before Christmas, and the proceeds will be given to the Holy Name Society.

Returns Doubled

The "jam shower," held by the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Canadian Legion during the "Week of Remembrance" more than doubled last year's returns and nearly one hundred jars of fruit and pickles are being sent to Toronto for use in the hospitals where sick soldiers are cared for.

This year's results indicates increased interest and also that year by year provision will be made by the housekeepers for this yearly appeal and a special jar of "tasty bits" will be set aside for the week of remembrance.

ANNUAL SAFETY

phrase for comedies. He next referred to local circumstances leading up to the inauguration of the movement which reminded one that from the small acorn a large tree grows. He said he would feel amply repaid for his visit if one seed of thought saved one life. Taking his hearers back to primitive times he drew attention to the fact that prehistoric man practised safety unknowingly. He protected himself from wild animals by carrying a spear or club and not stopping there in facing human foes used as a shield as a safety measure. He lived in caves for he knew that if he did not protect himself from the elements he would be incapacitated. "Now," continued the speaker, "in our various developments and electrical contrivances we have gone far beyond the dreams of even Jules Verne. With the developments science has brought, we must not overlook safety. There is the banana peel on the sidewalk, the nail in the piece of board and the silver hidden in the piece of wood.

Twenty Per Cent. Sacrificed.

Statistics show, Mr. Dixon pointed out, that twenty per cent. of the earning ability is sacrificed yearly by accidents and preventable diseases. For the practical joker he had not much to say. It is good to be foolish in the right place, but practical jokes end in suffering if not worse.

Mr. Dixon showed that many superstitions originated from safety measures, one for example being the walking under a ladder. Under the sub-heading of fire, rightful usage of gasoline was urged. Safety first policies as carried out by the Dunlop Tire Company showed much similarity to those employed at Deloro. "If we let our instincts and judgments guide our actions we will be saved tribulation," declared the speaker. "We are our brother's keeper and safety may be practised without a violation of our own particular religious principles or politics. Don't think of safety as a company matter. Think of it as a personal affair." The closing injunction was to fathers to practice safety in the presence of their children, thus seeking to develop instincts of safety within them.

Between the first and second reel of "Someone at Home," the drawing for a special prize took place, T. Cousins having the lucky number and D. Sanderson receiving the consolation prize.

S. B. Wright, general manager and F. A. Bapty gave short, enthusiastic speeches. H. S. Buchanan, of Toronto and a former employee, upon request, recited "The Green Eye of the Little Yellow God." Following two more violin solos by Mr. Jones the National Anthem was sung and a most profitable evening ended.

TORONTO, Nov. 24.—Storage holdings of butter at Toronto are being steadily diverted to domestic consumptive channels at prices which are holding well to seasonal levels. Generally speaking, the spot market is in a fairly comfortable position and resting on steady factors. While current business conditions cannot be described as flourishing, dealers report a fair movement of butter this week, with prices a shade firmer than at the close a week ago. On Monday at the resumption of trading the quotable range for No. 1 pasteurized was barely steady at 40¼c to 40¾c per lb. There was a decided tendency in jobbing circles to push the market forward when inquiry for fresh stocks was slowly increased. On Tuesday renewed firmness appeared, together with a wider range of prices for spot sales, which achieved a maximum of 41c per lb. for that day. From Tuesday onward trading has been moderately active filling orders for immediate wants, with 41c per lb. quoted as the extreme range for finest creamery solids. Withdrawals of top grades of butter from coolers have been well cleared and undergrades have displayed a brisker movement than formerly at a price range one cent under that obtainable for finest grades. At seaboard there has been more activity due to an increase in the demand from outside points. Regraded summer-make butter has been sold in a wholesale jobbing way at the same prices as current receipts of the same price.

Market information yesterday was to the effect that the local spot market was pasteurized solids, with pasteurized and unpasteurized butter quotable from 39c to 40c per lb. New Zealand shipments will not reach here until about the middle of next month, and sales of New Zealand Anchor Brand, rated as finest creamery, have been reported at 39¾c per lb. at Montreal, due to renewed demand for the imported article, against a present price of from 39¼c to 40¼c per lb. in the same market for the Canadian product.

Captain of the Red Heads

It looked like we were going to have peace and quiet on the river bank now. And you can bet I was glad that we had settled our quarrel with that red-headed boy whose brother I saved from the School for Bad Boys, where Judge Granbery was going to send him. How that red-head could hit! Oh boy, I never forgot the lick on the head he gave me in our fight on Halloween! No, sir! Even now when I touch it, the spot feels soft—or anyway, if it isn't soft, it hurts a little when I press hard with my finger. And I knew, too, that the other boys felt thankful to me that I had settled things with him, and that he wasn't our enemy any more. But you never can tell what funny things are going to happen next—we boys came down to our clubhouse on Monday afternoon, just as soon as school let out, and held our meeting.

"Well," sings out Jerry Moore, "nothin' to worry about now, fellows. Guess we can go ahead and have all the fun we want now, without worrying about that crazy red-head—"

"Who's callin' me red-head?" broke in a voice from a window in our clubhouse. We all turned quickly—and by Jinks, there was a red-headed boy standing, looking in at us! He had a scowl on his face, too, and I saw it was just too bad that we had been talking about red-heads when he passed our window. Or maybe he was standing there all the time, spying on us, I don't know.

"Pease excuse that, won't you, stranger?" spoke up our captain. "We didn't call you red-head—us boys were talking about somebody else. We didn't know you were there."

The red-headed boy gave us all a mean look.

"Well," he said, "don't make any difference to me who ya' were talkin' about. I just know you guys don't like red-heads. I heard all about your fights. I know ya'. And I'll dare any of ya' to step outside here a minute."

Jerry Moore was going to jump up, but I laid my hand on his arm. We boys all sat quiet, not wishing to say anything to make this red-headed boy angry. And by Jinks! his hair was such a fiery red that I knew he would be an awfully angry fighter, once you got his dander up. When he saw we didn't want to pick a fight with him, he sneered at us.

"What you all sittin' there like dummies for?" he called out. "Can't you hear? I dared ya' to come out—any of ya'—or all of ya'—I don't care which—I double dare ya'—"

I couldn't hold Jerry any longer. That double dare stuff makes Jerry wild. He leaped up so fast he turned over his chair, and out the door he lit. But the red-head started off as soon as he saw Jerry move. We all ran to the door to stop any trouble, but there wasn't any need—the red-head had a good start, and he was cutting it fast for the woods. Jerry stopped and came back, breathing hard, and his fists doubled up. "I'll get him next time," he said.

"Ain't goin' to be any next time," said our captain; "ow, look here, Jerry, we just got through with fightin' red-heads, and here you want to start another fuss."

"Who? Me? I ain't startin' it. You don't expect me to stand there and let a fella double-dare me, do you?"

"Listen, fellows," said Shadow Loomis, "there's something funny about this. It can't be just an accident that we meet one red-headed boy after another, and get into fights with 'em. Now, has anybody seen that fellow before?"

"I never saw him before," said Bill Darby, "but he might be another brother of those two we just settled up our fight with last Saturday."

"His face looks familiar to me," I said, slowly, as I tried to recall where I might have seen this strange red-head.

"Wh re did you see him before?" asked Dick.

"Search me!" I exclaimed, and I was impatient with myself for not being able to remember. "There's something shifty about his eyes—I've seen 'em before, bu—"

I paused, as I scratched my head and gave it up.

"But what?" urged Dick.

I shook my head. "No," I said, "I guess I'm wrong. Maybe he does look like the two red-headed brothers we parted friends with last week. Maybe that's what makes me think I saw him before. But I don't know. Seems like I know the face—the eyes, for a fact—and that pug nose—seems like I saw that before, but you can often be fooled. I don't remember any red-head. And I surely would remember a fellow's hair, especially if it was red. You don't often notice the color of a fellow's hair, but when it's red you do."

"Well, keep your eyes peeled," said Shadow Loomis. "I guess we better scout around, Hawkins, each one of us, and find out what's going on over in Pelham."

We decided to do that. Our captain called us back to the table, and told us how he wanted us to play the spy, two boys always together going in different directions, to quietly find out what that red-head was doing here, and to see whether or not the Pelham gang had something to do with it. They most likely would get somebody to pick on us, and act as though they didn't know anything about it. So Shadow and I were made partners, and away we went. Our way, according to our captain's orders, was across the river, through Pelham, and out beyond the barren space known as Burney's Field.

We took a canoe and paddled across the river to Pelham. We saw a thin ribbon of smoke going up from behind the little old shack that Briggen the Pelham leader, called his headquarters. We beached the canoe and walked up. A bunch of Pelham fellows sat around a fire. One fellow, sitting on a log, caught sight of us right away, and jumped up. The other Pelhams saw him do that and turned to look at us, and then they too—all but Briggen himself—got up from their places around the fire and stood waiting as though they expected us to start something.

"Hello, Hawkins!" said the boy who had been sitting on the log. "We don't see each other often, do we, kid? Shake hands, won't you?"

"Sure," I said, stepping up. "Well, if it ain't our old friend Scraggs. Look here, Shadow. Do you remember this bird?"

"Think I do," said Shadow, remaining where he was, his hands in his pockets, and paying no attention whatever to the hand that Scraggs held out to him. "Last time I saw him, I think, he was gettin' thrown out of Sadler's Seventeen gang, for stealing."

"What! You," cried Scraggs, but I stopped him short.

"Hold on," I told him, "no use getting peeved about that, Scraggs. I guess it's true, all right, because I was there, too. But you don't have to go telling the Pelhams all about that, Shadow it's not just the fair and square thing to do. Forget it, Scraggs. Anybody can make a mistake once. You don't have to worry about that now, if you're playing the game fair and square—"

"Sure I am, Hawkins," he broke in; "what do you think? You know I played fair and square. Sadler will tell you that. I know I made a mistake that time I took that boy's suspenders. But I been fair and square ever since."

"What you doing over here in Pelham?"

"Oh, I been bummin' around with these fellows for a long time, now," said Scraggs.

"Well, you better watch your step!" put in Shadow, sharply. "You won't be fair and square for any long time if you hang around here."

"Hush, Shadow," I said, "don't let the Pelhams hear you—it'll only stir up more trouble. But Scraggs, maybe you can tell us—about any red-heads—"

"Oh, you mean those two brothers—who joined the Pelhams—"

"No; I mean a different one—a fellow who has eyes something like yours, and a nose that looks a little like yours, but his hair is as red as fire."

Scraggs shot a quick look from me to Shadow, and back to me again.

"No," he said. He shook his head a little, and said again: "No."

"All right, Scraggs. That'll be all. Goodbye, and look out for holes in the sidewalk."

None of us boys found out anything that day. But the next day, as I was coming down the river path to the clubhouse, I met another red-headed boy who walked past me in a hurry and went on up to the main road. I turned around to watch him, but he never looked back once. "By Jinks!" I said to myself, as I looked at the red hair that showed under his cap, "how come so many red-heads around this river bank all of a sudden?"

I waited until I saw him disappear around the corner and then I went on down to the clubhouse. Our two new members, Arthur and Walter, were explaining something to the other boys who sat around the table waiting for our meeting to start.

"Here's Hawkins now," said our captain, as I came in; "you tell him about it."

"What's up?" I said. "You don't mean to tell me it's more red-headed kids—"

"Exactly what they've been telling us," said Shadow Loomis, with a grin. "Hawkins, there must be a red-head club near here, somewhere."

"It was this way, Hawkins," spoke up Arthur, "when we left home today a boy on the other side of the street got up from the curb where he was sitting and followed us. When we got to the next corner we waited for him. But he didn't say anything—just passed on."

"Aw, shucks!" I said; "that doesn't mean he was following you. He might have been just sittin' there and got up—he would have got up at that same time whether you had started down the street or not, maybe—"

"Wait a minute!" broke in Shadow. "Give these kids time to tell it."

"All right, tell it," I said.

"Well," said Arthur, "when he passed, we took a good look at him. He had red hair."

"Goodnight!" I said. "Won't I ever stop hearing about red-heads? Why, I just passed one myself on the river path. Who was he—the same one who double-dared Jerry to come out—"

"No; he was different. Taller, a little, and better looking."

"So you think he was following you?"

"Bet you a dime he was."

Well, I told them to hold a meeting and we would see what could be done. After the meeting Dick told us to get out again, in twos, and spy around, and to be very careful. He let Arthur and Walter go as partners, because he didn't like to separate the brothers, and Shadow and I went again.

"Keep your eye on those two, Hawkins," whispered Shadow to me, as we followed the brothers out.

"Don't worry," I said; "you and I are going to play spy all right—but we're going to spy on those two spies."

"They've got something coming to 'em, I'm afraid," said Shadow, "some old grudge that they had against them before they moved down here."

"I don't know about that," I said; "I'm thinking a whole lot, though."

"Don't go that way," said Shadow, "let's take this short cut, and we're bound to meet them on the other side of the woods where the clearing is."

So we took the path under the trees, and within a short time we came out at the bend of the river, where we sat to wait. But we waited too long; I knew that something had happened to keep those two brothers. There had been more than plenty time for them to walk this far, even at the longer, round-about distance, so I said to Shadow:

"Maybe I'm wrong, so you stay here and wait for them. I'm going back along the roundabout way and see if I can get a sight of 'em."

I walked fast along the path. It wasn't long until I saw something. Two boys, sitting under a big round tree. I was just about to shout to them, but all of a sudden the sunlight fell upon them and I knew they weren't Arthur and Walter. No. For as the sunlight fell upon their heads, I saw it glinted copper-colored in their hair.

"Red-heads!" I muttered, as I came to a stop, and thanked my stars I had not shouted. The next second I knew I had no time to lose; they had leaped to their feet and were coming my way. I shinned up the nearest tree—it was a wide-spreading tree, with low branches, and easy for me to pull myself up, swing one leg over the wide bough, and lay there, quietly. The two red-heads came right under the very tree in which I was perched, and sat down again.

"They're coming," said one. "They must have caught the two kids."

In a few seconds I knew what they were talking about—there came into view about a dozen boys—two in the middle were being pushed and dragged—and I saw these two in the middle were Arthur and Walter. I wished I had told Shadow to listen for a signal—but then, what could we two have done? I lay still up on the bough, as the crowd stopped under the tree, and the strange boys made a circle around Arthur and Walter. And in amazement I stared at them, as they all took off their caps and threw them in a pile at the base of the tree, and I saw that they were all red-heads—the one who now stepped up to Arthur and looked into his face was the one with the fiery hair—by Jinks! you wouldn't think anybody's hair could be so red as that—and that's the thought that started me thinking right away—you see.

"Well!" he sneered at Arthur, "you, big boy, thought you could sneak out of Briggen's gang and join Hawkins' club, eh? Well, you can't do it without takin' a lickin'—and oh, boy, what a lickin' you're goin' to get, now! Look here, fellas," he continued, whirling around at his red-headed pals; "here's the guy who has a lot of fun calling me a red-head—everywhere he sees me he yells 'red-head' at me and makes fun of me—"

"I did not!" snapped Arthur. "I know better than to do that. I never saw you before—"

The fiery-haired one slapped him across the cheek. "Don't talk like that to me!" he hissed.

But here one of the other lesser red-heads spoke up.

"Don't strike him like that, boss," he said; "we got rules, you know in this red-headed league."

"Sure you have rules," snapped the leader; "ain't that why I'm the boss of this league you guys formed? It's a rule, ain't it, that the fellow with the reddest hair is boss, ain't it? Well, I'm that one, ain't I?"

"Yes, worse luck," growled the other; "if you didn't have that good red hair, slay me if I wouldn't punch your ugly map for you. So would these others. We don't like the rough way you treat the kids who call us red-heads—"

"What?" yelled the fiery-haired one. "Why, didn't you fellas form this red-headed league to teach other kids not to call you red-heads? Didn't you—"

"We know it!" snapped the other. "But we got rules how to do it—and you don't have to slap 'em in the face just because you get your temper up—that isn't the way—"

"Are you goin' to live up to the rules, or ain't you?" asked the leader.

"Look here," spoke up one of the two red-heads whom I had first seen sitting under the tree, "don't get too flip, boss. We said we'd call the red-dest haired fella boss and let him give us orders, and we will stick up to what we said, but don't go fightin'—it isn't any good."

"Don't you give me any of your sass," said the red leader; "when you reported a fella who called you red-head, we all got him and made him sorry, didn't we. Well, now, I tell you this fella here and his brother called me a red-head every time they saw me—"

"I never saw you before!" repeated Arthur. "There's only one thing you're wanting us to get licked for, and that is for leaving Briggen's Pelham gang—and you know it!"

I could have told what would happen, and it did—the red-headed leader shot his hand out and it caught Arthur square upon the chin. He fell backward, and Walter caught him. At the same moment two of the red-heads stepped out of the circle and up to the fiery-haired one, who backed away from them, over toward where I lay right above him on the bough.

"By hickory!" said one, "if your hair wasn't as red as it is, I'd punch you myself—"

I reached down from my perch—my right hand, fingers outstretched—"Punch him then!" I yelled.

For all of a sudden, while I lay up there on that bough, something in the voice of that fiery-headed braggard had started old remembrances and I grabbed hold of that fiery red hair and snatched a handful—

What? Such a handful! Why, I had ALL of it! All of that red hair that had made him the tyrant of the red-headed league was in my hands, and there below the bough on which I hung stood a bunch of the most surprised boys—startled by my sudden shout and amazed more at the black-headed youth from whose head I had snatched the red wig—it was old Scraggs himself! Briggen's pal—

He got away! Quickly he made his departure—because the red-headed boys were too surprised to come to their senses, before Scraggs was gone. But a shout was raised within a few seconds, and then they were after him—every one of those red-headed boys who had been fooled by that gloriously red wig—they were like a nest of mad hornets turned loose now, when they saw how they had been tricked into helping this pal of the Pelhams to give punishment to our two new members.

"Come on, Arthur!" cried Walter. "You can get a crack at 'im for slappin' you that-a-way."

But I had shinned down from the tree, now—I had each one of those brothers by the arm, and I said: "No! With a capital 'N.' We are going right back to the clubhouse and mind our own business."

"But we ought to let Art take one crack at 'im—" protested Walter, excitedly.

"Don't worry," I said, and I had to chuckle at that; "those red-tops will catch him, don't worry, and we will let them handle him."

Which we did.

A Letter From The 'Seckatary'

Dear Club Members:

Many of our members write to me asking what is my favorite book. And it is a hard question for me to answer, because I like so many books, and reading is one of my favorite hobbies. I have read a lot of fine books, and many of them I read over and over again. But if I had to name one of them that I think I liked the best, I guess it would be "Treasure Island" by Robert Louis Stevenson. I never get tired of reading it over and over, and that is the best way to tell it is a favorite book. I like the descriptions of the places where the ship sailed, and I like the character drawing of the pirates, and especially the quaint humor of old John Silver with the wooden leg and his parrot. And then I like the story of the hidden treasure, and maybe I like it, too, because the chief character in it is named Jim Hawkins.

But there are books and books; and while we might single out one to be a favorite, another boy or girl might not agree with us and have a favorite of their own.

Now, let's all write down what we think is our favorite book, and tell why we like it. The title of our contest this week will be "MY FAVORITE BOOK." This kind of a contest will be of great interest to all of our members, because it will give you an idea of your fellow-members' favorite reading, and at the same time it will suggest to you the names of many good books that you will be glad to know and read for your amusement. With boys and girls could have a great deal more pleasure out of books, if they only knew what books to ask for. Now we are going to try to make up a good big list of all that is best in the young folks' library, and this list will be a good item for all of us to clip out and paste in our scrap books. And I want every member of our club to take part in this contest—just sit down and write me a long letter and tell me what is your favorite book, and then proceed to tell me why you like it.

The prize for the "Funniest Experience" competition is won by Alma Thompson, Hartley Avenue.

Her letter is printed first, and then there are a lot from other members. Now, get YOUR letter in next week—resolve to have at least one printed this year.

Hello Seck:

It is o.k. to send in a continued story? It isn't very long, three chapters. I wish you would tell me as soon as possible as I am very anxious to know. Here is my story.

My Funniest Experience.

About two years ago, when we lived in the country, my cousin and I had a long way to go to school. There was a short cut through a field near the cemetery. We sometimes went this way in the morning but we always went around by the road at evening. One day as we were coming home from school, it was late and we were both getting frightened. "It is getting dark," said Delorious, "lets go through the short cut." "Oh," I gasped, "it's too spooky." "I'm not afraid," declared Delorious, "come on." I followed her but my legs were wabbling under me. We walked very fast for it was now quite dark. Every little noise my heart rose in my mouth. We were nearly past the cemetery when we looked up. "Oh horrors," I cried, "spooks, witches, ghosts, run Delorious, look!" Delorious didn't stop to look but ran. We ran all the way home which was good five blocks. We arrived home all out of breath and mother asked us what was the matter, but we didn't tell her because we were too ashamed.

Dad looked very worried and we asked him what was the matter and he told us that Billy, our favorite cow was missing. "She went towards the cemetery," said Dad. Delorious looked at me and I looked at her. Then we both said good-night and crept upstairs to bed.

The next day dad and my uncle Tom went to look for Billy (it was Saturday and we had no school). In a little while they came back with Billy. "Where did you find her?" asked mother. "We found her in the cemetery eating the grass." Delorious and I both laughed out loud. "What are you laughing at?" said dad. Delorious told them of our funny experience and we all agreed that it was a funny experience.

Yours fair and square,
Alma Thompson.

Hartley Ave.

I will be glad to see your serial story, Alma, if it is your own composition, and will then decide whether I can print it.

Dear Seck:

One cold winter night some of my girl friends and I were asked to a sleigh-drive party, out in the country. We bundled up warm and prepared sandwiches, cakes and candies. At seven o'clock a team of horses and a large sleigh parked in front of our house, where all the girls met. We piled into the sleigh and started off. When the horses were well on their way they started to get restless and the driver, not being experienced, jumped out, telling us to do the same. We were too frightened to jump, but two of the girls were thrown off by the jerk of the sleigh and landed in the snow. The box of sandwiches went flying and another girl soon followed them. It was so funny we just had to laugh. It seemed as though the horses were enjoying the fun as well as we were. I say fun, although some people would not have called it fun. One or two of the girls saw the danger and jumped, but another girl and I held right on. It seemed as though the horses were never going to stop running, when they started to climb a hill. I held my breath as they turned a corner, then all of a sudden the top of the sleigh came off and dumped us into the snow bank. My girl friend looked so funny with her hat on one side that I sat there laughing, not realizing how funny I looked myself. Soon the girls gathered up again, and we started out with a new driver and a very happy bunch, even if we were a little shaken up. We arrived at the house and enjoyed telling our friends of our great adventure.

Hoping this will win a prize

Yours fair and square,
Hilda Storey.
294 Mark Street.
Peterborough, Ont.

That was, indeed, an adventure, Hilda, and it was a good thing you were able to laugh!

Dear Seck:

I should be ashamed of myself for not writing you. So I am going to try and win this prize. I hope I win, but this is not a true story.

One day two other boys and myself were up in the north, we had three guns, and one morning we were going out and we came across a bear track. We had two blood hounds. We were going through the woods, when I picked up a snow ball and was going to hit a tree, just then I saw the bear. It was on its hind legs, I threw the ball and hit it in the eye, but we never saw it afterwards.

Yours fair and square,
Garnett Howden.

Fowler's Corners, Ont.

You are really living up to your club motto when you tell me the story isn't true, Garnett. It is a very good fiction story, though.

Dear Seck:

I thank you very much for the badge which I just received. I think my funniest experience happened when I lived in the country.

One day I was leading my calf on a rope. He was about two months old. He led alright for a while, then some flies settled on his back, then he started to run for all he was worth. I was at the end of the rope, I was going as fast as my legs would take me, all of a sudden I fell down and the next thing I saw my calf eating grass in the orchard.

Yours fair and square,
Gerald Perks.

88 Douro Street,
Peterborough, Ont.

That WAS a funny experience, Gerald. I wonder if the calf enjoyed it?

Dear Seck:

One evening I went down Pour Creek in St. Catherines. I saw something which I did not know what it was, but when it saw me it darted into the water. It soon came out again, farther down the creek. It kept on doing this until it came quite near me. I tried to catch it but it darted so quickly I could not do it. I kept on trying until it got quite late. Then I went home. Now I think I know what it was. A trout.

Yours fair and square,
Evelyn Lawless.

McFarlane Ave.,
Peterborough, Ont.

If it was a trout, Evelyn, it couldn't come out of the water. Maybe it was a frog.

Dear Seck:

I have joined about two weeks ago and have not received my pin yet. Will you please send me it soon. I am enclosing five members. They are all from Peterborough.

Well, I guess I will close for now. Hoping you will receive many members.

Yours fair and square,
Phyllis Perdue.

128 Sutherland Street,
Peterborough, Ont.

The pins were delayed, Phyllis, because I didn't have enough to go around our more than 3,000 members.

Dear Seck:

This is my first letter to your page and I thought I would tell you about my trip to Niagara Falls.

We started away very early in the morning and arrived in Toronto at 11:30 There we got my sister and after riding for sixty miles we arrived at the Falls. It was a very beautiful sight. We were on the Canadian side, but could feel the cool spray. After staying there about an hour we started for home. We arrived home about 11:00 o'clock in the evening, after a very enjoyable day.

Yours fair and square,
Donald Hendren.

R.R. No. 3,
Peterborough, Ont.

That certainly must have been an interesting trip, Donald. I wish I could have been with you.

Dear Seck:

I am sending in a drawing, a composition, and this small letter hoping to win one of your big books of, "The Adventures of Seckatary Hawkins and his club." I have been reading the story every week and like it very much. I am just a new member, but I read the story long before I joined. Before it was published in the Examiner I used to read it from the Buffalo Sunday Times. I am glad you sent me my pin and membership coupon as I wanted to join in the contests of the club and I thank you very much for the trouble you have went to.

Yours fair and square,
Arthur Beauclerc.

563 Sherbrooke Street,
Peterborough, Ont.

We're glad to have you in our branch of the Club, Arthur.

Dear Seck:

Hearts, like doors will open with ease.
To very, very little keys;
And don't forget that two are these:
"And thank you sir," and if you please.

Yours fair and square,
Donald Meredith.

That's a very nice verse, Donald. Is it your own composition?

Dear Seck:

I have got my card and button. I appreciate them very much. I am going to try to uphold the club motto, "Fair and Square." I am going to try to win one of those adventure books. You have very nice stories put in the paper every Saturday.

Well, I will close now, hoping you will have this letter, which is my first one, printed in the paper.

Yours fair and square,
Billie Brooks.

Peterborough, Ont.

Welcome to our circle, Billie. Do try the contests—and write letters. I just love to get letters.

Dear Seck:

I am a new member. I received my pin and card on Wednesday. Thank you. Seck could I send in stories that I have read. I am sure they would interest the other members. I do not mean for a prize but just as a help. The stories are very short and interesting.

Yours fair and square,
Vera E. Kilcher.

264 Reid Street,
Peterborough, Ont.

I'm afraid, Vera, I haven't room to print stories that are not original. I have never had room yet to print all the names. But I would like to have a story written by you.

Dear Seck:

I am writing to you for my brother and sister who want to belong to our Club. Alvia is six years old on July 21, 1928 and Anna is five years old on January 10, 1929.

Yours fair and square,
Alfreida Logan.

Havelock, Ont.

I'm glad to have your brother and sister in the Club, Alfreida.

Dear Seck:

I thank you very much for the pin you sent me, and also for the card. I like the pin very much. I do not think I will be able to join in any of the competitions you send out because we cannot get the paper in time out here, but only for that I would like to join in some.

I let all my friends see the pin you sent me, and they all thought it very nice. I have just read the story of you getting scared, and I hope Arthur and Walter won a prize, for they deserved it.

This is not a very long note, but I must close now.

Wishing you and your club the best success.

Yours fair and square,
Norman Deacon.

Gainsboro, Sask.

It's nice to hear from a member so far away, Norman, and if you wish to try some of the competitions I'm sure the members will allow me to extend the time limit a few days.

I am writing to thank you for my button. I will write some stories soon and hope I win one of your books.

Yours fair and square,
Frank McNulty.

289 Hunter St.

I'll be looking for your stories, Frank.

And now we will close our meeting for this week. Don't forget to write that letter about your favorite book and rush it in.

Till next week, 'bye,

Seckatary Hawkins

A BOOKISH PASSWORD

Last week's password was the old tried and trusty password to success—"Don't Give Up the Ship." Believe me, if you keep that for your life's password, you'll be on top of the world some day. A fellow who is a quitter isn't fair and square to himself; but the one who sticks to a thing until it is finished is a sure winner.

This week we are going to have about the easiest password that was ever given to our members to figure out. Here it is:

F—I—Y—A—E—.

Fill in the missing letters and you will have what most of us liked best in the way of stories when we were very small and even now, when we are a little older, we always like to recall to mind those same old stories, which contain all the legends and traditions of all nationalities.

Fill out the blank and send it to Seckatary Hawkins, care of The Examiner, Peterborough:—

UNCLE WIGGILY

By HOWARD R. GARIS

To-day's Bedtime Story

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE KIND RAIN.

(Copyright, 1928, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

As I told you in the story last night, the Fuzzy Fox, dressing up in a Hallowe'en suit of chicken feathers like an ostrich bird, had come to live in the empty stump house next door to Uncle Wiggily's bungalow. The Fox was going to slip out in the night and catch the rabbit.

"Ha! Ha!" chuckled the Fox when Uncle Wiggily had let the bad chap come to live in the empty stump for one snowball a month rent. "He doesn't know I'm the Fox! He thinks I'm an ostrich! Oh, this is a good joke!"

The Fox, who had fastened chicken and bird feathers all over his fur with sticky gum from the pine tree, sat down in the empty stump house to wait until it was dark, when Uncle Wiggily would be asleep.

"Then I'll just step over, break a window or door to get in his bungalow, and I'll have him," thought the ostrich Fox. The feathers he had stuck on himself ticked a bit, but he didn't mind that.

"It's worth being tickled to catch a rabbit!" chuckled the Fox.

Uncle Wiggily watched the ostrich bird, as he thought, go in the empty stump. Then the rabbit gentleman took down the To Let sign he had placed outside and began to hop back to his bungalow.

"What are you doing, Uncle Wiggily?" grunted Mr. Twistytail, the pig gentleman, as he waddled along just then. He was very fat was Mr. Twistytail.

"I just took this To Let sign down off my extra stump house," said the rabbit. "I'm letting a very nice chap live in it for the winter for a snowball a month rent."

"What sort of a chap is in your stump house?" asked the pig.

"An ostrich," answered the rabbit. "An ostrich, you know, is a big bird and they pull feathers out of his tail for ladies' hats."

"Oh, I know what an ostrich is," said Mr. Twistytail. "You don't need to tell me, thank you. I'll go have a look at this bird," and he waddled over to peer in a window of the stump house. He saw the Fox inside, all covered with feathers sticking on him.

"Yes," that's an ostrich all right!" grunted the pig gentleman. And he was fooled as much as Uncle Wiggily, for it wasn't an ostrich in that house at all, but the Fuzzy Fox!

"I hope he enjoys living there," said Mr. Longears kindly. "After a while I'll have Nurse Jane bake him a rusty nail pie, for I understand that ostriches love to eat rusty nails."

"Yes," grunted Mr. Twistytail, "they do. But don't you want to come for a walk with me now? Maybe you'll have an adventure."

"Maybe," agreed Uncle Wiggily, so he and the fat pig went walking, but they didn't have any adventure. However one was waiting for Uncle Wiggily when he reached home a little later.

It was getting dark and, after he had eaten his supper, Mr. Longears went to bed in his hollow stump bungalow. From the window of the empty stump house next door, the Fuzzy Fox watched, trying not to mind the tickling of the feathers he had stuck on himself.

"As soon as that rabbit is asleep I'll go in and get him!" whispered the Fox. Soon Uncle Wiggily was asleep in his bungalow.

The ostrich Fox opened the door of the stump house and stepped outside. It wasn't far to the rabbit's bungalow.

"If any one sees me," whispered the Fox, "they'll think I'm an ostrich going in Uncle Wiggily's to borrow some bedclothes for I have none of my own, having just moved in."

So the Fox, looking like an ostrich, using a can opener he had in his pocket, began to unlock Uncle Wiggily's door in the middle of the night. And no one saw him—not even the Police Dog. Soon the Fox would be inside.

But there was one friend of Uncle Wiggily who knew the Fox was trying to get in. This friend was the Kind Rain, which was almost ready to fall from the clouds for the weather had turned warm.

"I will save Uncle Wiggily from that Fox dressed in stuck on feathers to make him look like an ostrich," whispered the Kind Rain.

So the drops began to fall. The pattering sound they made awoke Uncle Wiggily. He jumped out of bed to close his window and, looking out, saw on the front stoop a dark form.

"Who is there?" asked the bunny.

"I am the ostrich to whom you rented the stump house next door," said the Fox, making his voice soft. "Come down and let me in. I want to borrow a blanket."

"I'll be right down," said Uncle Wiggily. And then the Kind Rain fell so fast and hard that it melted the sticky pine tree gum by which the feathers were stuck on the Fox. All the feathers came off and Uncle Wiggily saw beneath them the Bad Chap.

"Oh, you're the Fox, and not an ostrich at all!" cried the rabbit. "You can't fool me! Thanks, Kind Rain!" So the rabbit telephoned for the Police Dog, who came and arrested the Fox and took him away. So the trick didn't work after all.

Many trees, shrubs and plants contain rubber and, if proper methods of extraction can be devised, may be grown as crops.

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 25, 1928

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

Kindly stars rule today, according to astrology, which reads much of promise in the skies.

The day is favorable to the churches, making for great interest and for plans to extend work.

The clergy should benefit at this time when there will be a general awakening to spiritual as well as intellectual aspirations.

Under this rule prejudices are likely to vanish and to leave the mind open to logic. Preachers are well directed.

Increase in the number of theological students is to be marked, for the stars indicate that many young men will dedicate themselves to unselfish careers.

While this configuration prevails the modern spirit should dominate and whatever belongs to the past in static ideas will have little influence.

Women are subject to a most fortunate government of the stars and under the planetary influences will probably radiate charm and kindliness.

The sway encourages lovers and the evening is declared to be an auspicious time for suitors. It is lucky for engagements to marry.

They who plight troth today may expect prosperity as well as happiness and there is no divorce omen.

The seers sorrowfully prophesy war influences and counsel preparedness, although they forecast all difficulties for foreign countries.

The United States government is to meet many tests for wisdom and stability, which it will pass successfully, astrologers declare.

According to ancient lore women will find this a lucky day for wearing new clothing, which will be serviceable as well as becoming.

Persons whose birthdate it is probably will have a remarkably fortunate year, for friends and sudden opportunities should favor them.

Children born on this day probably will have minds that easily grasp money problems and absorb economic knowledge. Many financiers and bankers are born under this sign.

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 26, 1928

Although Mercury today is in benefic aspect, according to astrology, certain adverse influences are strong.

Under this direction of the stars investments that prove worthless may appear exceedingly alluring. It is a forbidding day for speculation.

Women especially, should guard against the temptation to risk money or to play for high stakes. This applies to love as well as finance.

This is not a particularly favorable wedding day, since a tendency to quarrel is indicated.

It is wise for women in business to attend strictly to routine affairs under this sway, which makes for legal tangles and money losses.

Wise men as well as wise women will resist the impulse to speak hastily or angrily while this rule prevails, for serious quarrels are easily precipitated.

Husbands may be especially exasperating while this configuration prevails, for it is supposed to intensify male egotism.

Russia, Great Britain and Japan are now coming under influences supposed to encourage a desire for arbitration and for peaceable consideration of international problems.

If the stars are rightly interpreted nature will play many serious pranks in the coming winter when extraordinary storms and unusually located earthquakes may be expected.

At this time the younger generation begins to be better understood, if the stars are to be trusted, and new geniuses will begin to be recognized.

The planetary government is exceedingly promising for schools and colleges. New heads of great educational institutions will promote advanced thinking and prepare students for world progress.

Cooking will now attract more attention than it has in recent years, for even fashionable women will begin to consider it one of the fine arts, astrologers forecast.

Persons whose birthdate it is may have many minor temptations in the coming year. They must be wary in conversation and in letter-writing.

Children born on this day may be too impulsive for their own best interests. These subjects of Sagittarius probably will be clever and witty, but they should resist the temptation to speech hastily or sarcastically.

LOCUSTS CREATE PANIC

WESTERLEIGH, N.Y., Nov. 24.—A swarm of locusts descending on this Staten Island city recently caused the calling out of three fire companies and kept police and health officers busy answering phone calls. The locusts devoured bushes, hedges and flower beds.

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH

BY DR. FRANK McCOY

ULCERS AND ABSCESSES

Ulcers and abscesses are practically always caused by a break or slight injury to the skin or mucous membranes of the body, which allows the entrance of various bacteria or toxic substances. Croton oil, ammonia, and turpentine, when injected under the skin, may also produce abscesses.

The mere presence of micro-organisms is not alone enough to cause pus formation. In fact, streptococci and bacilli coli, which are often found in ulcers, are frequently observed in many healthy tissues. The virulence of the bacteria depends largely upon the condition of the individual. Those who are in bad health, with diabetes, febrile diseases, or Bright's Disease, are especially susceptible.

Skin cracks from frostbite, sunburn and scratches are frequently the site for abscess formations.

Foreign bodies, such as splinters, needles and bullets do not usually cause abscesses unless they introduce pus-forming bacteria, or are moved and in this way cause an internal irritation, or unless they manufacture toxic substances through some chemical action with the flesh. They may remain buried in the tissues for years without producing suppuration (the formation of pus).

Although abscesses usually form where there has been a break in the skin, they may also form in the mucous membranes of the throat, stomach, intestines and urinary passages, or the bacteria may work their way through the sweat and oil glands of the skin, when the body's resistance is low, or when it is chronically overstuffed with carbohydrates and fats.

The best method of cultivating an immunity from ulcers and abscesses is to cultivate good health by fresh air, exercise and wholesome food. Once bacteria have gained entry in a rundon individual, they multiply, divide, and form various toxins and poisonous substances, which irritate and even cause destruction of the surrounding tissue. The body counteracts this by producing a dilatation of all of the capillaries in the immediate neighborhood, causing a local congestion which forces the white corpuscles and blood fluid through the capillaries into the neighborhood of the invasion.

The exact effect of the white corpuscles on the bacteria is unknown, but it is supposed that they wage a kind of war, with heavy casualties on both sides. The white corpuscles then undergo a fatty degeneration and die. This forms the white part of pus. Meanwhile the area about this field of combat is cut off by a plugging of the blood and lymphatic capillaries so that the tissues of the abscessed area die and are either digested by the white corpuscles or slough off.

Whenever there is an abscess, we have he typical indications of inflammation, such as redness, soreness, swelling and heat. In deep abscesses there may be severe fever and even delirum. Internal abscesses can usually be determined by an examination of the blood.

In treating abscesses, the physician should place the patient on a diet of fruit or non-starchy vegetables if the ulcer is external, or milk if in the stomach or intestines. Whenever possible an ulcer should be drained to permit the escape of pus. Hot poultices assist in bringing an abscess to a head so that the pus can break out or the abscess be punctured.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Question: L. B. writes: "I am working in a large office and forced to sit where electric fans are constantly blowing on me. I have had many colds and think that the fans have something to do with it. What do you think about it?"

Answer: In the best ventilating system nowadays the fans are placed in the walls of the building, and fan outward so that the foul air is sucked from the room and borne out into the open air. This makes less draft and is much more effective. Ventilation by fans blowing into the room is very expensive and unsatisfactory. Undoubtedly the strong currents of air, blowing upon the heads and necks of workers make them more subject to colds and earaches and consequently give them more sick days. To avoid colds eat less, exercise more, and in your own case try to sit where the fans do not blow upon you.

Use of Butter, Salt and Salad Dressing.

Question: Mrs. E. R. writes: "I am on your diet for constipation and would like to know whether butter should be used on Melba toast, and whether butter and salt are correct for the vegetables. If salad dressing is used on the salads, what kind?"

Answer: It is all right to use butter on Melba toast, also on vegetables, and it is all right to use salt on the vegetables if they have not been cooked properly. With proper cooking, very little salt is needed. I have a special article on salad dressings, which I will be glad to send you if you will enclose a large self-addressed stamped envelope with your request.

Worry.

Question: Mrs. L. K. asks: "How can you cure worry?"

Answer: By getting rid of any bodily toxins which may be irritating the nervous system, and then by studying mental science in order to learn how to better adjust your mental processes.

Dr. McCoy will gladly answer personal questions on health and diet, addressed to him, care of this paper. Enclose stamped, addressed, large envelope for reply.

STRANGE AS IT SEEMS by John Hix

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY WE FORGIVE AND FORGET

By Mehran Kl Thomson, Ph.D.

(Author, The Springs of Human Action.)

There is a lot more fun in eating ice cream than in thinking about eating it.

The feeling accompanying the eating of a dish of ice cream is much more pleasant than is the feeling accompanying the thinking about a dish of ice cream you ate last summer. Any original sensory experience—such as seeing a red apple, hearing jazz music, gripping a cold clammy object, eating fried chicken, etc.—is much more vivid and intense than the memory or thought of that experience. The reason for this is that every sense organ has a special mechanism for carrying the impressions to the brain or consciousness. The feeling accompaniment is correspondingly strong. Whereas a sensory experience recalled in memory arouses only mild reactions in the sense organs involved and hence also arouses a weaker feeling accompaniment.

Try to recall any of the above experiences and you will see that there is something lacking in the mental imagery. The latter is less vivid, less colorful, less distinct. While you are trying to recall one phase, another recedes into the background. The mind can hold vividly to only one phase at a time. But in a real first-hand experience the stimulus from the outside keeps flooding the centers of consciousness and the impression is therefore strong.

Fortunately it is not only the pleasant feelings that become weak in recall. The unpleasant and painful feelings are also dimmed by time andweakened in recall. Think of your experience in the dentist's chair. It is not nearly so bad now, is it?

Remembering a feeling means reproducing the feeling. But a feeling is never experienced alone. Hence to recall the feeling we must reproduce the exact experience that gave rise to the feeling. And this is next to impossible because of the changed conditions in our mental state since we had the original experience. At best it must necessarily be a very imperfect reproduction.

Time is the great physician and healer because it dissipates the feelings that accompany a humiliating or sad experience by changing and re-arranging the elements of the original experience so that they appear weak and insignificant in recall. This paves the way to forgetfulness and forgiveness.

We forgive because we forget. We forget because feelings are hard to remember.

Why do you do what you do? Ask Dr. Thomson. Write care of this paper, and send stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.

YOUR CHANCE TO WIN A $316.00 ATWATER KENT RADIO For $1.00

What Is "Junior's" Weight and Age

His weight in ounces will be found by adding together ALL the numbers shown in picture puzzle, and his age in months will be found by counting how many crosses there are scattered throughout the picture. All numbers are single figures. That is, it is not intended that two or more are to be taken together, such as 7 and for 72, and so on. Highest number is 9 and lowest 3. Nines have a straight stem and sixes a curved stem. If by overlapping of figures, a cross or a third figure appears to have been formed, the apparent cross or third figure must not be counted. No figures or crosses are represented by faces and head outlines, eyes, eyebrows, ears, nose, mouth, chin or neck.

To make certain no one knows correct answer, parties not connected with contest erased several figures from original drawing before puzzle was printed. A note was made of these figures and placed in a sealed envelope, now under lock and key. When contest closes, numbers erased will be added together and subtracted from original total, making correct answer the sum total of figures appearing in puzzle.

There are positively no trick or hidden figures, the figures and crosses simply being placed closely together and in some places overlapped, instead of in easily counted groups. In this way possibility of ties is greatly reduced.

Every number in puzzle can be plainly seen. If any number is not absolutely clear do not send in your answer without first writing us, as no answer can be changed after we receive it. Extra puzzle forms will be sent FREE on request. This is purely a contest of skill, and the degree of skill and care you use in solving the problem and following the rules will determine prize you will win. The only requirements are those in rules below. Read them carefully now and avoid confusion later.

Note, particularly, there will be nothing further to buy or sell in order to secure prize you win.

Contest starts immediately and closes December 19th. If at all possible, winners will be advised by wire, by Christmas morning, which prizes they have won.

Conneley's School Wins Woman's Institute Prizes For School Fair Points.

REPORTS HEARD.

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 24 (Examiner Staff Correspondence).—In spite of muddy roads and disagreeable weather, there was a good attendance at the regular meeting of the Seymour West Woman's Institute branch on Thursday afternoon. The meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Archie McCulloch on the twelfth concession of Seymour. Mrs. McCulloch with Mrs. Douglas Rutheford; Mrs. James Clarke; Mrs. Cecil McCulloch and Mrs. Thomas Dunham, were the hostesses and served a very enjoyable lunch at the conclusion of the business part of the program.

After the usual opening ceremonial business had been attended to, there was a demonstration in first aid and bandaging given by members of the local branch, who had made a special study of this work. Mrs. James Clarke reported on the doings of the convention held in Belleville, November 15 and 16. Miss McConnell, the other delegate from the Seymour West branch was not present at the meeting, but the report as presented by Mrs. Clarke was readily accepted as complete and highly satisfactory.

There was some discussion regarding the presentation of the prizes to the schools that had won highest honors in the school fair, and it was finally decided to arrange with the teachers and inspector of the schools to have a date set when it would be convenient for the presentation. Conneley's school led the schools of the district in the number of points goined. West's school was second, with Flemming's school in Percy township in third place, and the Trent River school fourth.

When lunch have been served, the meeting closed with the National Anthem.

Downeyville

(Examiner Correspondence.)

DOWNEYVILLE, November 24. — A very successful pie social was held in the parish hall Friday night under the auspices of the C. W. L., and was largely attended. Cards were played by the older people, and there was dancing for those who cared for that enjoyment. An orchestra from Lindsay furnished the music. A dainty lunch was served by the ladies at midnight.

Presentation Made.

A large number of friends gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph O'Neill, just west of the village, to spend an enjoyable evening with them, and for the purpose of making a little presentation before they moved to Toronto.

Gerald O'Neill read an address and a substantial purse was presented to them by Emmet O'Neill.

Mr. and Mrs. O'Neill were taken by surprise, and Mr. O'Neill thanked the people on behalf of himself and Mrs. O'Neill, and said he would always be glad to see them at his home in Toronto, as he always was here.

The evening was spent in dancing and cards and a dainty lunch was served by the ladies, and all joined in singing: "For they are jolly good fellows."

Mr. and Mrs. O'Neill left Thursday for Toronto and will be gretly missed, for they lived all their life here.

Stricken With Terrible Backache

"High-rigger" in very bad way until Gin Pills gave relief

To have kidney trouble, when in the heart of the woods during the wet season, is very serious, as Mr. J. F. Miller found out.

But let him tell the story himself. "In the woods, last fall," he writes, "I was soaked to the skin for days. Cold got me in the back. I was so bad the woods boss wanted to send me to the city for medical treatment. One of the boys advised Gin Pills. In four days I was back on the job. Nearly all the boys," Mr. Miller adds, "carry Gin Pills in their pack."

The truth is kidneys are such hard-working organs they can't stand neglect. Backache is only one sign of trouble. Dizziness, brick dust in urine, swollen joints, headaches, a burning sensation attendant on scanty or too frequent urination are others. At the first indication of trouble, take Gin Pills. Avoid Rheumatism, Sciatica, Lumbago and even more serious ills. 50c. at all druggists. National Drug & Chemical Co. of Canada Limited, Toronto, Canada. 175

Thirty-one Teams Entered in Inter-County Judging Competition.

AT ROYAL FAIR.

J. B. Nelson, local representative of the Department of Agriculture, returned to the city on Thursday, after having accompanied the Peterborough County judging team to the Royal Winter Fair in Toronto. The team, comprising Harold Wilson, of R. R. No. 3, Keene, David Forsythe, of R. R. No. 2, Indian River, and Harold Dunford of R. R. No. 2, Lakefield, entered in the Inter-County judging competitions, and despite the high standards resulting from keener competition than last year, managed to secure 17th place among thirty-two teams. This standing was considered fairly good in view of the fact that they were not able to get in as much practice as some of the others, and that some of the teams from neighboring counties failed to make as good a showing as in 1927.

CHANDLER WINS SILVER TROPHY

Cup for Beauty is Won in Large Field of Contestants.

INTEREST RAN HIGH

"To-day when the average person hears that a Chandler car has won a silver loving cup, the opinion is that it must have taken first laurels in some performance event, because it has been known as a powerful motor car," states Mr. A. Thompson of the Peterborough local Chandler distributing headquarters.

"Of course, the Royal '75' Chandler Sedan in the above photograph can step, but instead of showing its paces on the track, this time it stepped out in front of a large field of contestants and won the cup shown on the fender of the sedan, for being the most beautiful car in its particular price class.

"This car beauty contest was staged during the style show at the Tennessee State Fair, held recently at Nashville and the interest in the contest, which is truly different ran high. Closed cars of practically every representative make in the $1,500 price class were entered, and the verdict of the judges in picking Chandler the winner for beauty, speaks much for the progressive body designing, smart appearance and color harmony of the Royal '75' Eight De Luxe Sedan, with special wire wheel equipment," concludes Mr. Thompson.

Steel-Arch Shoes Repaired

Here is a distinctive feature service in which this modern repair shop also excels. In this new department ladies' shoes are shined the refined and unembarrassing way. Patrons can make themselves comfortable in the ladies' waiting parlor, and remove their shoes, which are then given a dazzling looking-glass polish with electric brushes. Mr. Veneranda also specializes in dyeing all kinds of shoes.

Efficiency and Speed

"The customer be pleased with efficient service at moderate prices and in the shortest possible time," is the policy of this up-to-the-minute shoe repair shop with the green front—and more and more custom comes this way every day.

A Story of Revenged Love, by Ruby M. Ayres

CHAPTER XI.

THE STORY THUS FAR:

GILES CHITTENHAM returns to London from the United States—where he has contracted a secret and unfortunate marriage with SADIE BARROW—to help wind up the affairs of his younger half brother, RODNEY ARDRON, who has recently killed himself for love of the notorious flirt, JULIE FARROW. In Switzerland Giles meets Julie Farrow, through his friend, LOMBARD, and makes love to her with the intention of spurning her in revenge for her treatment of Rodney. But he finds out that she is a cousin of the Julie Farrow whom his brother loved. They love each other—but he tells her the truth—that he is already married. She plunges into a gay, wild life, trying to forget him, and promises to marry SCHOFIELD, a rich, older man. Lombard tells Chittenham that unless he gives him money, he will tell the world of his marriage, and that he and Julie spent a night together at St. Bernard. Chittenham decides to get a divorce from Sadie, and finally gets Julie to admit that she still loves him. At a seance at his mother's house his wife calls out his name in hysteria. When Julie, who has made a friend of Sadie, learns that she is Chittenham's wife, she is angry with him.

Julie was pouring water from the kettle when a knock came on the front door—a heavy knock that sounded both urgent and insistent. Bim perhaps! Julie put the kettle down and flew across the little hall. Bim, dear Bim! Julie felt as if already half her troubles were lifted from her as she drew back the latch—then she gave a little choking cry:

"You!"

"Yes. You must let me come in, Julie," Chittenham said, and without a word Julie stood aside. She was conscious instantly of something different—strange about him—something that killed both the mingled hope and anger that struggled for supremacy in her heart. She felt that if she went to his arms she would be repulsed—that if she showed him bitter scorn it would leave him unmoved—that nothing could touch him. She said confusedly:

"I thought it was Bim. I'll put on a frock. I got wet so I slipped on my dressing-gown."

"It's raining hard still," Chittenham said mechanically. "May I take off my coat?"

Julie stood by while he did so—she had forgotten about changing her gown—she went into the sitting-room where the fire had burned up brightly and Chittenham followed.

"I should have come before only I could not get away," he said. He avoided looking at her—he stood with an elbow on the mantelshelf staring down into the flames.

Julie tried to speak but it was some minutes before she could find her voice.

"I hope she is better."

"No. The doc or had to give her something to quiet her—make her sleep."

"I see." Every word cost Julie a supreme effort. "I suppose she was frightened," she submitted stiltedly. "It was rather nerve-wracking, wasn't it?" She tried to laugh. "I think it was a great mistake—that it was very foolish of us all. Even if that man is genuine, what is the use of it? It's no good trying to find out about supernatural things, is it? Do you think so?" Her voice ran down—she felt as if she had been talking nonsense, but surely anything was better than standing there in silence looking at Chittenham and puzzling over that new strange expression in his eyes.

She was conscious also that he was not listening to her—that he hardly seemed aware of her presence, and cold apprehension pierced the anger and hurt of her heart. What had happened? What more was she to be called upon to bear?

Then Chittenham spoke abruptly. "I had to come—I'm sorry if you are angry with me—but I had to come—just to say goodbye."

He turned and half raised his head looking at Julie. Then suddenly his face changed. It was as if the strangeness were wiped out of it in a single flash, giving place to such a look of unutterable pain that Julie caught her breath in an involuntary cry.

"To say goodbye?"

"Yes." He took a quick step towards her and then stopped. "Sadie is blind," he said.

Julie stared at him, her eyes blank, her lips parted; then after a long moment: "What do you mean?" she whispered.

Chittenham made a little impatient gesture.

"Just that—what I have said, she is blind—apparently she has felt it coming and been dreading it for months. That is why she came from America without telling me; she went to see some German specialist—I don't know yet what he told her, she was too ill and frightened to be very coherent. And then this damned fellow Chryer on top of it all—you heard what he said about someone in the room never seeing the sunshine again. Didn't he speak of blindness—darkness—God knows what! The fellow should be locked up. Sadie took it to herself, of course, and the sudden shock finished it. Perhaps it would have happened anyway—the doctor thinks so, but even he cannot tell. He says she may recover her sight. If she doesn't—"

He stopped abruptly, and Julie said in a shaking voice:

"How awful! How perfectly awful!"

So it was. She felt shocked, stunned and yet it was quite impartially; every other emotion was clouded over, stifled by those first words which Chittenham had spoken to her:

"I had to come, just to say goodbye."

What had he meant by that? Goodbye! How could they ever say goodbye after last night? He had said then that they would never part again. Chittenham went on:

"I had to come at once, to tell you, Julie. You see, it makes all the difference."

"All the difference?"

She could only echo his words foolishly in a parrot cry. "All the difference? What do you mean?"

"Yes." Chittenham avoided looking at her and his voice was stilted, unnatural. "You see, Julie, if—if the worst is to happen, if she is never to see again, I—well, it will be impossible—can't you see? How could I? I mean oh, for God's sake try to understand!"

Then for long moments the silence was unbroken save for the swirling rain at the window. Julie felt as if she were in a dream, or as if someone had bound her body with cords from which it was impossible to free herself. She just stood staring blankly at Chittenham's white face, and again the queer feeling came over her that she was looking at a complete stranger. As if from a great distance she heard the sound of her own voice speaking stupidly.

"Of course it must be frightful to be blind, worse than anything. I can't think of anything worse. Of course it must be frightful to be blind—"

Then she fell once more into a terrified, quivering silence out of which she struggled to say again:

"Perhaps it's all a mistake; perhaps it won't last. I mean, doctors do make mistakes sometimes, don't they? Even the cleverest doctors."

When she stopped speaking Chittenham went on:

"I was sure you would understand what a difference it makes. I was sure you would try to help me, Julie, dear! She hasn't anyone but me, you see. There are some things it's impossible for a man to do when a woman's ill—and frightened. I couldn't leave her—how could I? You see—you wouldn't wish it, would you? It would be like—like trampling a woman down to reach our happiness, a blind woman, too, so defenceless—I—I—"

He broke down hopelessly. What could he say? What excuse or explanation could he offer that would sound plausible or justified?

Julie said nothing. In her mind she was clinging desperately to the thought that perhaps after all it was a mistake, that perhaps tomorrow everything would be all right again. She did not want Sadie to be blind, the thought was horrible; it would be like seeing a butterfly beaten down in the sunshine and crushed by a merciless foot. Sadie was always so bright, so gay! Never to see the light of day any more, never even to see her own pretty, saucy face . . . She dragged herself back from her thoughts to the consciousness that Giles was speaking again.

"There is so much I want to say to you, so many things I want to ask you to forgive me. Even last night, when we were so happy, I hadn't the pluck to tell you the truth about—Sadie! I wish to God I had! Not that it would have made any difference—but it's going to hurt like the devil in the future to remember that I wasn't honest with you. It's not that I didn't love you enough, not that I—you're the only woman I have ever cared for, ever shall care for. I suppose it's to be my punishment that I can't have you, my punishment for that night in Switzerland."

He tried to take her hand but she drew it sharply away. She felt that she could bear anything, be brave over everything, if only he would not touch her. He was right in what he said, of course he was right; Sadie was his wife, and his place was to stand by her. No man could do less, she herself would despise him if he did less, and yet—behind everything a panic-stricken cry was trying to make itself heard in her heart:

"What about me? What about me?"

She kept her eyes downcast, she dared not raise them lest Chittenham should read the tragedy which was written there. Somehow she seemed to suffer more, to be more acutely hurt now than she had been when she and Chittenham had parted in Switzerland. There was more finality about this, more profound sadness. She was no longer passionately hurt or angry; she was stricken into a numbed apathy by this thing which life had done to them. It was as if fate had leaned down to strike at them out of a blue sky, snatching happiness from their very grasp at the eleventh hour. Chittenham would never get his freedom now, it was inhuman to think of it, and back like a surging wave came the bitter thought:

"What about me? What about me?" Then as if in answer to the unspoken cry Chittenham was beside her—so close to her that for a wild moment she thought he must be going to take her in his arms, and her heart almost stood still and then went racing on again so violently that it seemed to be choking her. She looked up desperately, meeting his eyes fixed upon her with such a look of love and longing in them that it was more than she could bear. She put out her hands appealingly.

DRIVING CARE CUTS COSTS.

Drivers who long ago learned that rushing up to the intersection and then having to jam on the brakes, was excessively expensive in car wear are collecting double dividends on their knowledge now. The universal use of four wheel brakes has brought about a situation where the wear on the front tires is just as great as on the rear pair if the brakes are carelessly used. Along with this goes the fact of rapid acceleration and its wear. Tires are better and so are cars, but neither can be abused without cost.

HALLOWE'EN AT NORWOOD.

The stars were shining bright and clear,
The dew came falling down,
With witches, elfs and spooks around,
'Twas Hallowe'en in town.

The elders of our ancient town
Had met within its walls,
The men whom good King George had called
To guard our towers and halls.

They hired the best of Scotland Yard
In dazzling pomp and state,
To keep the youth all in their place
Or wipe them off the slate.

Puffer, Stares and Lennox marched
In uniforms so neat,
While Mason in his master-six
Patrolled the various streets.

At midnight's peal the boys went home,
The force at later hour,
The witches, elfs and spooks awoke,
And decked the streets with towers.

The boys we think were not so bad,
Considering days of yore,
When this same force, with batons drawn
Chivareed from door to door.

When Hallowe'en comes round again,
we'll celebrate once more,
We'll welcome all our boys and girls
With open hearts an ddoors.

Our banquet table we will load,
With dainties good and sweet;
Our Town Hall shall be opened wide,
When we as one shall meet.

No More Indigestion

What a pleasure it is to sit down and eat a good, hearty meal without a premonition that there will be pain and discomfort in the process of digestion.

This pleasure is even greater to one who for years has been subject to chronic indigestion and has finally found a relief from his derangement by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Chronic indigestion usually results from torpid liver and a consequently constipated condition of the bowels. Naturally, there are headaches and biliousness in many cases and much irritability and depressed feelings.

It is so easy to allow this condition to develop that almost before you know it you become a "dyspeptic".

But what a relief when you learn about Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and put them to a test. In a day or two you are feeling fine and soon you realize that you have discovered the most effective regulator of the liver, kidneys and bowels.

About forty local Rebekahs motored to Lindsay on Thursday night to attend the 24th anniversary of Kawartha Rebekah Lodge I.O.O.F. Some of those who went in the afternoon to attend a reception given at the home of Mrs. W. Brown, Russell street, were Mrs. E. Booth, Past President; Mrs. B. Watts Past President; Mrs. J. Londerville, Past Assembly Marshal, Mrs. R. J. Martin, Past Noble Grand; Miss Dolly Brotherston, Vice Grand, and Mrs. F. Mowry, newly elected Vice Grand. In the evening a short business session was held, and Mrs. May Thomas, Mr. F. Thomas, Mrs. Terry, Mrs. T. McMahon and Miss Eva Way, "Charter Members" each received beautiful gifts, and were given seats on the platform. Among those present were Mrs. May Thomas, president of the Rebekah Assembly of Ontario, Mrs. Land of North Bay, Assembly Warden, Miss Violet Pearce, Assembly Secretary, Mrs. Middleton Past President, Mr. Ernie Anderson, Past Grand Master, Mrs. Flack, Assembly Marshal, and Mrs. Mills, D.D.P., of Sudbury district. Visitors were also there from Beaverton, Millbrook and Sarnia. The President and each visiting officer, received a kind remembrance of the occasion. After the meeting a sumptuous banquet was served, decoration being carried out in pink and green. A handsome birthday cake with twenty-four candles on it, graced the table. A social hour brought a delightful evening to a close.

THE MIRROR OF THE MODE

By Mary Marshall.

The flat, round pigskin bag shown at the top has an amber ring to hold it by. The printed velvet bag just below has a jeweled clasp. The evening bag of yellow tulle, shaped like a tiny muff, has a square topaz for a clasp. The envelope purse below this is made of black breitschwantz to match the coat with which it is worn. It is edged with antelope. Below that is an envelope of beige leather and caracul. The automobile-shaped purse designed for a young girl is of brown and tan leather with leather wheels edged with gilt. The little door hides a mirror and powder puff. Below is beige suede purse in the new Chanel shape.

Such a small detail as the top of the clasp on one's handbag may be the subject for much consideration. It may cost more than one's hat and frock put together—this foolish little clasp that is likely not to be noticed anyway. I have seen clasps of this sort made of a single large precious stone—an emerald or a sapphire set with diamonds.

In spite of the taste for high-priced clasps, there is a definite feeling among well-dressed women now that the handbag should be rather inconspicuous.

Extremely large bags that had some vogue a season or so ago are seldom seen.

The color of the bag is usually subordinated to that of the costume. With the black hat and black shoes a black bag always is in good taste. With brown suede shoes which have come into prominence lately, brown suede bags or bags of brown silk are well chosen. Usually it is only the young girl who chooses one of the spectacular sort of bags. The automobile shaped bag shown in the sketch is one of these amusing bags that we may wisely choose as a Christmas present for the girl of fifteen or sixteen.

An interesting imported bag I saw the other day, suitable for afternoon wear, was made of colored woolen yarn knitted in stocking stitch with applique woolen embroidery.

THE WHATNOT

A Place for Little Bits of Everything of Local Interest

By MARION

I AM really delighted with the suggestion made by "Mariana" of a column in which we will print daily extracts from famous writers. I suppose there are few of us who read enough, and read intelligently. I know I'll be one of the first to plead guilty of the fault of spasmodic and unedifying reading!

* * *

On my way home I'll drop into a George or Charlotte street bookstore and pick out some foolish magazine, with stories that repeat in some varied form one of the great plots of the masters.

* * *

And all the time I have on my book shelves, or there are available at the Public Library, the originals in language more refined!

* * *

Of course, there are other stories, stories that are well worth reading, but the generality of cheap magazine does not contain them.

* * *

I will never forget some of the really good novels I have read during the past two or three years—"The Blue Mountains," "Wild Geese," "Grain," and "While Rivers Run," for instance. But how many stories in magazines does one find it worth while recalling?

* * *

And with how many conversational "leads" do these stories provide one? I don't mean that when we sit down at a bridge table we should start talking about books we have read. That is the act of a boor, unless one is in company that particularly appreciates such conversation.

* * *

Reading good stories will liven the mind and jog the wit, so that one's conversation will sparkle and one's talk will become interesting because proceeding from a wide-awake mentality.

* * *

But many of us cannot lay out a course of reading and follow it—how many plans we have all made to read! And how often we have become discouraged on the first lap!

* * *

I have never yet subscribed to one of the courses of reading, through which one imbibes wisdom in a few minutes a day, but I have often enough felt the need of it—as I am sure the neighbors have.

* * *

Here, then, is an excellent substitute, in the idea brought forward by "Mariana," to whom our thanks are due.

* * *

I may not choose the extracts with the wisdom of the compilers of these wonderful reading courses, but my theory is that one can hardly go astray in picking here and there in the great works of the masters of poetry and story writing.

* * *

And then, too, I will expect the neighbors to help me by suggesting extracts that have appealed to them. If I have not the books on my shelves I can probably get them at the Public Library.

* * *

The only limitation is that of space. I cannot possibly crowd in more than a column a day, nor would I wish to. The idea will be to give something good, something interesting, that can be read in a few minutes a day.

* * *

As Mariana" remarked in her letter on Thursday, women can broaden out by reading, and perhaps their lack of breadth in this regard is what gives men whatever superiority they possess.

* * *

Let us all, neighbors, vow to read the extracts every day. Even if we don't like a particular author, or poem, or article, read the extract anyhow. We will at least gain knowledge, likely inspiration, and probably we shall acquire something of real worth to us.

* * *

I plan to start the column on Monday, and hope you will all start with the very first extract. And it would be a good idea to clip every one and paste it in a scrap book. You can make one of an old catalog, or a scribbler is very good.

* * *

And then, write to me and tell me whether the idea is worth while, so that I will know whether to carry on—and send in your suggestions as to what to print.

* * *

And remember what Ralph Waldo Emerson wrote: "Next to the originator of a good sentence is the first quoter of it." Many will read the book before one thinks of quoting a passage."

* * *

After you have read and clipped these extracts, use them; make them your own.

* * *

There are still some Christmas helps left. These four-page booklets, planned and printed in The Examiner office, tell how to make dainty and useful Christmas gifts at home. All the gifts are easily made, and inexpensive—many were suggested by the neighbors.

* * *

The other help this week is for a bunny bag for baby. This is a wonderful comfort to both mother and child in winter; is not difficult to make; and is not expensive.

* * *

Hundreds of women readers are availing themselves of these free weekly helps, and find them useful. I am delighted to be of this service.

* * *

Several Christmas stories have been submitted by neighbors for the special Christmas edition, and are being set in type. If any others have Christmas stories, or are planning to write them, please hurry.

* * *

The first prize is $5; second prize $2.50, and there are several consolation prizes. Then, too, every story used will be paid for at space rates.

* * *

Have you seen the splendid little recipe book prepared by the women of Trinity United Church? It contains recipes for every occasion contributed by many city housekeepers. Bound in an oilcloth cover, it should stand a lot of practical use.

* * *

Which gives me an idea—why not cut a piece of old table oilcloth and paste it on cardboard (I believe a stiff back would be better) to hold the recipes which you clip from our page?

* * *

Every recipe, you know, is worth saving. You may not need one now, and you may not be able to see how you could possibly use it—but some day the need will arise. It's a jolly feeling to know that such an emergency will find you prepared.

* * *

I'll be looking forward to hearing from a lot of the neighbors what they think of the new column, and to receiving many Christmas stories. Use your spare time over the week-end to write.

LITTLE SONGS OF LOVE

BEAUTY FOR GOLD
(Contributed by "?")

My Lady steps into her carriage,
So gay and wondrous fair,
Her round of social calls to make,
Her heart so free from care.

My Lady steps out of her carriage
Into her lighted hall;
Why that sad look upon her face?
She falters—think you will she fall?

Oh, why such a change in my Lady?
Look, there's a tear in her eye;
She had thought Love dead in the long ago
When she cast Him aside like a toy.

Had He not handed her tea and cake
In the home of Mistress Brown;
What, think you, is she to Him now?
Just the 'richest lady in town!'

Just a beautiful bird in a gilded cage,
Her heart is dead and cold;
His eyes, how they scorn her, seeming to say,
"Why sold you your beauty for gold."

Thinking of the annual meeting of the Children's Aid Society, which takes place on Tuesday evening next in the City Council Chambers, one remembers the prominent part played by women in the carrying out of the endeavors of this association, which has to do with helping in every possible way those children who are unable, through the force of circumstance, to help themselves.

Year in and year out, as long as the society endures, the women who form a portion of its Board of Management go every week to sew at the Shelter. They are, in a way, also, the housekeepers of the Shelter, and buy all its supplies, seeing that everything is kept up to a necessary standard. They take an intense personal interest in the children and watch out for their welfare in every way, taking, in this fashion, the place of the mothers who are missing, either through death or through neglect.

There is something very interesting in things made with the hands. One cannot but help admiring the achievements of patient fingers when one looks at pretty bits of artistic endeavor such as were displayed by members of the Women's Art Association during their exhibit this week, in the Conservatory of Music. The hand-painted pictures and china were exceptionally interesting and then there were the other unique and pretty ornaments and novelties that women contrive from odds and ends, like the lamp-standard made from an old mustard jar and decorated with the gesso work that looks like enamel flowers attached to the surface of the article it ornaments. Tiny place-cards representing "Willy Alfalfa" and other legendary characters, were made from pipe-cleaners. Out - of - the - ordinary bridge game accessories were score cards representing gaily dressed ladies, with tall, real feather head-dresses and real beads pasted on their frocks. An exquisite lamp-shade madeof heavy paper owed its charm to the combination of pretty colorings in its makeup. It was a pale Nile green and golden stars shone through its surface. Again, for the bridge-table, were the dainty hand-painted score-books, with detachable covers that would make them capable of easy replacement. The pretty mottled colors that one gets from experiments with batik and tied-and-dyed materials were demonstrated in scarfs and table linens and there was a great deal of interest in the revival of old-time work, such as "grospoint" that resembles Berlin wool work, needle-point and chenille embroidery. One of the most attractive pieces on view was a miniature of a "crystal tree." Originals of this type of work sell up in the hundreds of dollars. It is a tiny tree with a silvered base and silver branches from which depend small, vermilion-hued flowers made of sealing-wax. The pale green leaves are also of wax and the whole effect is exquisite. Tiny boutonnieres made of glass-bead flowers are also colored beautifully and have a striking effect.

And speaking of handicraft, there was a very interesting bit of careful work in the small model of a shepherd's fold exhibited this week at the bazaar of the Women's Guild of All Saints' Church, held in the parish hall. This was made by Marjorie Worboy, a member of the Junior Women's Auxiliary of the church, and was complete. It was done in paper on a sanded base.

* * *

All next week will see a major effort in the line of Christmas bazaars, when members of the Catholic Women's League will supervise the sale to be held in the Market Hall from Monday morning until Friday evening. This bazaar is being held in aid of St. Joseph's Hospital and all the ladies of the three Catholic parishes of the city unite in putting it over, assisted materially by donations and help from ladies of the surrounding district. The Catholic Women's League has many activities, which range from social to charitable, and it has a wide scope of effort in the city and district. Its members throughout Canada run into many thousands and the city has several hundred members. The president is Mrs. John Lynch. The big bazaar, where hot meals are served every noon and also in the evening, will be of the usual type, with decorated booths for the sale of clothing, fancy work, handkerchiefs, dolls, ice cream and candy. There will be a Country Store, a hot dog stand and a fish pond, bingo and other games, a smoking booth and a checking booth.

DISINFECT PHONES

Telephones should be disinfected every few days. Wipe both the ear and the mouthpieces with a cloth wrung out of water with a little disinfectant.

STORING SCREENS

When you remove your screens for the winter, mark each one so you will know exactly which window it fits. Also mend your screens before storing.

PASTRY DOUGH

Always use a knife to mix pastry dough, instead of a spoon. It makes a lighter pie crust.

UNSCHOLARLY STUDIES IN SCHOLARS

Specially Written for Examiner

By "SCHOOLMARM"

I.—LESSLEY.

Yes, that is the way his name is spelled, albeit every other name of similar pronunciation is spelled L-e-s-l-i-e. Unless you have been brought up in an atmosphere of French names, his surname would be equally surprising, as the final 'd' is quite ignored in sounding it.

Nothwithstanding the possibility of Parisian ancestors, this small son of the soil is no fashion plate. On the first and almost the only cold morning this fall he "burst upon my sight" in the following: shirt of a nondescript gray colour, rather open as to neck and rather bepatched as to elbows; loose khaki trousers whose one rear button, caught up by both braces gave them a quite bias tilt and made one wonder just where one could lay hands on a safety pin; high goloshes and long gray socks worn outside the trousers and kept in place by a garter above the knee, thus lending a quite rakish, peg-top effect to the nether limbs.

Though I do not know his I.I., the fact that Lessley is nine and of good average junior third standing, seems to place him safely beyond the normal mark. In spite of the fact that he has a peculiar, little, thin, squeaky voice which runs up into high G at the end of his answer to every question (thus disrupting the sobriety of the classroom), Lessley fairly well upholds the tradition for eloquence of his ancestors by being a good reader; but oh, his writing! 'Tis neither correct, neat, nor legible, and usually, on examination, brings its perpetrator about fifteen marks out of fifty.

But Lessley is all right. I expect good things of him and, when he approached me as a vendor of Christmas seals, fell a willing victim to his commercialism.

PRESERVING PRUNES

"Dear Marion:

I have greatly enjoyed all your useful helps, and have saved most of them for future use and thank you and all contributors very much. I was wondering if any of the readers of these columns could or would furnish me a recipe for preserving prunes, if so I would appreciate it very much. I have always had trouble doing them, as they always were tough. If so it will be a great help.

Sincerely,
M. S. P."

Dietetic Dissertations

(Specially Written for The Examiner.)

XVI—NUTS

"And the sound of dropping nuts is heard
Though all the trees are still."

Nuts are a commonly misunderstood food. Often they are served at the end of a meal as an accessory—almost as an afterthought, while their protein and fat content entitles them to a place in the main course. If they were given their proper place, and due allowance made for the work involved in their metabolism, the digestive disturbances for which they have to assume responsibility might not so frequently occur. But for our dietetic blunders the poor nut is the scapegoat. Served with the salad course, the digestion of nuts is much better taken care of than when served at the end of a heavy meal when the digestive organs have already been taxed almost to capacity.

The composition of nuts is, roughly:
Water: 4—5%.
Protein 15—20%.
Fat: 50—60%.
Carbohydrate: 9—10%.
Cellulose: 1—5%.
Mineral matter: 1%.

Not very much work has been done on their vitamines, but they are known to be poor in Fat Soluble A and nothing is expected as to the anti-scorbutic vitamine. Vitamin B is present in relatively high amounts, especially in almonds, peanuts, walnuts, hickory and Brazil nuts.

Their water content being low, they are a concentrated form of food. One hundred calories is supplied by twelve almonds, twenty-two peanuts, or eight walnuts.

If nuts are used as a protein supply, bulk foods should be used with them.

Thorough mastication is necessary because of the outer coating of cellulose. Cooking or grinding to a fine meal softens this, but peanuts and chestnuts are the only nuts benefited by cooking.

As nuts are often shelled under unsanitary conditions, it is safer to buy them in the shell.

Nuts are not difficult of transportation or storage. They should be kept in a cool, dry, airy place out of reach of pests. Shelled nuts should be kept in covered jars.

WOMEN'S INSTITUTE WEEKLY COLUMN

A goodly thing it is to meet

Where nothing stains the pleasure sweet,
Or dims the radiant light.
No unkind word our lips shall pass,
No envy sour the mind,
But each shall seek the common weal,
The good of all mankind

MILLBROOK

"How to Interest the Community" is a live topic being discussed in a series of meetings in one Women's Institute in this section of the province, and many original, and workable ideas are being garnered for practical activities during the winter months.

The practice, followed by the local Institute, and by others in the province as well, of providing the flowers for the Soldiers' Memorial each summer season, and of purchasing a suitable wreath for the Cenotaph on Armistice Day, are certainly teaching patriotism, and doing a community service, that should, and do, interest the citizens in a worthy manner.

A novel way of honoring its members, when a new baby arrives in an 'Institute home,' is by depositing a dollar in the local bank, thus starting the new citizen with a savings' account, to which the parents may add as each succeeding birthday comes round.

'Hints on roll-calls' brings the following suggested topics from a northern Institute: "How to Remove Stains;" 'Ways of Serving Apples;" "Using Odds to Make Ends;" "Labor Saving Devices in the Home;", "Labor Saving Dodges in Mending."

Topics for regular meetings: "Historical Events in our Community;" 'Prevention of Epidemics, and First Aid," this subject being taken by a trained nurse, a member of the Institute, now married and living in a community where there is no local hospital, and where a trained nurse must be brought in from a neighboring city when her services are required.

WARSAW

It does not seem to be known to all Institute members that literature bearing on almost any subject interesting to Institutes may be obtained from Guelph, Ottawa, or Toronto. By writing to the O.A.C., Guelph, a collection of articles, clippings, or bulletins from the Packet Loan Library may be obtained for two weeks. These are often very useful in preparing papers or meetings, or for one's own information. These packets are classified under definite headings, and will be lent upon request.

A few of the more interesting subjects are:

1. Country Life, Depopulation, Social Life, Home Life, Farm House, Rural Schools, The Community, the Vegetable Garden.
2. Art, Literature and Music, Canadian Art, Music Public Speaking, Debating, Literary Societies.
3. Canada, National Resources, Industries, Women Agriculture, Immigration, Canadian Men or Women of Note, Government.
4. Miscellaneous — Public Health, Child Welfare, Games and Amusements, Entertainments, Sports, Physical Training, Food Values, Diet, Housing, Clothing Roads, Electricity, Water Supply.

Anyone wishing a complete list may have it upon request.

The Department has been at great pains to collect these packets; all they cost for use is the two cents to send request, and the return postage on the packet. Even if not needed in the Institute directly, individual members often want the very infogmation which is given.

Demonstration Lecture Courses may also be obtained on Food Values and Cookery, Home Nursing and First Aid, Serving, Millinery.

Each course consists of ten lessons, and runs continuously for two weeks, excepting Saturday. (In Warsaw some of the instructresses have given lessons in the forenoon as well as in the afternoon, but the Department requires one, two and one-half-hour lesson daily).

An Institute which has taken a course in Food Values, and Cookery may have an advanced course in Nutrition the following year; or the course in Home Nursing and First Aid may be followed by an advanced course in the same subject in two years. It is necessary that a suitable hall, properly lighted and heated, be provided, also materials used in the demonstrations.

There is a nominal fee of 25c. from each member, and this is retained by the Institute to help pay expenses of hall, transportation of instructors and other things.

A minimum of twenty members is required for classes in Home Nursing and First Aid, also Food Values and Cookery, and fifteen for the Sewing and Millinery.

Particulars may be obtained by writing to the Institute Branch, Department of Agriculture, Parliament Buildings, Toronto.

The Department finds that these courses are a source of benefit, consequently it is wise for Institutes to take advantage of these courses. It is rather wonderful the splendid women the Department sends out. Most of them could, did they wish, get far higher salaries, but they prefer to give service for service sake.

Any one who is not an Institute member pays 50c. and the other 25c. makes her an Institute member until the end of the Institute year in May.

MOUNT PLEASANT

At this time of year numerous Women's Institute conventions are being held throughout Ontario. Much of the work of the yearly conventions is the receiving of the reports of standing committees and these show that all branches of the Women's Institute interest in Ontario are active though there are marked divergences in interest.

That unostentatious ficiency which characterizes the activities of the Institutes throughout both Eastern and Western Ontario was manifest at the different conventions held during the past month and a half, presenting most encouraging reports along all lines of activities.

"The reports indicated that while the Institutes are giving due promise to the educational features of the Institute Work, they are meeting community needs by looking well after those who have met with misfortune, are giving a hearty welcome to new-comers, are more and more appreciating the value of community centres by providing community halls, are establishing libraries, are, from year to year showing a more definite and wider knowledge of food requirements, are taking a wider view of educational undertakings and stressing very forcefully the educational opportunities for grown-ups in the Institute. The literature and services available from the Provincial Department of Health, as well as the literature from the Dominion Department of Health, is being judiciously utilized. The part that women play in general farm operations and the part of adding materially to the farm income through special undertakings on the part of the girls and women was stressed.

The growing appreciation of the Institutes as evidenced in its extension to new centres largely through the effort of District Officers. In some cases through the co-operation of leaders in the branches.

An appeal was made to the Institutes to determine the area which the branch was to cover and to work that territory thoroughly. An Institute like a school should see that every person is given an opportunity to take advantage of the literature available, and the privileges afforded. He reminded delegates that it is possible for communities through the co-operation of the individuals to secure through their own efforts the majority of things which they want from a community stand-point and promise was made that if the Institutes put forth an honest effort to provide what they could and to utilize local talent, Government assistance would be available to supplement their best efforts.

The development of the individual and the permancy of undertakings is much more certain where reliance is made on local effort rather than outside assistance. A compliment was paid, at one convention, to the splendid educational results following the efforts of the Institute throughout all sections of the Province, and they are becoming more and more a wholesome social influence, while as community builders and servers they have no superior.

Reference was made to the wonderful development of rural women during the past thirty years. The work done in many branches was told of and suggestions for constructive activity, beginning with a vow to be made by all Women's Institute women that they will never depreciate rural life. Landscape gardening for women, catering to tourists, co-operation with the Horticultural Society, a campaign for cheaper Hydro and greater use of the facilities offered by the universities of Ontario were among the individual and community activities suggested.

Helpful addresses were given at all of the conventions on the various phases of Institute work, telling of the pamphlets available at very little cost which may be used by the branches and of the Institute's possibilities for education, social enjoyment and community betterment and that an attempt be made to reach every woman and girl in the community was urged.

"No thinking woman interested in the future of her country can afford not to be a member of the Women's Institute."

Resolutions brought before the conventions covered details of organization and business.

Those of general interest to the public included one from the Women's Institute of the Muncey Reserve, asking that the government be petitioned to establish a home for aged women. A maternity ward in this or some other suitable building is also desired. The filling in of ditches along the highway, with footpath constructed thereon; the right for Canadian-born to designate themselves as Canadian, and revision of the Dower Act to give a widow a one-third share in all property left by her deceased husband were other matters covered by resolutions.

The discussions following reports and addresses proved full of life.

A brisk interchange of opinions on "Selling an Article by Tickets," brought out the view that "selling tickets was raffling, raffling was gambling, gambling was contrary to the laws of the land and therefore should not be in any way countenanced by the Women's Institutes."

The liberties taken by car drivers in parking in dark places with the lights out and also careless driving were deplored by the members, a resolution being passed to the effect that the provincial government be asked to legislate more strictly on this matter, the Institutes were urged to support temperance to build up a temperance community, and that the Institute make a more careful study of the "League of Nations." Other resolutions, all of which were passed concerned the enforcement of the truant law, the abolishing of cigarette smoking among young people, the provision of compulsory supervision of schools at the noon hour.

These are only a few of the happenings at the various conventions held recently, as space will not permit to go into further details on the splendid work accomplished at the conventions. Ottawa, October 30, 31, Nov. 1; London, November 6, 8; Algoma and St. Joseph Island, October 4th; Emo, September 26, 27; Walkerton and Kingston. The Central Ontario Women's Institute Convention will be held in Hygeia Hall, 40 Elm St., in Toronto, on November 27, 28 and 29, and we hope for a good representation of officers and delegates from our local branches.

CAVAN

In the year 1897 there were three Institutes in the Province of Ontario; in 1928 there were 1100 branches with 40,000 members.

Some twelve years ago England organised Women's Institutes in connection with war service and following the war adapted their programme to the needs of the rural districts. In England, Scotland, Wales and Ireland there are now over 4600 branches, and the organization is fast becoming world wide.

In New Zealand, Australia, South Africa and India the work is becoming well established.

There are Women's Institutes, or organizations corresponding to them, in Belgium, Germany, France, Poland, Finland, Czecho-Slovakia, Sweden, Holland.

The aims and objects are as follows:

"The objects of the Women's Institutes shall be the dissemination of knowledge relating to domestic economy, including household architecture with special attention to home sanitation; a better understanding of the economic and hygienic value of foods, clothing and fuel, and the more scientific care and training of children with a view to raising the general standard of the health and morals of our people; and the consideration of any problem or the carrying on of any line of work, which has for its object the betterment of the home and conditions surrounding community life."

It is possible in the Women's Institue for rural women to greatly add to their efficiency in home-making in its broadest sense, insure a wholesome social life and render effective community service through the co-operation of the entire community.

"Since the Women's Institutes have been organized throughout the country, there has been a higher standard of living, both morally and physically, for the women of our land have been educated through the Women's Institute that prevention is better than cure."

Groups of women in the rural district should no more consider effective effort towards individual advancement, a wholesome social life, and efficient community service without a Women's Institute or similar all-embracing local organization, than they would think of trying to provide adequate education and training for their children without a school. The Institutes are non-sectarian, non-partisan, and without class distinctions.

The effectiveness of the Institutes has been due in no small measure to their co-operation with the Government, which has in no way interfered with their independence of action and has been of great value in co-ordinating the activities throughout the province and stimulating a more general interest in home building and community service.

Any rural community may organize and become affiliated with the other branches in the district with a minimum of ten members during the first year, and fifteen or more thereafter.

The officers of the district or possibly some nearby branch, will be pleased to assist in organizing. For literature bearing upon the general work of the Institutes and methods of procedure in organizing, apply to the Institutes Branch, Ontario Department of Agriculture, Parliament Buildings, Toronto, 2, Ontario.

MOUNT PLEASANT

Following are a few notes from Miss Emily Grest's address at the Emo Women's Institute convention on the subject of "Eating for Brains and Good Temper."

The work done with the muscles is the chief factor in determining the food requirements of adults. A farm laborer may need twice as much food as a banker. We need food first to yield heat and energy; second to keep the young body growing, to keep the young body in repair and to rebuild body tissues wasted by disease; third to regulate the body processes.

Much mental incapacity, irritability, poverty, crime even, come from wrong eating, lack of fresh air, of rest and of exercise, though the last is rarely a fault of the woman who does her own housework.

She has the advantage however, of personally feeding herself, and her family with such balanced rations that they shall be to a great extent what she would like to see them, straight limbed, fresh complexioned, clear-headed, good tempered. The body-builders in the best form for human use are milk, eggs, cheese, meat, fish, poultry. The cereals or grain foods are excellent too, but need to be supplemented by the dairy products, eggs or flesh foods.

Heat and energy foods come from the sugars, starches and fats—sugars being supplied by syrup, sugar, honey, sweet fruits, preserves, jams, jellies, starches by wheat, corn, rice, oats, barley, rye, tapioca, sago, potatoes, carrots, parsnips.

The regulators are perhaps most neglected of all. Keep that thirty feet of digestive tract which we all possess, clean and in working order. The mysterious vitamines, especially, help us to "get the good of our food," prevent rickets and eye trouble, improve irritable dispositions. They are obtained from the green leaf vegetables, milk and fresh or freshly stewed fruits, Ontario-grown apples, cabbage, spinach, tomatoes are rich in these. Provide for your winter supply of vitamines by storing, canning or drying your garden surplus of vegetables and fruits.

Don't overload your digestive tract with the wheat and energy foods. Remember, Nature, if you eat more than the work done with the muscles expend, stores up the surplus herself in lumps of fat on your body. You are punished for gluttony, unbalanced meals unintelligent eating, by being made to carry around your own burden! Then some sultry or zero day, your heart goes on strike and there you are; or rather, perhaps, where are you?

Go light on meat too. Once a day is enough for almost any work. Too much putrifies in the lower intestines, and then the breath—Pouf! Ever get a whiff of a breath that nearly knocked you down? If it does that to you, imagine what that putrifying meat is doing to the whole body of the owner of the breath. Drink plenty of pure water, beware too white a meal, balance starches and body-builders with green leaf foods, and you'll be both brainy and good-tempered, provided the other sides of your life are equally well-balanced.

MARION'S MAIL

DEAR MARION:

Lately I have been a reader of your page, drawn to it sometime ago on the discussion of "Why men eat downtown" for a start, but lately other similar things have cropped up that I think, (and not being considered a critic by any means), you consider your woman's idea that because lately women have been admitted a freer hold and say in public affairs all that man has done in the past to build this surface of the earth that was given to us in a wild-rugged stage at the beginning to what we have now made of it by sweat of brow and rack of brain, as nothing.

Now, if man hadn't been industrious, energetic, foresighted and willing, you women wouldn't have been able to ride in your cars, live in luxury as you are now doing, or sitting down and reading in the library some ancient book, revising it to suit yourself at the present day speed of things.

You claim the women of the older countries are backward. You have to admit that they are our ancestors, they built the world through their men and it's a good world, but remember man did it. He surely, after all he has done, isn't to be outdone, and now that his work of sweating is over, the weaker body but more nimble brain of women sits in the cushioned chair that they have made possible.

You speak of man gathering odds and ends; now for instance. If man at the beginning hadn't gathered odds and ends would we have had our "Ten Commandments"? No, he gathered every odd and end of the broken stone and so preserved our laws. Our inventors save odds and ends. They may lie dormant for a while but he places them together some day and he has, what we call, an advance in this world. Why—because man saved odds and ends from the beginning of time and always will because it is him, or man, that this world has so been developed. For instance, what skyscraper has woman built; what liftlock; what invention of car, engine machine, or anything can woman lay her hand on and say 'that is the sweat of our brow and worry of our brain'? Now my point is this and my word to man is quit your worry of more development and the future, take advantage of what you have accomplished and not let our women jump in and take all the ease we have now accomplished.

Now, Marion, this is my first letter of this kind. I know it will do no good but it will surely, if the women read it, let them know man is not too busy to see what is being done.

I thank you and remain,

Yours truly,

Thinker."

I don't like you, "Thinker." Just when I get through telling my readers men aren't as bad as they are painted, you come along and prove some of them are worse. I haven't room today to write all I would like to in answer to your letter, but watch the Whatnot column next week and you'll get yours!

Meantime, be specific and tell me what you have added to civilization's progress more than I have—please!

* * *

"Dear Marion:

Just another who appreciates your column very, very much. I think this addition has been a wonderful improvement to The Evening Examiner, and I am sure creates a great deal of interest among the women of our district.

I am enclosing a coupon for household helps. Kindly send me the Christmas gift suggestions and also others marked if possible.

I have enjoyed the different recipes greatly and also have tried some out with good success. I wonder if some good neighbor knows of anything to apply on cistern pipes to keep from freezing during the cold winter weather?

Has anyone tried fixing her mop when the wires which holds the mop cloth give away? Try getting the man of the house to fasten on a new wire in place of the old and your mop handle may last a very long time.

So now wishing you all success, I will close also thanking you in anticipation of the helps to be received.

Sincerely,

Another Neighbor."

Thanks, "Another Neighbor," for your nice thoughts and for the hint about the mop. The helps have been sent you, and I hope you like them.

In regard to the pipes, I have seen asbestos wrapped around pipes in cellars, but I don't know whether it was to keep the heat in or the cold out. Maybe some neighbor will tell us?

"Dear Marion:

I am sending for this week's household help, as I am busy making gifts for Christmas and would like some new ideas. I sent in some of mine and could have sent in more if they could have been illustrated, for instance crochet or tatting, but no doubt you have enough without them and time is short.

I enjoy reading the Whatnot and your mail and in yesterday's paper I saw where "Constant Reader" wished a copy of September 22 Examiner and I happened to still have it. Will send it to you for you to forward if you please. If I had known her name and address I could have sent it directly to her. I know when I wanted that paper you sent me I was real anxious until it came and we must help one another.

Yours sincerely,

Another Friend."

Thanks, friend, very much for your kind offer of the paper for "Constant Reader," but I do not know her address either. Perhaps she will tell us, so that you can do this good turn.

I hope you like the Christmas help. I am so sorry I couldn't illustrate the ideas, especially the one for child's laundry bag, by Mrs. A. A. B., who sent sketches. I think, though, that the directions are so clear everyone will be able to follow them.

Yours is a real neighborly spirit.

P.S.—The paper has just come to hand, so if "Constant Reader" will send her address I will forward it at once.

"Dear Marion:

Enclosed find coupon for all the helps you have. Maybe I'll never use them, but I have a scrap book where I keep all the directions for making nice things. They might come in useful sometime, you know, Marion dear.

I enjoy your page very much especially the letters to you. Don't you think people like Orchid are silly asses? (Please excuse my French). I'm fifteen and I think you should treat a boy like you would your brother until you're about eighteen anyway, don't you?

Doesn't 'Quid Est' write nice letters? I always read her letter first when she writes. I must cut out Primrose's letter and put it in my scrap book too. You see, I put nice verses and little stories in my scrap book, too, Marion dear.

Really, I mustn't take up too much space in your valuable paper. I've been intending to write for ever so long but I'm too lazy.

Best wishes for your success, Mavourneen.

Yours sincerely,

Freckles."

I'll say this for you, "Freckles," when you do write you write a nice letter! Indeed, I think "Mavourneen" must come naturally to you. I am sure you have kissed the Blarney Stone. The men had the advantage of us so long as one had to hang over the parapet of the castle, with someone holding one's ankles, but when I was there I climbed a ladder. Yes, I kissed it!

Your idea of keeping a scrap book is splendid. I find it very interesting, and mine is a real treasure to me now, with all the neighbors' letters in it.

I like your idea about boys, and, if I may whisper it, I think the boys do, too. I'll be watching for your next letter soon.

"Dear Marion:

I am writing for your Christmas gift help for which I thank you in advance. I also wish to thank you for previous helps received.

If you have the Hallowe'en games, please send me one as I neglected sending at the time, and I hear many of the hints are splendid for anytime.

Your page is just splendid and I take great interest in reading every word of it. The Armistice Number was grand and I have tried many of the recipes with wonderful success.

Yours sincerely,

Nellie Bly II."

We're glad to hear from you again, "Nellie Bly 2nd," and I certainly appreciate your nice words.

* * *

"Dear Marion:

It is so kind of you to help us neighbors with our Christmas gift problems. Enclosed you will find the coupon and stamped addressed envelope. The Armistice Number was grand, I am saving it for the children. They will appreciate it when they are older. I hope to be in the Christmas story con test so I'll have to get busy. Should the story be in pen or pencil?

Good luck to you, Marion.

P.S.—Little songs of Love are wonderful. I enjoy Douglas Malloch's "Lyrics of Life" too.

Oriole."

The stories are really better in ink, "Oriole," but I don't mind so long as you write on one side of the paper only. Better hurry!

I'm glad you like our page, and I think your idea of saving the Armistice number for the children is splendid.

"Dear Marion:

I read your page every night and think it very interesting. I am a young girl in my early "teens" and am still going to P.C.I. I am taking matriculation.

Last summer I went with a boy for two months. I liked him very much and in fact, I still do. This boy was all that I could wish a boy to be—courteous, gentle, and with cultivated manners. My slightest wish was his command.

My mother became acquainted with him and approved of him. Then, all of a sudden he left, I do not know why. Then I quit speaking to him. He does not go out with other girls and has made friends with only one boy. He goes to the same school as I do and when I see him, he smiles at me as though waiting for me to speak.

I now realize how very much I like him and would like to win him back. How can I accomplish this without dishonoring my name and without lowering my estimation in his eyes? I know that if I went to him I could easily get him to make up with me, but I am not that type. I could never have the nerve to go after any boy, no matter how much I liked him, because I think it is not the girl's place to do such a thing. Do you? I know that he is not the only pebble on the beach but I cannot forget many of his characteristics. He is a nice looking chap, a couple of years my senior, with blue eyes and fair hair.

Please, Marion, advise me and answer if you will, the questions I have asked. I remain,

Yours truly,

Brown Eyes."

I hate to do it, "Brown Eyes," but I must repeat that I do not profess to give advice on love affairs. I have an old-fashioned idea that if you just wait you will meet your mate.

Your friend seems to be a perfect paragon, if your judgment is correct, but I think "Freckles" has the right idea about boys, whether they have all the virtues or only a few. Honestly, don't you think so?

Marion

"Dear Marion,

I wonder if you have a recipe in that cabinet of yours for an economical mincemeat that I can make for Christmas? I have a recipe, but it calls for ingredients I really can't afford—yet what is Christmas without a mince pie? I hope you can help me out.

Yours truly,

Mrs. O. A."

It just happens, Mrs. O. A., that I have such a recipe, and I know the resulting mincemeat is very good. In fact I like it better than I do some of the richer kinds. Ingredients: 1 pound chopped apples, 3-4 pound currants washed and picked; ½ pound of raisins stoned and quartered; ½ pound finely-chopped suet; ½ pound sugar; 2 ounces chopped candied peel; the juice and grated rind of one lemon; 1 saltspoonful of grated nutmeg. Method: mix all these ingredients well together, and keep in closely-covered jars in a cool dry place until required.

Perhaps some neighbors have other economical recipes?

ENTERTAINING GUESTS

A Series Giving Hints on Arranging Parties.
By LAURA.

THE TENTH ANNIVERSARY

You may have heard a great deal about tin wedding anniversaries in which kettles, pots and pans and other kitchen utensils were used to carry out the idea, but I heard recently of a "Tin Box" party which was held recently in Peterborough. A long counter had been made in the living room, but tables would suffice, if you did not want to place a long counter in the room. On this were set as many tempting looking round red-painted tin boxes (marshmallow tins would make dandy ones if they are painted), as there were guests. Each box apparently contained a holiday assortment of candies done up with bows, lace paper and silver foil, just as the expensive gift boxes are in a candy window.

The boxes were open, with their covers propped behind them and their contents invitingly displayed. The sandwiches were wrapped in silver foil, as chocolates and tied with a red or green bow. Hard boiled, deviled eggs were wrapped in a wisp of waxed paper like a candy egg. A red apple, scooped out, was filled with fruit salad, and wrapped in another square of waxed paper.

Small cakes, iced in red showed through their wrappings like large cream candies. White lace paper showed all around the edges of the box and a red or green ribbon tied the contents in securely with a huge bow on top.

Small card tables were placed around the room at which each couple could sit to eat the lunch when they had successfully chosen the box of their desire for lunch.

Drinks were handed out from two kettles bubbling on a electric plate, in shiny tin cups. Both hot coffee and chocolate was served, and also cold drinks were available for those who cared for them.

When supper was finished, cards were enjoyed for the remainder of the evening, and the winner was solemnly presented with an ordinary flat tin cracker box by the hostess. However, upon being opened they were found to contain the latest novel.

At another tin wedding celebrated, the invitations were sent out wrapped in tin foil, and the guests were received by the bride and bridegroom, the former carrying her bouquet in a tin funnel and the latter wearing a tin horn in his buttonhole.

For refreshments, the coffee was served in tin cups with tin spoons and dainty sandwiches on tin plates. The water was passed in a tin pail using a dipper.

The centerpiece for the table was a large tin cake pan, with an opening in the centre, in which a small fish horn was placed, the cake pan and the fish horn both being filled with flowers. The decorations were absolutely all "Tin." In one archway tin plates were tied together with ribbon, and you can imagine what an effect it would have! Cups could be used for another doorway, and so on. Wire toasters would make very effective frames for photographs on the wall. Souvenirs might be tin spoons and should be passed on a dustpan. The plants might be placed in tin pails and tin cans can be used for bouquets. Tin foil can also be used with which to decorate.

LYRICS OF LIFE

GIVE GOD TIME.

So many times I find myself
Wishing the day would end,
Because some road I find myself
I find is hard to wend.
And yet before that day was through
I often saw the sky turn blue;
The road grew easier to climb
If I would only give it time.

So many times I find myself
In other fields astray
Because I often find myself
A wanderer from God's way.
But God has not been hard on me,
For God has waited patiently;
He knew I yet would turn and climb,
And God has always given me time.

So many times I find myself
Sighing and discontent,
Because the thing I find myself
Is not the thing I meant.
But God has been so patient when
God's patience I so needed then,
I well can wait some joy sublime
A little while, and give God time.

POOR ROADS AND BAD DETOURS ARE GIVEN AS BIG DRAW BACK TO TOURIST TRADE IN DISTRICT

Chamber of Commerce Sends Out Questionnaire To Many Resorts.

FAVORABLE SEASON.

General Demand Is For Some Improvement in Fish Situation.

The value of the tourist industry to Canada is a subject whose many aspects have been written of and discussed throughout the land until Canadians no longer gasp with astonishment when informed of the millions of dollars that pour into or out of the Dominion incidental to the exchange of visitations back and forth across the Canadian-American border— the Atlantic, and indeed, even the Pacific. But while Canadians do travel eastward to the Old Land, westward to the Orient and, in even greater numbers, southward into the neighboring republic, the influx of tourists from the United States is greater by far and the benefits to be derived by Canadians thereby, are correspondingly valuable. Thus the tourist industry has come to be classed along with Agriculture, mining, and manufacturing as the leading industries; and careful study of the conditions which govern its growth becomes increasingly necessary.

Must Study Conditions

Perhaps it has been because the tourist traffic has grown in such rapid manner within the past five years and because of the enthusiasm of American visitors for Canada's natural attractions that Canadians, including residents of Peterborough district have been lulled into thinking of it as an everlastingly enlarging one, peculiarly immune to the slumps to which other great industries are inevitably subject, whether temporarily or permanently. Realization of the folly of this attitude has prompted the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce, co-operating with the Trent Waterway Association, to send out a circular letter to all interested organizations or individuals. The letter icluded six questions, in their range, cognizant of the many conditions which may contribute to or detract from the growth of the industry. The answers received enable The Examiner to speak authoritatively regarding the tourist traftrafic.

The Questionnaire

A wide scope for answers and suggestions was provided in the questionnaire and full advantage of this latitude was taken by the twenty-five persons or organizations who saw fit to reply. The questions were:

1.—Have you enjoyed a satisfactory tourist patronage this season?

2.—If not, what, in your opinion, is the reason for the decrease in patronage?

3.—Has the flishing in your vicinity been (a) good.... (b) fair, (c) poor, (d) good or poor as compared with last year——?

4.—If fish have become quite scare in your immediate vicinity, what, in your opinion, brought this condition about and how would you advise that it be remedied?

5.—What percentage of your tourist patronage is comprised of fishermen?

6.—Give some suggestions as to how the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce might increase the tourist patronage of the Kawartha Lakes?

MORE ... ... MORE

Poor Roads Injurious.

Since charity should start at home, it is well to consider conditions in Peterborough as they prevailed during the past year, and as indicated by answers from the first of two local sources. The tourist patronage was described as "good" but the informant blamed poor roads and detours for any decrease. He declared that the fishing had not been as good as last year and that, in his opinion, it will be necessary to reduce illegal fishing by means of more protection and heavier fines. To this end he advised the Chamber of Commerce to keep after the Government for better protection of fish and game in this district.

Estimating that 75 per cent of his patronage was comprised of fishermen, the other Peterborough informant urged that spring poaching be stopped. He stated that while the fishing had been fair in this district, it was not as good as last year. He answered in the negative, the first question of the questionnaire, "Have you enjoyed a satisfactory tourist season" and blamed parking and traffic regulations, 'no parking and left turn' signs and detours for this state of affairs. He urged the Chamber of Commerce to keep on advertising, insist on good roads and, if possible, to have completed, the Trent canal.

Bobcaygeon Well Patronized.

Four correspondents replied from Bobcaygeon from the tourist village, the first stating that he had enjoyed a fair tourist patronage though the poor condition of the roads and lack of a golf course had been handicaps. He reported that fishing had been about the same as last year but that an insufficient number of game wardens patrolling the waters during the fish spawning season had not helped things any. He estimated that 40 per cent of his patrons were fishermen and suggested the replacing of Pigeon Creek bridge, and a sufficiently large force of competent game wardens as means of improving conditions in the Kawartha Lakes.

Trade Very Satisfactory.

"Very satisfactory" pronounced one of his contemporaries when replying regarding his tourist patronage. The third and fourth agreed affirmatively on the same question. Two of them stated that the fishing had not been quite so good as last year while another thought that it had been about the same. Two of the last three stated that 50 per cent of their patronage had been made up of fishermen while the last of the trio found that only 25 per cent of his visitors had inclined toward the finny tribe for their pleasures. That fishing might be improved, one urged better policing of the waters throughout the entire year, that taking of fish for commercial purposes be prevented and that a joint meeting of interested organizations be held. "Stock the lakes and enforce the law" said another and yet another urged that the waters be kept at the same level during spawning seasons.

More generally speaking, they urged judicious advertising and personal contact, always keeping the Kawartha Lakes in the foreground: more co-operation between the people of the district to offset the routing of so many tourists to Muskoka by Toronto hotels and Toronto peopeople and restocking of the lakes.

Poor Year at Crowe's Landing.

A correspondent from Crowe's Landing who estimated that 25 per cent of his patrons were fishermen, said that he had not noticed as large a patronage as in 1927 and blamed poor fishing, bad roads and unfavorable weather for the decrease in tourist business. He urged the taking of parent bass from inaccessible lakes, in autumn, and placing them in nearby lakes to propogate in the Springtime.

Another correspondent from the same place believed that the tourist patronage had been satisfactory in the month of August only and blamed everything from the presidential election to a cold summer and poor fishing, the last named being worse than last year. This was due to slaughter of fish in the spawning season. Since, he believed, that seventy-five per cent of the tourist patronage was comprised of fishermen. He urged more rigid policing of the waters, a size limit on lunge and the establishment of fish hatcheries.

Room For Improvement.

At Burleigh Falls the patronage by tourists was only fair this year, with many of the visitors leaving earlier because of the poorer fishing than in former years. Practically everyone of them had come in search of good fishing, but the changing of the water levels had left spawn high and dry. The Government should put in hatcheries, in the opinion of one interested party, while another believed in restocking from the back lakes, where, he claimed, fish are starving. If the lowering of the water levels could be prevented and small-mouth black bass obtained, there would be a decided improvement.

Fenelon Falls Happy.

The village of Fenelon Falls, situated on the Fenelon River between Sturgeon and Cameron Lakes, north of Lindsay, and north-west of Bobcaygeon, was happy in the best tourist patronage that it has ever enjoyed, with fishing best in three years. Fifty per cent. of that tourist patronage were interested in fishing. The writer urged a continuance of protection for the fish, and educating the public to value the natural attractions. He commended the Chamber of Commerce and credited them with increasing the tourist traffic.

Other Places Satisfied.

Hall's Bridge enjoyed a satisfactory tourist season, with most of the visitors being fishermen. The fishing was better than last year, and by re-stocking the lakes this state of affairs will be obtained, according to the writer from that place.

The writer from Hastings also agreed that that place had enjoyed a good tourist year, with good fishing greeting ninety per cent. of the tourists. He believed that continued restocking of the waters, if not with bass and lunge, then with pickerel, would be worth while. The first two classes of fish mentioned had been rather scarce.

Kawartha Park.

Two correspondents from Kawartha Park whose estimates were that from 20 to 25 per cent. of their fairly good tourist patronage this year were composed of fishermen, were strongly in favor of re-stocking of the lakes. At present, they believed there are too many fishermen for the small supply of fish. The level of the lakes should be maintained and illegal taking of fish prevented.

Improve Fishing

"Anything that can be done to help the increase of fish and game will help the situation and add to the tourist trade," writes one man from Lindsay; also reporting a satisfactory tourist patronage of which 50 per cent were seeking good fishing. For this reason, the writer urged consistent policing of the waters during spawning season. Fishing was fairly good during the past season near Lindsay.

Up around Loon Lake fishing was pronounced excellent with 60 per cent of the visitors looking for good fishing. The chief deterent to an even better season was poor roads, and improvement of this condition was recommended in a letter from a resident of that locality.

Maintain Water Levels

One writer at McCraoken's Landing noted a decided falling off, while a second stated that the tourist patronage in that district during the past year had been generally satisfactory, the pessimistic one going so far as to stated the regular guests, the fishermen, were losing interest because of poor fishing. Since both writers estimated that 75 per cent of the tourists were looking for good fishing, this appeared to be a serious problem.

The reason for poor fishing was voiced in one of the letters which read in part: Many times the number of fish caught annually, are lost in the destruction of spawn by failure of authorities to maintain even water levels during the spawning period. The water is dropped from eighteen inches to two feet during this period, leaving spawn high and dry.

Increase at Midland

An increase of 25 per cent in the tourist patronage of the town of Midland was noted during the past season, with fishing better than in 1927. Ninety-five out of every hundred tourists were seeking good fishing and the destruction of coarse fish, such as carp, which destroy game fish spawn, would increase their chances of finding what they want in the vicinity of Midland. As a means of increasing the tourist traffic, the Midland writer emphasized the value of advertising and suggested the decorating of a bridge with cut flowers so that tourists might stop to admire —and to encounter a sign, hung in the middle of the bridge, setting forth the attractions of the locality.

Good Fishing Imperative.

Mount Julian writers disagreed as to the satisfactory patronage of their district — tourists this summer One said "yes," the other siad "no." They were nearer to unanimity regarding the poorer fishing than last year, which one declared to be due to the lakes becoming fished out and the other to a short season and bad weather. The writer who urged that something be done about the fishing estimated that three-fifths of his visitors were looking for good fishing, while the other did not suggest a remedy. He believed that 90 per cent. of the tourists wanted good fishing.

Have Six Good Funerals.

Very poor fishing, worse than in 1927, proved a disappointment to 100 per cent. of the unsatisfactorily small number of tourists at Oak Orchard. "Improve the fishing and have about six good funerals," was the recommendation of the rather disgusted scribe.

At Port Stanton, however, the tourist trade was decidedly satisfactory, though the fishing was poorer. Only 50 per cent. of the visitors had tendencies toward the pursuits of Isaac Walton and for their benefit the restocking of the waters with parent fish was recommended.

Trent River, Hastings.

Though the fishing was poor, the tourist patronage at Trent River and Hastings was satisfactory to one writer, who advised that pickerel spawn be put in the waters between Trent River and Rice Lake and urged the size limit on fish taken, be enforced.

life. I thought a man in his position would certainly be careful enough to avoid trouble."

Came to Trial

The charges against the couple finally came to trial. One continuance after another was taken because of Jacobson's insistence upon a jury trial. Eventually a jury heard damning evidence from all sides, and only the councilman's own denying voice lifted in his defense. The jury disagreed and subsequently the charges were dropped.

Now out of a clear sky has come Mrs. Grimes' confession, the real story of what actually happened.

For her part in the plot Mrs. Grimes says she received three payments of $250 each and $100 monthly for the next year, then was given $100 and told she would receive no more. She went to see Marco, then in jail, and he gave her $40, but told her she had been paid all she would get.

Then came her confession, a story that she repeated in all its details before the grand jury and in which she named every person she says was a party to the conspiracy.

As for Jacobson: "I always felt that Mrs. Grimes was the tool of others and that some time she would make a confessoin revealing the truth."

Oddly enough, he is anxious that all of the conspirators be punished with the exception of the one who made the trap laid for him successful.

romance claimed him, say his friends.

In death he bequeathed to her the income from one-third of his $10,000,000 estate. He paid that debt with money. Crude, perhaps, but money is a gambler's all.

There is Inez Norton, the beautiful blond girl of 25 whom Rothstein wooed for the last year and whom he probably would have wed, with his wife's consent, had not death interfered. Rothstein paid his debt to her, too. His will leaves her the income from one-sixth of his entire estate for ten years. She and Mrs. Rothstein both mourn the famous gambler; both are ill with grief; both share his estate; both understood him.

IN POLICE COURT

There was no session of the Police Court this morning. On Friday afternoon, Magistrate O. A. Langley held court in Norwood where thirteen boys, all over sixteen years of age, were scheduled to appear. The charges were dismissed, however, on payment of the constable's costs and the boys were given some salutary advice by Magistrate Langley.

WORKMAN INJURED IN MACHINE SHOP

Harry Griffiths Falls Across Large Gear Bruising Hip.

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 24 (Examiner Staff Correspondence).—As the result of injuries received when he was engaged at the Quinlan and Robertson machine shop, Thursday afternoon, Harry Griffith is confined to his bed. After careful medical examination, his injuries are not considered as serious as they at first appeared to be, and he is resting comfortably.

It appears that Griffith was engaged in loading some machinery on a truck or wagon and that in some way he was jolted off the platform and fell across a large gear. This bruised his left hip and turned him partly over, so that he fell to the ground on his right shoulder. At first it was believed that his hip was broken and perhaps some of his ribs. Later, it was found that there were no bones broken but that his body was severely bruised. In some places, the skin was badly lacerated. For several hours after the accident, Griffith was suffering intensely from shock, but his conditions is at present considered greatly improved.

WHEN YOUR BABY CATCHES A COLD

In spite of all precautions little ones will take colds—especially during the changeable days of our Fall season. When the first symptoms appear—sneezing, redness of the eyes, running nose—Baby's Own Tablets should be given at once. They will rapidly break up the cold and prevent more serious complications.

Mothers who keep a box of Baby's Own Tablets in the home always feel safe. In fact, they are like having a doctor in the house. They are a gentle but thorough laxative that sweeten the stomach and regulate the bowels, thus driving out constipation and indigestion and relieving the baby of the many childhood ailments which are the direct result of a clogged condition of the bowels or sour stomach. They are absolutely safe—being guaranteed to contain no drug at all harmful to even the youngest babe. They cannot possibly do harm—they always do good.

Baby's Own Tablets are sold by all medicine dealers or will be sent by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

SIMPLE TRICKS IN MAGIC

by JACK MULHALL

—Red and Black. Red ten replaced by spectator in the midst of the black cards.

Separate the cards in a deck so that all the red and all the black cards are together. Ask someone to select a card from the deck, being careful to spread out only—say—the half that is all red. After the spectator has examined his card ask him to replace it and this time spread open the deck so that the back section is available and among these he places his red card. Now, under pretence of looking for a card, you easily find it, since it is the only red card among the blacks.

Do not at once announce your discovery. Shuffle the deck, keeping the selected card on top. This you will find easy enough to manage.

Put this card on floor face down. Take another card and also place it face down about a foot from the other. Ask the one who chose card to stand up and put a foot on each card. The one under his right foot should be the one he selected. Ask him to raise one foot when you count three. Nine times out of ten he will raise the right foot and you say: "That, then, is your card," and show it. If he lifts the left foot, say "Ah, you want to keep the other card, so it must be yours." Then you exhibit it.

ARMY TO CELEBRATE ADHERENTS SUNDAY

Special Quartette Is Coming From Toronto For To-morrow's Services.

A new departure in the way of creating fresh interest and cementing a stronger spirit of comradeship, is the "Adherents' Sunday," being set in motion to-morrow at the local Salvation Army Temple. These services will be conducted by an old time, never-grow-old quartette from Toronto, namely Envoys D. Shankland, E. Weaver, T. and Mrs. Bateman. They are all connected with the Temple Corps, Toronto. Envoy D. Shankland was one of Toronto's first converts to the Salvation Army. In the early summer of 1822, before there were any Salvation Army officers in Canada, four or five converts from the Old Land commenced operations, conducting meetings, and during one of these services, the Envoy responded to the great call, and eventually was enrolled as a soldier. Envoy Shankland was in Peterborough during the winter of 1886 when Captain and Mrs. Williamson had charge of the local corps. Envoy Weaver is one of the early day warriors of the Army and has done considerable supply work. Envoys T. and Mrs. Bateman hail originally from Bristol, England. They were members of the noted Bristol Divisional Songsters, under the eladership of that well-known Army figure, A. Yabsley.

Roll Will Be Read

The Adherents' roll will be read during the services, and certificates presented to the new members. In each service during the day an adherent has been asked to speak. For the beenfit of those who are not quite clear as to what are adherents of the Salvation Army means, Ensign Green states that they represent a body of people who consider the Salvation Army their place of worship, although at present do not see their way clear to sign the Articles of War, thereby becoming soldiers of the Salvation Army. At the same time they are entitled to many of the services granted the soldiers, such as the rites of dedication, Marriage and burial.

A service will also be conducted by Mrs. Ensign Green at the Brownton Salvation Army Temple on Chamberlain street at 7 p.m. to-morrow evening. The Young People's Band under the leadership of Band-leader G. H. Young, assisting.

On Monday night, at 8 p.m., Envoy Shankland will give a very interesting talk entitled "Come With Us," which will include some of his early day Army experiences. The Young People's Singing Company, under the baton of Sister Ethel Payton, will render some very pleasing vocal selections.

RHEUMATIC VICTIMS.

Can Find Relief Through Building Up the Blood.

Pain is the symptom of rheumatism that every victim recognizes, and he generally attributes the trouble to cold, damp or changeable weather. But doctors know that thin blood is a marked characteristic of the trouble. Trying to cure rheumatism while the blood remains thin and poor, is an impossible task because there is nothing to build on. A tonic like Dr. Williams' Pink Pills that enriches the blood and frees it from poisonous impurities soon banishes rheumatism from the system. So long as the blood is maintained in a healthy condition the trouble will not return. This is not theory. It has been proved in hundreds of cases; here is one:—Mr. J. W. Rose, R.R. 2, Albany, P.E.I., says:—"For some years I was a great sufferer from rheumatism and although I tried a great many remedies, I did not get any permanent relief until after I took Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. The trouble was located mostly in my shoulders, and at times was so bad that my right arm was almost useless. Of course I suffered much pain and great inconvenience. My attention was directed to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through an advertisement in our newspaper, and I decided to try them I took the pills according to directions with the result that the rheumatism has left me, and I have never had a twinge of it since. If this meets the eyes of any rheumatic sufferer my advice is try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills at once."

You can get these pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

WEEKLY TRADE REPORT

WINNIPEG, Man., Nov. 24 (Canadian Press).—The weekly trade report of the Canadian Credit Men's Trust Association, Limited, for the week ending November 24, 1928, is as follows:

Halifax: A fair volume is reported by the wholesale trade generally. Retail trade good. Collections improving.

Saint John: Wholesale trade is reported fairly good. Retail trade good. Collections only fair.

Quebec City: Wholesale groceries are reported good, although travellers are being hindered somewhat by snow in some parts of the province. Boots and shoes good. Dry goods fair. Retail trade normal and showing an improvement over last week.

Montreal: A decidedly busy week is reported by wholesale groceries; dry goods very quiet; boots and shoes very fair, but volume slightly below that of last week; ladies' wear maintains satisfactory volume; clothing show an increase over last week's sales. Hardware continues busy. Retail trade, both city and country, busy. Collections, wholesale, continue good; retail very fair. The port of Montreal has been very busy. Considerable building is in progress, both in residential and commercial structures. Very little unemployment is in evidence.

Toronto: Wholesalers report business good, particularly in sorting orders. Retailers report an improvement in seasonable lines. Collections are very fair.

Winnipeg: Manufacturing continues active. A good volume is reported in wholesale groceries; dry goods very fair; boots and shoes and rubbers fair; ladies' wear and clothing satisfactory. Hardware and builders' supplies good. Retail trade fair. Good progress is being made in buildings, both in residential and business districts, due to the fine weather and very little unemployment is evident. The exceptionally fine weather prevailing for this period of the year has had a tendency to retard the retail trade, particularly in heavier wearing apparel and winter merchandise, and a fall of snow with a cold snap would assist shopkeepers handling this class of merchandise.

Regina: Wholesale groceries and dry goods, and boots and shoes and hardware very good Retail trade is fair to good. Collections very fair.

Saskatoon: A fair volume is reported by wholesalers dealing in groceries and dry goods Boots and shoes good; hardware very good for this time of the year. Fruit and confectionery good. Retail trade in the city is rather quiet; country fair. Collections are fair to good.

Collections continue to be quite disappointing from some districts, where a large amount of grain is still in farmers' hands, retail merchants having a hard time to get in their outstandings.

Edmonton: Wholesalers generally report satisfactory volume of business. Seasonable lines continue slow. Retail trade picking up. Collections fair.

Vancouver: Manufacturing continues satisfactory. A good volume is reported in hardware, groceries, dry goods, gent's furnishings, and ladies' wear. Boots and shoes fair. Retail trade. both city and country, continues satisfactory. Collections generally fair and improving.

MILLIONAIRES WIN THEIR FIRST GAME--3-2

TORONTO CANPRO TEAM PLAY FAST HOCKEY TO DEFEAT FALLS

Invaders Lead Play From Start To Take 3-2 Victory.

"STEVE" RICE STARS.

Millionaires Show Great Reversal of Form Over Previous Games.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Nov. 24.—Niagara Falls Cataracts were defeated, 3 to 2, by the Toronto Millionaires in last night's local Canadian League fixture in the best game witnessed here this season. Led by "Steve" Rice, the invaders set a terrific pace from gong to gong, and the victory was well earned, the Cataracts matching their fast pace in the final stanza only. The Millionaires scored the only goal of the first period, and finished the second stanza with a 2 to 0 advantage. The Falls scored early in the third period and then evened the count, but the visitors collected the odd goal and successfully protected their advantage until the end.

The Millionaires showed a great reversal of form over their showing at Toronto on Thursday night against Detroit. In fact they were about the shiftiest and speediest bunch of exponents to invade the Falls camp to date. For the first two periods they had a big advantage over the locals who were unable to get in for close attempts until late in the second period, and even then the Falls puck-carrier was generally reached in the nick of time.

Rice was the outstanding star by a big margin. He was the pivot of many brilliant attacks, using excellent judgment at all times. His ever-effective hook check was a big asset to his team's offensive. Ronny Martin, Doraty, G. Clark and Don Cameron were effective front-line performers for the visitors, while the defense held up in fine style and made the Falls snipers send most of their offerings from long range.

Star for Falls

Sam Godin, "Butch" Kelterbourne and Wilf McLeod were the best performers for the Falls. Farrell, in goal, made some phenomenal saves, despite the fact that one Millionaire marker was scored from near the centre area. The Falls defense were rather open for the most part, and, the visitors were often in for close calls.

Referee Marsh caused some delay in getting the game started when he examined the goal-pads and found both Farrell and Fisher wearing their shin upholstering over the specified width.

Beaudry, who replaced Farrell in the third period when the latter was forced to retire after a collision with Rice, made a bunch of clever stops of what looked like some Toronto scores. He shapes up as good as the best in the loop.

Play was even on the start, but the Millionaires soon took the lead. The lone marker of the stanza came after 15 minutes' play, when Martin netted a rebound after Farrell had made a clever save.

The Millionaires got a good break in the first minute of second-period play, when Young shot one from the centre side of the blue line that beat Farrell. This was the only goal of the period, though both goalers, especially Farrell, made some good saves.

Fight to Last

The Falls rushed things strongly in the third period, and had a good even break on the play. Godin scored the first Falls goal in 30 seconds, taking Kelterbcurne's pass for a perfect opening. Midway the equalizing counter came from the stick of Quesnell, who took Godin's pass for the shot. Three minutes later Gauthier grabbed a rebound and scored the Millionaire's winning goal.

Toronto—Goal, Fisher; defense, Young and Green; centre, Rice; right wing, Martin; left wing, Gauthier; subs, Doraty, G. Clark, Wedgewood and Don Cameron.

Referee—Lou Marsh, Toronto.

UPPER COLLEGE WINS 2-1 TILT

Norham Juniors Eliminate Bowmanville From Sportsmen's Series.

CLOSE GAMES.

TORONTO, November 24. — Single scores decided two more of the Junior S.P.A. eliminations at the Arena Gardens last night, Upper Canada College getting the extra goal in a 2 to 1 score with Oakville, while Markham had the one point majority in the 3 to 2 count with Bowmanville. Both games were as close as the scores, while the battle between Oakville and U.C.C. was one of the best games played to date in the pre-season series, the students getting the winning score in the last minute of play. What Bowmanville and Markham lacked in ability and condition they more than made up with wild aggressiveness which completed an enjoyable evening of junior hockey.

Oakville and Upper Canada gave a mid-season exhibition and the battle was close from gong to gong. The students had the edge in condition, which was the deciding factor, as they finished much stronger, while the Oakville lads lagged in the closing period. On the showing of the three other teams in the Preparatory Schools group of the O.H.A. Upper Canada has a good chance, for in the miniature Jack May at centre ice, they have a great play maker, while Skin Dewar is a power on the defence with a punch on the offensive. Oakville had double trouble checking the shifty May, and the charges of Dewar, and it was their plays that scored the U.C.C. goals and humbled the Lake Shore team.

CARDINAL COACH TO ASSIST BEARS

Jack Onslow Signs To Help This Speaker at Newark.

PITTSBURG, November 23. — Jack Onslow, St. Louis National league baseball coach, and a former Pirate coach, said here yesterday he had accepted terms to become assistant to Tris Speaker in the management of the Newark Internationals. Onslow was said to have requested his release from the Cardinals when he learned that Bill McKeechnie had been displaced as manager.

Onslow said he had an offer to coach for Walter Johnson at Washington but that he had received the Newark bid first.

Onslow, discussing baseball in general, said he had learned that Eddie Collins was to manage the Baltimore Internationals next season.

Young Griffo fought sixteen battles and earned $30,000 in the year 1895.

Inside Sportin' Dope—By A. Wise Cracker

Mister Sporting Editor:

A bird what don't like football, Mac, for the same reason I don't like caviar, because I ain't never had none, sez to me the other day that this here P.C.I. football team has been getting too much publicity. And he wanted to know why. Well, in the 1st place, they're the only Peterborough team in any line of sport that has been moving a wheel recently. 2nd, because they're the 1st local team to bring any kind of a football title here in a coon's age. And (3) because they're the gamest bunch of fighting fools that ever wore any kind of a Peterborough tunic. And that goes as she lays, Mac. This gang of lightweights, when they started practising this fall, looked just like the street railway tracks—they apparently wasn't going no place. They was too light to have a chance, the wise guys all said. And what have they did? Well, in 8 starts they win 7 games, only allowed the enemy to score 14 points, win their own group in the Central Interscholastic, beat the other group winners, and take the Neal Cup. They was not only out-weighed by every team they met, but in the playoffs they had to battle in the mud. Whatever happens to them in the clash with U.T.S., Mac, these kids has earned all the applause they been getting, and any other team in any line of sport that shows as much fighting spirit can count on the same from yours truly and The Examiner boys generally. Give me the lads that fight to the last ditch and out to the last gasp and you can have all the rest, Mac.

That was good news from the Central Ont. baseball meeting at Deloro Sat. The dropping of the Kingston Ponies was just about as welcome to the Petes as the announcement of the arrival here of a couple of .400 hitting outfielders would be. They ain't got nothing against Mister Joe Daley and his men personally. Mister Daley crabs in a ball game, but who doesn't? And the Petes always got a kick outa hearing the Kingston pilot rave, but they don't like the Kingston grounds, nor the Kingston fans, nor that long trip to Kingston, and already they're taking more interest in baseball, knowing that the circuit next summer will be a 4-team one.

And by the way, Mac, this Central loop is going to be stronger than ever next season, and you remember the league winners copped the Ontario honors this last summer. The hot-stove league dope shows the teams strengthening their fences, ready for the 24th May. From Deloro comes reports of a crack college football player as a catcher, which causes Mister Jeff Hardill to wise-crack that he can't kick no field goals from behind the home plate. Also, some more reinforcements for the Smelters, including a pitcher of sorts. Belleville advices is that Mister Walter Gerow has been seeing a lot of the country, and that may have something to do with the reports that new faces will be mingled with the familiar old ones on the Belleville lineup next season. Likely another pitcher to share the burden with Mister Hoot Gibson anyway. Oshawa for last season collected a whole barrel of new players, but failed to get a star outa the assortment, so a little bird sez as how some of the Walkerville Chicks has felt a irresistible urge to make motor cars in Oshawa next summer.

The league done itself proud in making Mister Bob Elliott, of Deloro, president. Mister Elliott has done a lot for baseball down this way, and he can always see the other fellow's side of the argument. He is a red-hot ball enthusiast, a worker, and a level-headed sorta cuss who ought to keep the Central loop outa jams and working smoothly all season.

Well, Mac, they ain't nothing to report re local hockey. The boys is doing physical torture 2 or 3 times a week, getting ready for the ice, and until old Jack Frost sez he's here to stay, they won't be much doing locally.

The pros is at it merrily, but the early games ain't showed enough to get much of a line on anybody. The Toronto Leaves kinda surprised everybody by copping them 1st 2 games, their 2nd win being over the Canadiens, but then Mister Connie Smythe's lads took a real lacing in Ottawa, so you can't prove nothing by what they've did yet. It'll take a month's going to sort out the teams and get some kinda idea about the likely winners. Meanwhile the promoters is singing, "There's a Rainbow Round My Shoulders," as they watch the customers fighting to get in. Pro hockey is on the map to stay, old-timer, and they is going to be soft pickings for a lotta Canadian boys. The wise parent is going to let his offspring learn to play hockey. It's going to be a gold mine for the experts in the game.

Well, Mac, we'd better call it a day now and leave room for something else.

Sportfully yours,
A. WISE CRACKER.

CHAMPION DIVER AT Y.W.C.A. SWIM

Mary Kingsbury Captures Hamilton Trophy For Junior Diving Championship.

KEEN COMPETITION.

For the second consecutive season, the Morrow silver cup, a trophy presented to the girls' senior champion diver of the city, was won last evening at the Y.W.C.A. swimming exhibition, by Miss Viola Harvey. This cup, which went the first year to Miss Eleanor Hiland, and the second and third years to Miss Mary Dunlop, was won last year and again last night by Miss Harvey.

Second place in the senior tests was won by Miss Jean Harvey and the third place was tied by Miss Mary Brooks and Miss Hazel Bradley.

The Hamilton trophy for the junior diving championship was won last night by Mary Kingsbury, with Marion Harvey and Margaret Curry in second and third place. This cup was won last year by Marion Harvey.

The third large silver cup, given by the Hon. G. N. Gordon, K.C., to the Y.W.C.A. junior life-saving champion, was won by Marion Harvey, with Ruby Milburn and Elsie Lemmon in second and third places, respectively. Sadie Levine, Jean Harvey and Verna Huffman were former possessors of this trophy.

Babies' Swimming Cup

The tiny silver cup, given by Mrs. O'Conor-Fenton as a special babies' swimming cup for competitors under seven years of age, went for the second time in succession, to little Marjorie Boyle, small daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Boyle. This little cup was first won by Mary Kingsbury, then by Betty Manning, and last year and again this season, by Marjorie Boyle.

The contests last night were as interesting as always and brought out a large crowd of people who manifested the utmost enthusiasm over the prowess of the swimmers, ranging from tiny tots to those of maturer years. The program was entertaining in the extreme and included a number of fun-making specialties as well as the more serious efforts of the girls.

The swimmers, one and all, demonstrated a large measure of intense concentration in their work, and they went through the various tests and stunts in an exhibition that showed the fine training they receive from the hands of Miss C. Littlefield, the swimming director at the Y.W.C.A. Speed in the water, poise and dexterity and skill, with a quality of quick thinking that is admirable in such competitions, were all exhibited by the swimmers, along with a manifest enjoyment of their work that added much to its interest.

G. A. Gillespie acted as a very popular chairman and opened the program by remarking on the value to the community of such institutions as the Y.W.C.A. and Y.M.C.A., characterizing them as manufacturing plants which were turning out the men and women of tomorrow and training them in good citizenship.

Capable Judges

Judges of the events were Rev. J. D. Paterson, G. H. Roper, and Dr. J. J. Craig, assisted by Mrs. Gerald Wood and Isaac McNabb. The cups and prizes were presented by Mrs. H. R. H. Kenner, president of the Y.W.C.A., and Mrs. E. E. Harvey.

The pool, almost forty feet in length, was filled with clear, green water, filtered by the splendid apparatus installed in it some time ago, and the big enclosure was heated for the comfort of the swimmers. A great deal of enthusiastic interest was manifested by the spectators, especially in the competitions for the silver trophies and the championships. The various fun-making events such as the egg and spoon race, with ten girls starting and three finishing, after the eggs had been spilled into the water; the tub chariot race, in which two seniors support a tub holding a tiny tot; the umbrella race, with parasols held aloft in the water; and the candle race (in nightdresses), with the pool lit only by the flare of the candles held in uplifted hands, were the cause of much laughter, and proved the girls to be as good losers as they were winners. It is a refreshing sight at this annual exhibition to watch the manner in which the defeated girls will turn and applaud those who are more successful.

Test Difficult.

The tests for the various championship cups were quite difficult, and there was plenty of applause for the way in which the girls handled them. Eleven young ladies took part in the competition for the Senior City Championship. They were the Misses Muriel Wilson, Jeanette Allen, Viola Harvey, Ina Terrace, Jean Maconomy, Verna Huffman, Jean Harvey, Mary Brooks, Hazel Bradley, Doris Rogers, and Helen Cole. Doing style swimming, the crawl and the long plunge, with a number of intricate dives, they displayed the quality of careful training received. The speed tests were the cause of wild excitement among the onlookers. Doris Rogers made the length of the pool and back, a distance of over seven-five feet, in seventeen seconds, nearly equalling the season's record of sixteen seconds for this distance.

Eight girls took part in the tests for the Junior Life-Saving City Championship: Marion Harvey, Betsy Scott, Beverley Rogers, Elsie Lemmon, Mary Terrace, Nora Scully, Gladys Johnson and Ruby Milburn.

For the Junior Diving City Championship, there were four contestants: Mary Kingsbury, Marion Harvey, Margaret Curry and Audrey Johnson.

Little Marjorie Boyle was the only entrant for the Babies' Cup.

A Junior race opened the program. Six girls took part in this dash of 23 yards for contestants under twelve years of age. It was won by Mary Kingsbury, with Beverley Rogers second and Marion Harvey third.

A Beginners' race of sixteen yards followed, entered by four little girls, and won by Mary Terrace. Elsie Lemmon came second and Hilda Vance third.

A School Girls' race of 25 yards, for over fourteen years, with ten girls swimming three heats, aroused much interest. It was won by Jean Harvey, with Viola Harvey second and Doris Rogers third.

Wins Babies' Race.

Little Berta Belleghem won the Babies' race (under six years) with Lily Long second, and only the two contestants among the wee girls.

Juniors swimming under water for twelve yards, the whole body submerged like a fish in the green pool, were four girls. Gladys Johnson won this test. Beverley Rogers was second and Betty Scott third.

The egg and spoon race, with ten starters and three at the finish line, went to Doris Rogers, Ina Terrace (2), and Helen Cole (3).

The tub chariot race, a great fun-maker, had four entries. Doris Rogers and Ina Terrace won the race, holding little Marjories Boyle in the tub. Second place went to Muriel Wilson and Jeanette Allen, holding Lily Long and third place to Jean and Viola Harvey, with little Berta Belleghem in the tub.

A relay race for juniors and intermediates against the Seniors, was another exciting event. The group captained by Doris Rogers were victorious against Viola Harvey's group.

The entertaining umbrella race, with five entries, was won by Gladys Johnson Second honors went to Marion Harvey and third to Betsy Scott.

A candle race (in night dress) was another humorous feature, with seven candles lighted at the start and two finishing. Jean Harvey came first and Beverley Rogers second.

Eight seniors swam under water for two lengths, with the victory going to Peggy Scott, Helen Cole (2nd) and Verna Huffman (3rd).

Mary Brooks won the test, with seven girls entering, for a twenty-five yard swim with hands and feet tied. Helen Cole came second and Muriel Wilson third.

Three girls collected plates under water, Helen Cole getting the majority of the tin plates.

One of the most interesting portions of the exhibition was the final demonstration of stunts. Girls formed pyramids, and spokes of a wheel, in the water, and dived through a hoop held partly aloft by two attendants. Another interesting exhibition was the high dive from the spectators' balcony.

Another amusing interlude in the serious program was the appearance of three girls, illustrating the difference between modern and old-fashioned bathing apparel for women. Doris Rogers, as Miss 1890, had a baggy suit with large, enveloping blouse and bloomers and a small hat which was completely ruined by a dive in the pool. Muriel Wilson as Miss 1900 had a similar suit, slightly shorter and with a white sailor collar. Viola Harvey illustrated Miss 1928 in her slim bathing suit and tight-fitting rubber cap.

At the conclusion of the program prizes were presented by Mrs. Kenner and Mrs. Harvey, the latter donating, as in former years, four of the silver spoons which form a portion of the rewards to the girls. Other prizes are donated by members of the Swimming-Pool committee.

Cocoa and light refreshments were served later in the green room.

VIEWS ON SPORT

Whether P.C.I. win or lose at Port Hope this afternoon you may be certain they gave their all.

Two P.C.I. teams have been defeated by University of Toronto Schools in years gone by. Six years ago at James Stevenson Park, the garnet and grey went down by a large score before a fast U.T.S. squad and four years ago at Varsity Stadium P.C.I. were just nosed out by a team from the same school.

What a thrill it will give Coache Browne and his hard-hitting little squad if they win this aft little squad if they win this aftern be wiped off the slate and the great satisfaction of having performed something that has never been done before would be theirs if they win.

There will be excitement in Lakefield Monday night when Harrison's team meet Bridgenorth in the final and championship game of the Lakefield Softball League. Both teams are tied for first, each having won every game played during the schedule. These two teams have never met before and it is unique that they meet only in the last game and they enter it with the silverware at stake. The league is composed of the following teams: Canada Cement, Grove School, Cubs of Lakefield, Cooney's, Harrison's De Laval and Bridgenorth. The games are all played in the Lakefield rink and they have provided keen sport in the Northern town all fall.

That there may be no marathon swim at Toronto next September is the news contained in a announcement by Wm. Wrigley, Jr., who states that the water is too cold in Lake Ontario for such long swims. However the matter has not been definitely settled yet. Toronto officials will try to have the swim held in the Humber River, where the water is ten degrees warmer than in the lake, if Mr. Wrigley decides against further endurance tests in the icy waters of the open lake.

Nine goals was the total scored by the ten N.H.L. teams the other night. The winners got eight and one losing team, the Chicago Hawks, scored the other one. Officials and promoters of the league tried to patch up the rules during the summer so that more goals would result. But as yet none of the games have featured big scores. The American fans especially like to see games where the twine is stretched often being used to the frequent scoring in basketball.

Next year if the teams don't pick up and do more scoring it is predicted that the nets will be enlarged considerably. They will be made higher and wider giving the goalies far more territory to watch.

Alley Gossip

MERCANTILE BOWLING LEAGUE

The Little Five took the works this week from the Cardinals but judging from the line-up which this team boasts, they should be at the top of the league. The losers played hard to win but were blanked by the clever performances of Ossie Johnson and Dave Ahern who plinked the pins for 558 and 545 for three games. Ray Delahaye for the Cardinals turned in the highest score of the game 577 but was eclipsed by both Johnson and Ahern in the high single column.

Some one of these days one of the Eorner Transit bowlers will imagine that he has his hand on a bowling ball when he grabs the gear-shift and and will yank it out by the roots. It's a good thing that Little Walter is not on the regular service judging from the amount of enthusiasm he is displaying on the alleys. This week the Bus Drivers shaved the Barbers pretty close, taking two games out of three. Bill Hunt carried off the laurels with a trio amounting to 548 while Allison for the Razor men was going nice, chalking up 538.

The Canadiens sent Bill Prindible and his gang home talking to themselves as a result of the trouncing which was handed to them on Wednesday of this week when the Canadiens took three games and amassed a total pinnage score of 2359 to the losers 2419. Robinson and Giroux were hitting them hard for high three scores of 636 and 592 respectively while Piercey set a fast pace with a high single score of 262.

It is generally claimed that no good athlete can do himself justice unless he is dressed in Gymn trousers—maybe this is what is handicaping the Underwriters' Sextette who chalked up 1030, 1031 and 896 for a total of 2957 against the Firefighters' 2442. Bud Weese with 251 and Doughty with 271 were the outstanding performers for the winners, although G. Gimblett Jr., was the highest man for both teams, taking high single, 234 and high three 671.

The Buick Specials are maintaining their fast pace again winning three straight, this time from the John Sloan team who with the exception of T. McBride bowled very poorly. Tom Curvin and G. Gimblett Sr., hugged the centre of the alleys to advantage both going over the 600 mark in their games. Curvin's score of 236 carried off the high single honours.

Tuffy Carr, performing for the Smoke-Eaters this week uncorked a style of striking out that was all his own. It is understood that Tuffy specializes in the swan dive and is trying to introduce something similar into his bowling.

DAVIES-BELANGER SLATED FOR BOUT

Toronto Promoter Announces Chief Contest For Flyweight Tourney on Dec. 3rd.

TORONTO, Nov. 24.—Now it can be told!

Neither Black Bill, the Cuban champion, and Joe Ross of Detroit, or Midget Wolgast of Philadelphia and Marty Gold of Cleveland will provide the feature contest at the Shamrock flyweight tournament on December 3 at the Coliseum, good as these scrappers are, but instead "Frenchy" Belanger and Willie Davies will be the principals in the bout of bouts.

There is no flashier or smarter 112-pounder in the world than the crack Smoky City lad who made his professional debut here some four years ago and who has boxed in Toronto on several occasions since with much credit to himself. He has measured gloves with all and sundry in his meteoric career and his record is crowded with victories. When tabbing the contenders no list is complete unless the name of the Pittsburger is close to the top.

Davies is not only a crafty ringman but a hard and accurate puncher and in meeting him Belanger is inviting disaster. He has beaten most of the tadpoles that "Frenchy" has encountered and many more in other parts of the country that are known to the former Canadian champion by reputation only.

It will not be the first time that the pair have come together. They clashed in a six-rounder when "Frenchy" was making his rush to the front and Davies had a slight edge, although the decision was a draw. Since then both boys have gone a long way.

With this bout as the price de resistance the show on a week from Monday night takes on all the aspects of a championship elimination affair. Black Bill and Joey Ross are two foremost contenders while Midget Wolgat who boxes Marty Gold is considered by no less an authority than Jack Dempsey, who is one of his backers, to be right in line for the crown, now held jointly by Frankie Genaro and Izzy Schwartz.

It is a most elaborate enterprise, probably the most expensive ever undertaken by the Shamrock Club, and promoter Playfair Brown is counting upon a record gate. It will have to be to make the show a financial success.

HOCKEY SCORES.

The scores of hockey games played last night were as follows:

Argonauts Drop Out O.H.A. Senior Series

TORONTO, Nov. 24. —Like a bolt from a blue sky came the information last night that Argonauts had definitely decided not to re-enter the O.H.A. senior series this winter. This decision, arrived at only yesterday, leaves the senior field in Toronto to Varsity, unless Marlboros decide to have a team.

Unforseen circumstances cropping up in regard to players made the Double Blue decide against going ahead with their plans. It it understood that the entire team that will represent Solloway Mills this winter was also to be with the Argonauts, but it now develops that these players will not be allowed to take part in games outside of the Mining Brokers' League.

Harry Watson had been appointed coach of Argonauts, and the players had engaged in a number of practices in preparation for the SP.A. opener with Varsity on Nov. 29, but the team disbanded last night.

Norbert Mueller, a member of the Varsity Grads; Charlie Delahey, of the same team; Ross Paul, Jack McKay, Fred Miller, Ross Miller, Art Irvine, Frank Irvine, Joe Cameron and a number of other players from whom to select a team, were being counted on by Watson.

The disbanding of Argonauts leaves only Varsity, Preston and Kitchener in the senior series, the smallest number in the history of the OH.A.

THEATRES

AT THE CAPITOL.

JOHN BARRYMORE, AMERICA'S FOREMOST ACTOR, COMING TO THE CAPITOL, MONDAY, TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY IN "THE TEMPEST". CAMILLA HORN AND LOUIS WOLHEIM PLAY THE FEMININE LEADS.

"Tempest," the John Barrymore screen masterpiece that New York acclaimed during a long run at $2 prices, will bring America's most distinguished actor to the Capitol Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, in a romance of Russia's revolution, Camilla Horn and Louis Wolheim appearing in chief support of the star. The New York World thought "Tempest" the "finest, most genuine motion picture John Barrymore ever made" and "one of the most glowing film dramas which have come out of the west," while The New York Times called Barrymore's picture "a masterpiece....excellent entertainment."

John Barrymore appears in his first modern story in five years in "Tempest," for the action of the picture begins in 1914 and concludes in 1919. Camilla Horn, the German actress who was brought to America by Joseph M. Schenck, appears as the Princess Tamara, beloved by Barrymore, a peasant officer. Miss Horn was the Marguerite to Emil Jannings' Mephisto in "Faust", made by F. W. Murnau for UFA in Germany. In "Tempest" she makes her American film debut and according to The New York Telegram, she "is a blazing baby." Louis Wolheim, of "Two Arabian Knights" fame, has a very prominent part in "Tempest," so that comedy is assured. Indeed, in many scenes John Barrymore himself reverts to a comic talent revealed in earlier films.

George Fawcett, Boris de Fas, Ulrich Haupt and Michael Visaroff likewise are prominent in the cast. Sam Taylor, director of Mary Pickford's "My Best Girl," was director of "Tempest", which is based on C. Gardner Sullivan's adaptation of an original screen story. John W. Considine, Jr., supervised the entire production, which Joseph M. Schenck presents. Charles Rosher, Mary Pickford's cameraman, was loaned to the Barrymore unit for camera work on "Tempest", and his photography has been described as the most beautiful camera work in the history of America's films. William Cameron Menzies was the art director.

The highlights of "Tempest" are scenes of passionate fury between a princess of the blood and a peasant, between royalists and revolutionists, between generals and pedlers; and love scenes so convincing that The New York Telegram calls the picture "the answer to the modern movie maiden's prayer."

The New York Times, World, Mirror, News, Evening World, Post, Sun, American and Journal united in declaring "Tempest" to represent John Barrymore's finest screen performance. That was the first time in ten years those journals had agreed on anything.

AT THE REGENT.

GRIPPING UNDERWORLD ROLE FOR RICHARD BARTHELMESS IN LATEST STARRING FEATURE AT THE REGENT.

A young boy, just at college age, stands with a smoking gun in his hands. His victim is a huddled, shapeless heap on the other side of the room.

This is the dramatic punch that opens "The Noose," First National's picturization of Willard Mack's sensational stage play which comes to the Regent Theatre on Monday.

From this tense, startling opening, the story moves swiftly through a series of dramatic incidents to the finish. "The Noose" is one of the most powerful stories ever written. It deals with life in the raw, with the underworld and its gunmen and gangmen, with justice and with politics, with sympathy and with compassion.

Seldom has such a strong story been brought to the screen, and probably never with such marvellous players to enact the various roles.

Richard Barthelmess in the stellar role again demonstrates his amazing histronic talents as Nickie Elkins, the boy. He brings to the role sympathy and understanding.

Unusual Theme.

The stage play created wide-spread interest becaue of it unusual theme. The First National Picture is being even more widely discussed, for it carries the theme to heights impossible in a spoken play.

The audience is taken backstage at a night club, then out into the crowds on the dance floor. Next to the death house in the penitentiary, and then to the governor's mansion.

Through every scene the interest is kept enthrilled, and one dramatic climax follows another.

Surrounding Barthelmess in "The Noose" is an exceptionally capable company.

Lina Basquette, former Follies dancer, is cast as Dot, the cabaret girl, who remains faithful to the boy through all his trouble. Miss Basquette is not only a dancer of ability, but proves herself a talented dramatic actress as well.

Alice Joyce is cast in the sympathetic role of the Governor's wife, who saves the boy from the gallows. Thelma Todd is the society bud who deserts him in an hour of need. Montagu Love is the gang leader, who meets death at the boy's hands.

Stellar Cast.

Ed. Brady, Robert T. Haines, Jay Eaton, Fred Warren, Robert E. O'Connor, Yola D'Arvil, Kay English, Corliss Palmer, and many others, are numbered among the members of the cast.

John Francis Dillon directed the picture with a fine understanding of dramatic values. James Van Trees was the cinematographer, and is responsible for some remarkable photographic effects. Henry Hobart produced "The Noose" for First National Pictures.

Another ten strike has been scored by this unusual picture, and Richard Barthelmess has a role that will go down in film annals as one of his finest performances.

"The Noose" is a particularly bright spot in the current picture season.

THIS WEEK IN SPORTS

To-day old man Rugby has his last kick before the 1928 Dominion rugby championship finals pass down into history. The Bengals from Tiger Town enter the eastern playoff this afternoon heavy favorites. They have gone through the season without a defeat and have sprouted another claw in the persons of "Pep" Leadley and Johnny Fitzmaurice, former Olympic star. Yet if the Tigers win they must still, before copping the crown, meet and dispose of the crack Reigna Rough Riders. Reginal have a brilliant record behind them in their own territory, and while these east vs. west affairs have in the past often been in the nature of a burlesque it is credably reported that the score in this year's final will not resemble a lop-sided basketball game.

Speaking of basketball, to-night in Vancouver, the moguls of the game in B.C., at the annual meeting of the B.C. Amateur Basketball Association, foregather to study the rules and constitution as drafted by special committee in the spring, and possibly to make hash of them. As several clauses are said to be controversial, and officials are prone to palaver, let those who detest a verbal barrage take cover in advance.

Not all the good golf stories come from Scotland. Swallow this one, hot off the fourth green of the New Galloway course, Muskerry, Cork, Ireland. Here it was that F. H. Byrde drove over a wall and out of bounds. Whereupon the repentant pill struck a rock, rebounded to the green, fifty yards away, glided up to the pin and obligingly popped in. Now you tell one.

Since Frank Calder, president of the National Hockey League, has rung in the new rule permitting the umpire to impose a summary fine on any hot-collared team manager who, during the progress of a game, sasses him from the side lines, some of the said managers will be going supperless to bed unless they change their favorite line a whole lot from that of last year.

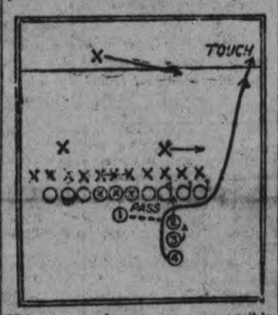
FAMOUS CANADIAN RUGBY GAMES, PLAYS AND PLAYERS

By NICK BAWLF—

Former star football, lacrosse and hockey player, now coach at Cornell

One of the most thrilling football games that an Ottawa College team ever won was its great victory over Jack Mayneard's Toronto University 1911 team which eventually won the Grey Cup, emblematic of the Canadian championship that year for the third time in succession.

The Duke of Connaught witnessed the titanic struggle played on a wet field. Rev. W. J. Stanton produced a youthful kicking marvel in the person of Phil. Cornellier, who repeatedly punted the wet ball 50 and 60 yards.



This young phenom was responsible for nine of his team's ten points, two more than Varsity's total.

A week later the same Ottawa College team was the first one to defeat a Queen's fourteen in the Limestone City. M. J. Rodden, able coach of the present Hamilton Tigers, played middle wing for the tri-color.

Cornellier was given great support by his line whereas Maynard's was poor. The college team used eleven men on the line throughout nullifying Varsity's running game. Even at that Maynard No. 4 in the diagram worked his favorite play, a fake buck end run for a 20-yard run and a touchdown. Here it is.

Varsity had possession of the ball on College's 20-yard line. The teams lined up. Varsity, using a fake tandem buck formation. Campbell, No. 1, received the ball and moved as if to give the ball to Ramsay, No. 2, for a plunge. Instead, however, he passed it to Maynard who streaked behind his line and around the end for a 20-yard run and a touchdown. The teams were:

Ottawa College—Flying wing, Heffernan; halfbacks, Quilty, Cornelier, Chantal; quarter, Killian; scrimmage, McDonald, Kennedy, Cyra; insides, O'Leary, Sullivan; middles, Harrington, Pfehl; outsides, Nagle, Gilligan.

Varsity—Flying wing, MacDonald; halfbacks, Ramsay, Maynard, Dale; quarter, Campbell; scrimmage, Bell, Curtis, Knight; insides, Cory, Clark; middles, German, Taylor; outsides, Sinclair, Thompson.

Peterborough had two representatives in this game, Frank Heffernan playing flying wing for Ottawa College and Peter Campbell, quarter for Varsity.

MANCHESTER, Eng., Nov. 24. — (Canadian Press).—Saracen, owned by Major J. S. Courtland, won the November handicap to-day. Norwest was second and Restorian third.

SEE CANADA FIRST.

The twin coastal cities, Vancouver and Victoria, at this time of the year appeal with endless charm to the holidaymakers, wanderers, and tired business men and women, for the weather is ideal and the foliage in the gardens and parks of wondrous color. Not a day passes, too, but sees the twelve golf courses gay with happy and enthusiastic players, while riding in the early mornings and afternoons is particularly favored. There are splendid motor highways on Vancouver Island, and innumerable ones running into Vancouver City from all directions. The winter season's attractions include theatres and concerts of the highest calibre, while the Hotel Vancouver at Vancouver and the world-renowned Empress at Victoria are the centres of the social and commercial activities of the two cities and districts. During the winter the Canadian Pacific Railway operates the only through train to Vancouver from Toronto. The "Vancouver Express" leaves the Union Station every night at 9.00 and reaches the coast four days later. Comfortable and convenient connections can be made with all western points by using this famous train.

CHEVROLET SIXES INTRODUCED TO-DAY

Company Officials Tell of Improvements Embodied in New Series.

The new Chevrolet, powered by a six-cylinder, high-compression engine, is introduced to the public to-day.

This new series replaces the company's four-cylinder line and in drawing back the curtains that have hidden this latest production on the stage of motordom company officials announce it as "the outstanding Chevrolet of Chevrolet history."

Features of New Series.

While the change from the four to the six-cylinder power plant is the notable feature of this new offering, from the standpoint of appearance as well as from that of the mechanical design the car is completely new. The lines are long and smart. The high, flattened hood is set off the gleaming chromium radiator shell. Group hood louvres accentuate the suggestion of speed. The divided body moulding and the concave front pillars reflect the vogue, while the Fisher bodies are larger, longer and lower.

Models Comprising Line.

Seven models of passenger cars and three commercial types comprise the new line. Included in the passenger line are five closed and two open models, all with bodies by Fisher. The commercial car line embraces a new and larger utility truck of one and one-half ton capacity, a new light delivery chasis and the sedan delivery.

Officials announce that production of the new car has started, and that the factories at Oshawa, Walkerville, and Regina will be turning out cars to be shipped to dealers by Dec. 15. Deliveries to the public will start Jan. 1.

J. K. Hughes of J. K. Hughes, Limited, states it will only be a short time before the new car will be in Peterborough.

Dominion Bank Issues $1,000,000 New Stock

TORONTO, Nov. 24.—Stock notices are being mailed to-day to shareholders of the Dominion bank, announcing an issue of one million dollars new capital stock to shareholders of record December 31, 1928. There is no special significance in this action by the board of directors. The issue is made simply to keep pace with the development of the country and the steady expansion in the bank's own business.

The new shares are being issued at two hundred, which will give rights of considerable value to bank shareholders, as the stock is at present selling in the neighborhood of two hundred and seventy. When the new shares are fully paid up, the bank's capital will be seven million dollars and the reserve fund nine million dollars. It is felt that the shareholders will take advantage of the new issue. Canadian bank stocks provide an excellent investment but have been somewhat neglected during the past year or so for securities in many cases of a more spectacular character.

AGED WOMAN STRUCK BY BUS

Miss Margaret Lewis Fails To Hear Horn of Approaching Vehicle.

HAS SHOULDER BROKEN.

Failing to hear the warning sound of the horn of a Peterborough bus, Miss Margaret Lewis, an aged lady suffering from deafness, and a resident at the Y.W.C.A., stepped directly into the path of it and suffered a possible fracture of the right shoulder.

The accident occurred on Water Street, near Barnardo Avenue, on Thursday evening about five o'clock. The bus, driven by Earl Griffin, 284 Lansdowne Street, had just been set in motion after picking up passengers on the corner of Barnardo Avenue, when the lady was seen making her way across the road. The driver sounded the horn, but Miss Lewis apparently did not hear it. She continued her course and, although the bus was only moving in second speed and the driver quickly applied the brakes and swerved away, he could not avert the accident. Miss Lewis was hit a glancing blow by the side of the bus, the quick action of the driver in turning the car prevented her from receiving more severe injuries.

Miss Lewis was taken immediately to Nicholls Hospital, and is suffering from a possible fracture of the right shoulder and shock. Dr. H. V. Dobson attended her.

PLANT OPENING IS CELEBRATED

Buyers and Friends of Brinton Carpet Company Attend Banquet.

EMPLOYEES GIVEN DANCE.

Buyers and friends of the Brinton Carpet Company were the guests of the directors and executive at a banquet in the Empress Hotel last evening to celebrate the inauguration of the company's new Seamless Axminster Plant.

"We welcome the buyers and friends of our company to Peterborough as an opportunity for them to see what we are doing here to further the interest of manufacturing. Great thought has been put into the manufacture of our goods and there has been nothing haphazard in our planning. Great credit for our success in marketing our high grade product must be given to the splendid efficient and loyal staff we have in Peterborough plant. I am a great believer in making recognition of the loyalty to those who sell our goods to the public. May I hope on this glad occasion that the splendid spirit of corporation that exists between our firm and the retailers may continue," said M. Mackie in welcoming the representatives of the firms who buy the products of the Brinton Carpet Company.

Among those present were J. M. Mackie, President of the Company Sir Charles Gordon and William McMaster, directors from Montreal; Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Ferguson, Mrs. Disher, Miss V. Guthries, Miss E. M. Miller, Miss E. Laing, Mr. and Mrs. R. Ward of Toronto, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Dawson, Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Smith, Miss Sweetman, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Smyth, Mr. and Mrs. Schmitt, Mrs. Caradus, and Miss Pearl Brock, Mrs. Milligan, Messrs. W. A. Dennison, M. L. Sweetman, E. S. Martyn, Gagnon, Bateman, Williams, Plumbley, Foster, Rodger, Lowe and Derdebecker. Miss Pearl Brock, daughter of sales manager T. E. Brock sang a group of three numbers in a splendid voice with a piano accompaniment by Mrs. Disher.

Employees Given Dance

The employees were the guests of the company in an evening of jollification and merriment at a dance in the Legion Hall. Everything in the way of entertainment, music, novelties, and a group of splendid little dancers from Toronto were secured to insure the complete success of the event.

The Hall was gaily decorated with bright coloured streamers and the dancers stepped and glided to the sweet melody and snappy rythme supplied by the Silver Slipper Orchestra. The gay, coloured hats that were presented added a great deal to the brightness of the merry scene.

A group of four little girls, the eldest nine and the youngest six, gave Scotch, Irish and English fold dances in national costumes. These little girls were all medalists and had won many other medals in dancing competitions throughout Canada and the United States. They won the hearts and approval of their audience by their clever dancing and winsome childish faces.

The older people who preferred not to dance played euchre and bridge. The euchre prizes were won by Mrs. Adam Melrose and Alex. Gillespie and the bridge prizes by Miss E. M. Miller and Bert Miller.

Midway through the evening dainty refreshments were served by Hooper's catering. Miss Brock sang two numbers in a splendid full rich voice accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Fisher. Mr. Mackie, the president of the company presented the prizes. The dancing continued with never slackened merriment until two o'clock.

THE MARKETS

League of Nations auspices, especially as a flat return of 7% per cent. with prospects of capital appreciation is hard to find nowdays combined with such security as is offered in the present issue. Further continental loans are expected shortly.

Rumors of the merger of the Dormon Long and Bolckow Vaughen companies, great steel, iron and coal organizations, made the annual report of Dormon Long particularly interesting. No reference to a merger was made, but the company's operations showed further improvement. The common stockholders, however, seem as far from a dividend as ever. The company's Australian business has been sold to an Australian company.

Noranda Leads List On Standard Exchange

TORONTO, November 24. Canadian Press. — Noranda was very active on the Standard Mining Exchange to-day, and closed at 67.25 for a net gain of 5.75. The issue opened at 63.50; Hudson Bay recovered, and closed at 20.00, while Jackson Manion gained two to 23. McIntyre was at 22.50, a gain of 1.20; Sherritt-Gordon at 6.75, unchanged, and Lake Shore at 18.75, a gain of 25 cents.

Liverpool Quotations Affect Chicago Values

CHICAGO, November 24. Canadian Press. — Influenced by an unexpected upturn in wheat quotations at Liverpool, wheat prices here averaged a little higher early to-day. The Liverpool advance was ascribed to something of a jump in the ocean frieght rates and to the increased cost of Canadian wheat. Opening at a shade to 5-8c gain, Chicago wheat afterwards reacted somewhat, but hardened once more. Corn started unchanged to half off and later sagged all around. Oats were easy.

Wheat, December, 116 1-4; March, 121 3-8; corn, December, 85 1-4; March 87 1-2; oats, December, 46 1-2; March, 47.

PETERBOROUGH'S

Ninety Scholars at School.

"There was only one school before Confederation and it stood on Charlotte street just where the Free Methodist church is now. Part of the building is there yet, and is used as a shed. It was built on posts. There were about 90 scholars, the late J. J. Lundy, Bob Lundy, Ned Wilson and a young chap named Connors, who became a priest, and who claimed to be the first white child born in Peterborough, and the others that I have forgotten. We used to play games in a field full of stumps and trees, across from the school, where the C. N.R. station now stands. Then up in Victoria Park there was a little log cabin where a Mr. Taylor, a man with one arm, kept what was called the Grammar school. After Confederation the first Separate school was opened at the corner of Simcoe and Aylmer streets. It was across the street from the present Y.W.C.A. building.

First Mayor.

"Charlie Hudson was the first mayor. In those days many citizens found it easier to do statute labor in preference to paying their taxes in money. When twenty years old at the time of the American war, I worked sixteen hours a day for nine dollars a month. I have bought pork for two dollars and a half a hundred, and seventy years ago oats sold at twelve and a half cents a bushel. Tea was very dear and no one could afford to drink it. The high tariff put the price up to one dollar a pound, but now and then one could buy it cheaper when it was smuggled in. Whiskey was plentiful and cheap, proof whiskey selling for ten cents a quart.

"George Kingdon was born in Peterborough, and is one year older than I am. His father was a cooper. George ran the business after his father, and now, I believe George's son and grandsons are still continuing the same business in the north end of the city. That is the oldest firm in Peterborough. George used to live across the street from us and he used to steal our plums. The other day I was up to see him and he said that he could still remember how sweet those plums tasted."

PERSONALITY IS DISCUSSED

Joseph Wearing Addresses Regular Friday Night Supper Club Meeting.

SIXTY BOYS PRESENT.

That the Friday Night Supper Club is one of the most active organizations in the city was proven last night at their regular meeting. Over sixty of the boys were present to hear Joseph Wearing give one of the best speeches heard by the club this year. As special guests for the evening there was the members of the Peterborough Collegiate Institute rugby team, Central Ontario Interscholastic champions, who play U. T. S. to-day in the Ontario High School semi-finals.

The meeting was conducted in the usual way with J. Wallace in the chair. After supper Mr. Wallace called upon C. S. Browne, coach of the P.C.I. team, to say a few words. Mr. Browne, in describing the team, referred to it as the best fighting team that ever represented the school; although it is the lightest. The team has lost but one game in eight starts and they have been outweighed 15 to 20 pounds per man.

Mr. Wearing gave a short but interesting speech, taking for his subject "Personality." There is very little diffence in the people of to-day but the main diffence is in personality. Personality is the thing within us that we are known as. There is a time in life when there is a marked difference between us and everybody else, and the most important thing in life is to develop that thing, personality.

"The personality is that within you that will never die. You can tell by looking at family albums or at people what kind of people they are, because their personality is marked on their face. Personality is given to you at the time of your birth by God and is the one thing you can control and develop. God gave you the right to say how it should be developed," said the speaker.

A hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Wearing was moved by Hector McLeod and seconded by Terry Hall. The boys then gave three cheers and a tiger for the rugby team and then the school yell. The meeting closed with the saying of the creed and the singing of O Canada.

TWO DELEGATES ARE APPOINTED

Cavan Institute Will Be Represented at Toronto Convention.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAVAN, November 24.—At the meeting of the Cavn Women's Institute, held at the home of Mrs. J. W. Perrin, on Wednesday afternoon, Mrs. R. M. Howden and Miss Eileen Hunter were appointed delegates to the Women's Institute Convention, to be held in Toronto on November 27, 28 and 29. Included in the convention program will be a banquet given the delegates by the Robert Simpson Comany.

The president, Mrs. R. M. Howden, conducted the meeting.

A circular was read from Dr. Helen McMurchy, reminding the Institute of their responsibility regarding children in each district, who are living in homes not their own.

Another circular was read from the Institute to secure the names of all girls and boys, men and women, between the ages of 16 and 35, in their districts, who would join the class to be held in Millbrook on Home Economics, during the month of January. A committee was appointed to look after this work.

Mrs. Carpenter and Mrs. Hunter were appointed a committee to select a play and secure persons to take the parts. The roll call was answered by suggestions for Christmas gifts.

Mrs. Carpenter extended an invitation to the Institute to meet at her home for the January meeting, the December meeting to be withdrawn, as is the usual custom. Mrs. C. Carr, Mrs. J. W. Perrin, Miss L. Syer, and Miss E. Hunter were appointed to demonstrate winter salads. A study of music composers, illustrated by piano or voice, will be given by Mrs. Carpenter.

After the business session a short program was given. Mrs. R. Matchett read an article telling ways and means of making the work easier during the threshing season, and Mr. R. Syer read a clipping "In the Institute tent at the C. N. E." At the close of the meeting, lunch was served.

Among those present, were Mrs. R. M. Howden, Miss Eileen Hunter, Mrs. C. Carr, Mrs. Carpenter, Mrs. R. Matchett, Mrs. J. Paul, Mrs. Rowen, Miss D. Puday, Mrs. I. Keegan, Mrs. F. M. Staples, Mrs. R. G. Staples, Mrs. R. S. Staples, Mrs. Perrin, Miss R. Segsworth and Miss L. Syer.

Lucky?

When she comes to the footlights to acknowledge Broadway's applause of her marvelous dancing in "Sidewalks of New York," theatre-goers sit forward to admire her youthful charms; the fresh crispness of her rose-petal skin and her gleaming black hair. She's Virginia Clark, of 143 Twenty-Third St., Jackson Heights, New York City.

"When friends say I'm lucky to have such clear skin and soft, shining hair," says Miss Clark, "I have to tell them it isn't luck at all. In my case, it's the result of care. For my hair, I use the simple method that's all the rage among New York girls now. It's so easy. All you do is put a little Danderine on your brush each time you use it. This makes my scalp feel just grand and keeps away all dandruff. It keeps my hair and scalp so clean I don't have to shampoo nearly as often as I did. It makes my hair soft and easy to dress; holds it in place; and gives it more lustre than brilliantine!"

Danderine quickly removes that oily film from your hair; brings out its natural color; makes it fairly sparkle. Dandruff disappears when you use Danderine. Waves, set with it, stay in longer. It isn't oily and doesn't show. All drug stores have the generous 35c bottles. Over five million used a year!

Mining Briefs

A Special Service to The Examiner

A wire from Kirkland Lake states that the grade of ore going to theo Wright Hargreave mill has of late been very low. A recent statement attributed to an official was to the effect that a lot of ore being brought up is too good to throw on the waste dump, but hardly good enough to put through the mill. This follows recent reports to the effect that the situation was improving greatly at the lower horizons.

As mentioned in this bulletin some time ago Mining Corporation is reported to be having good success with the old McKinley-Darragh-Savage Mine at Cobalt, which they leased from the McKinley Mines Securities Company. It is understood that with an expenditure of only $60,000 they have already taken out several hundred thousand ounces, with the process of picking the meat off the bones hardly started. While Mining Corporation obtained the lease on the mine, I. Mosher, an old leaser in Cobalt, was credited with having obtained the dump and mill. He also is said to be cleaning up nicely on his lesae.

Noranda.

Rumors were prevalent in Montreal yesterday that Noranda would shortly issue new stock in order to pay off bonds now held by Hollinger and also to secure funds for further extensions. Noranda's arrangements with Hollinger for paying off $3,000,000 worth of bonds is provided for in that a charge of $2 a ton is made for the retirement of he bonds. The present rate of production is nearly $900,000 a month gross, or about $600,000 a month net after bond charges, mining charges and smelting charges have been defrayed. Any extensions that Noranda are undertaking now can be well looked after out of current profits, as these are now on a basis of $5,000,000 to $6,000,000 per year. Any statement that Noranda is to issue new stock borders on the ridiculous when the situation is given a little analysis.

Noranda's market situation at present is rather peculiar. It is highly reminiscent of the period during which Nickel bounced around between $90 and $100. The consensus of opinion at the present time in New York, Montreal and Toronto is that the stock is going higher but nobody will venture to state when this move is to take place. However, taking all favorable factors into consideration, both at the mine and marketwise, Noranda has every appearance of being groomed for a substantial move. Two factors which possibly have been overlooked are, first, that Noranda's present market price has not discounted the appreciation in the price of copper as has been the case with the American copper stocks, and second, that there has been a scarcity of good news from the property. We believe that considerable good news is being held back and will be let out at the right moment. However, be that as it may, the long side of Noranda appears to have a considerable advantage over the short end of the stick.

Ajax.

Operations on Ajax No. 3 well have been temporarily suspended due to non-delivery of sand line. It is anticipated that this difficulty will be overcome and drilling resumed in two or three days. The management reports that two days' drilling should see the drill in the Trenton formation.

Noranda.

A wire just received from Douglas Mutch states that Noranda is getting exceptionally high gold values on the 950 foot level.

Underground work on the "C" ore body of the Amulet is reported to be showing a greater copper content than was indicated in previous drilling operations. By present indications, the report states, this body will have a far greater value in copper than it will have in zinc. Furthermore, values in silver are said to be contained in the copper part of the ore, and as the silver values run from 15 to 20 ounces to the ton, the silver content of the ore will be materially increased, continues the report. The crosscuts, both east and west, are in about 80 feet on the 250-foot level. The new hoist is being installed and when this has been done faster progress will be made. It was stated that a little mineral was intercepted in the crosscut, but it was patchy and would not make ore.

Amity is now said to be sinking their shaft to a depth of 600 feet and it is expected that this objective will be attained some time during February. It is reported also that shipments to the smelter will be curtailed during that time.

Latest work to the east on the 500-foot level of the Howey is said to show improvement in values. The average grade of the mine is now stated to be $7.15 per ton. Work on the 500-foot level to the east is said to show the last 200 feet being $9.15 grade across a width of 26 feet.

A new steam plant is said to have been installed on the Patterson Copper, a subsidiary of the Barry-Hollinger, and shaft sinking from the present depth of 80 feet will be carried down to 500 feet.

Work under the direction of Engineer Stitt is being speeded on the Capital Rouyn property where preliminary work is underway on the sinking of a shaft to the 100-foot level.

Unexpected activity in the shares of Picard Gold Mines has the street guessing. The action may be attributed to the report that the Consolidated Smelters may take over the property.

The new South ore body at the Teck Hughes is said to have been drifted on ofr some 300 feet at one level and for considerable distances on two other horizons. Diamond drilling is said to have indicated a height of 80 feet to date. Widths are reported as good with the grade capable of holding its own with the rest of the mine.

Sladen Malartic have completed their camp buildings and are making a geological survey of the claims at present under the supervision of Dr. W. F. James.

The shaft at the Graham Bosquet is now said to be down to a depth of 385 feet with the work being pushed as actively as possible with the plant on hand. The shaft is headed for an immediate objective of 500 feet.

The plant on the Thompson-Cadillac is reported to be showing up efficiently. The company's test mill is reported to be in operation with heads going throufh averaging $10.00 per ton.

There are two silver mines working close to Elk Lake at present, and several others in prospect. The Monelk, which has taken over the old Silver Alliance property, is putting on two shifts and the work is to be pushed. The Paramount, which lies a little to the south-west of the Monelk, is also said to be working and sinking a shaft in preparation for operations on a more extended scale.

The new shaft on the Lartic Mines property is now reported at a depth of 75 feet with the work advancing approximately 4 feet a day. Lartic is controlled by Newbec.

Officials of the Gold Hill Mines are quoted as saying that the vein recently encountered at the 1,125-foot level of the mine shows good commercial ore over a width of five feet. As this would be the first time that ore was encountered over good stoping width on the property, the officials are naturally pleased. Drifting is now being carried out both to the east and west.

It is reported that the Silverado Mines, who up to this time had confine their operations to British Columbia, have taken over the Hudson's Bay property below Hanging Stone Lake, south of Gowganda. This property was closed down about 18 years ago due, it is said, to shortage of labor. It was worked for some time in 1909 and 1910 by the Hudson's Bay Company, and some rich silver was uncovered in the development work. Conditions for working the property are now greatly improved. A road is directly connected to the Gowganda road to the vicinity of the property.

Sullivan Mine of Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company.

The Sullivan Mine of Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company of Canada, now recognized as being one of the biggest, if not the biggest, lead-zinc properties in the world, with a number of other mining claims adjoining, comprises an acreage of 8,147 acres.

There are two main ore bodies in the Sullivan, known as the South and North deposits. The South deposit has an average width of 30 to 50 feet and the North ore body a width in sections of over 200 feet. Characteristic ore is a fine-grained mixture of zinc blends, galena, pyrite and pyrrhotite, the average milifeed running 11 per cent. lead, 10.5 per cent. zinc, 36.5 per cent. iron, and silver 3 ounces to the ton.

Previous to the time that a process was developed to recover the zinc content, operations were difficult and none too profitable. Now zinc is an important factor in revenues. The above figures indicate how important a factor iron is in the deposit. This is also being recovered now and has been added to the long list of the company's products. Cadmium is another product developed during the past year.

The average value of the ore prices for the ore per ton, on the basis of the above figures, and using current prices for the metals, works out at approximately $30.00. This is exclusive of the iron content. This is worked out as follows:

Lead, 10 per cent. or 220 pounds per ton, at 6¼c lb.. $13.75
Zinc, 10.5 per cent. or 230 pounds per ton, at 8¼c lb. 14.37
Silver, 3 ozs. per ton, at 58c per lb. 1.70

Total, excluding iron $29.82

It is estimated that the company has at least 25,000,000 tons of ore in reserve, which at $30.00 per ton would give a total value of $750,000,000, with the value of iron to be added.

The early workings of the Sullivan ore bodies were carried on from adits and shafts located in the upper parts of the deposits, chiefly from an adit 2,600 feet long, known as the 1,000-foot level, situated about 4,500 feet above sea level. Later diamond drilling indicated reserves of ore that warranted a more ambitious scheme of development and an adit was driven 3,900 feet above sea level to open up the deposits 60 feet below the lowest workings in the upper workings. A raise of 7,100 feet from the portal connected with the upper horizons. After the South ore body was developed at the lower horizons, the adit was carried farther in to develop the North ore body, and is about 2 miles long. The South ore body has been developed for 700 feet below the lower adit.

Comment On The Market

A Special Service to The Examiner.

Gold Movement to Canada May reach $25,000,00C.

NEW YORK.—Commenting on Gold Shipments to Canada the New York Times ays:

The first shipment of gold from New York to Canada this year took place when $1,000,000 was withdrawn from the Federal Reserve Bank for transfer ro Montreal. The shipment was the tesult of a premium on Canadian exchange, although the rate was a shade below that usually calculated as the gold shipping point.

The movement of exchange has been so at variance with the normal seasonal influences this year that bankers said yesterday there was no way of estimating how much of the gold movement would develop at this time, but it is not expected to exceed $25,000,000 at the very outside and it should end within a few weeks. The present premium is attributed to heavy exports of grain, the crop this year having been unusually large. As the navigation season will close soon, shutting off these exports, efforts are being made now to rush as large a volume as possible through to the international markets, and this is creating a demand here for Canadian funds for payment.

The last previous export of gold from New York to Canada took place last December and amounted to $4,000,000. This was immediately followed by a movement of the metal in the opposite direction, a total of $5,500,000 having been received here from Canada shortly before the first of the year. Last January $39,300,030 of gold was received here from Canada, and shipments in February, June and July increased the total imports from that source to a total of about $76,000,000 for the year to date. Most of this year Canadian exchange has been at a discount, even at the seasons when exports of commodities usually produce a premium on Montreal funds.

Puzzled Diagnostician.

NEW YORK—Commenting on the action of the stock market, one of the shrewdest Wall Street operators said: "I am thoroughly convinced that we are going through a process of inflation." He declared himself unable, however, to predict the end of it, but added: "I still cling to the belief that one and one make two. When talking to a prominent financier and economist this morning I found that he seemed to doubt whether it does. I do not, but I am wondering whether there is anything in the situation that may have been overlooked."

A New Radio Rumor.

NEW YORK.—Although the recent spectacular advances in Radio have been viewed in Wall Street as the consequences of a sharply reduced floating supply, a story has gone the rounds purporting to give a partial explanation of the buying interest that has been shown in the stock of late. It was rumored that the direct ors have in mind a split-up of the stock on a five-for-one basis as soon next year as it is decided that a dividend can be paid. The story did not include any guesses as to the amount of dividen d to be paid on the increased stock.

Oil Company to Sell More Stock.

NEW YORK.—The Independent Oil and Gas Company of Tulsa, Okla., has decided to offer to stockholders of record of November 30 rights to subscribe to additional stock at $30 a share in the ratio of three and two-thirds shares for every ten shares held. The proceeds are to be used to retire bonds and preferred stock of the Manhattan Oil Company, a subsidiary.

Industrial Stocks Lead At London

LONDON, Nov. 24. — (Canadian Press Cable.)— Industrial stocks brightened somewhat on the London stock exchange early in the week, after a severe slump, but movements again became limited later and the week closed with this class of issue uncertain in trend. The clearance which the small panic among speculative holders brought about during the last two weeks, was all to the good and it is believed the general sentiment among the industrial issues will become decidedly healthier.

Marconi stocks are keenly bid for partly on second reading of the Imperial Telegraphs bill, which provides for the putting into effect of the merger of Imperial communications. Another factor was extensive buying from New York.

The lists for an issue of $7,500,000 in seven and a half per cent. bonds of the Kingdom of Bulgaria were fully subscribed directly they opened. The result was entirely expected, as in the case of similar issues under

TRUTH VERSUS ERROR

What is a soul? The word "soul" is used more often in an incorrect sense than in a correct sense. This question being an important one, it demands serious and careful investigation. Many preachers and others claim that man is composed of two parts, namely, soul and body. Where they get this erroneous idea, we will note later. Websters dictionary says, a person or life is the meaning of the word "soul." The Scriptures say beasts and men are souls, and speak of "soul" as life, in fact soul and life are synonymous terms. Man is a living soul and his living soul dies: Gen. 2:7 and 2:17, Ezekiel 18:4.

To fall in line with false teaching, it would be necessary to misquote 1 Cor. 15-22, thus—As in Adam the bodies only of all men die, so in Christ the bodies only of all men shall be made alive. Preachers, teachers, and others get the idea, that man (a living soul) does not die, from Satan, taking Satan's word in preference to the word of Jehovah God.

WEDDING BELLS

TAMBLIN—KENNEDY.

A pretty wedding was solemnized on November 21st at the George Street Parsonage by the Rev. Todd, when Candace Viola, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Kennedy, of 147 London street, was united in marriage to John H. Tamblin, grandson of Mrs. Agnes Tamblin, 56 Victoria Ave.

Miss Irene Northey, cousin of the bride, acted as bridesmaid while Mr. E. Jenkinson was groomsman.

Immediately after the ceremony, buffet luncheon was served at the home of the bride's parents, following which, the happy couple left for Western Ontario points.

The bride's dress was a delightful creation of pink and blue georgette. She also wore a unique brooch which has been in the family for generations and which was worn by grandmother, mother and daughter at their respective weddings. The bride's travelling costume was a complete outfit of matilda brown

Upon their return to the city, the young couple will reside at 514 Water street.

MEHR—TALBOT.

Rev. P. Costello solemnized the marriage at St. Peter's Cathedral on Thursday, of Rita Talbot, and Jacques Mehr of Cleveland, Ohio.

Later, Mr. Mehr and his bride, left by motor for Detroit, to reside later in Cleveland, Ohio.

DUNDAS—SHUREY.

Dundas, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. John Dundas of 716 Water Street. The marriage cedemony was solemnized by the Rev. Dr. R. C. Blagrave and Mr. F. G. Mann, A. Mus. played the wedding music. During the signing of the register, Miss Jessie Pattison sang "Until."

The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a lovely frock of rose beige crepe romain, a hat of gold and silver, fox scarf and blonde shoes and hose. She carried a bouquet of pink roses.

When the evening shades are falling,
As we sit here all alone,

Oft and oft our thoughts do wander,
To a grave not far away,
Where we laid our Darling Olive,
Just two years ago to-day.

IN MEMORIAM

McCUE—In ever-loving memory of our dear daughter, Mrs. Austin McCue (nee Marguerite Brown), who died on November 23, 1927.
There is someone who misses you sadly,
And has found the year long since you went;
There is someone who misses you daily,
Though we try to be brave and content;
Time moves on and we are reminded
Of a day our hearts were crushed;
When God took you; oh, so quickly,
And we all in our gloom were thrust.
Times may come and bring many many changes
Fresh with every coming year;
But your memory we will cherish
In the hearts that loved you here.
Our life cannot speak how we loved her,
Our hearts cannot tell what to say;
God only knows how we miss her
In a home that is lonesome to-day.
The flowers we place upon your grave
May wither and decay,
But the love and memory that you left
Will never fade away.
—Inserted by father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. William Smoke, Curve Lake, Ont.

McCUE.—In sad and loving memory of our dear sister, Mrs. Austin McCue (nee Marguerite Brown), who passed away just a year ago, November 23, 1927.
The midnight stars are gleaming,
On a lone and silent grave,
Beneath sleeps one we loved,
But one we could not save.
She bade no one a last farewell;
She said good-bye to none;
The heavenly gates were open wide;
A loving voice said, "Come."
Her loving voice is silent;
Her true heart ceased to beat;
We miss her well-known footsteps
And the face we used to greet.
We often think of the days gone by;
When we were all together.
A shadow o'er our lives is cast;
A loved one gone forever.
November brings back sad memories
To us who loved her best;
Peacefully be your home, dear Marguerite,
'Tis sweet to breathe your name.
—Sadly missed by her loving sisters and brothers.

That Cold

To successfully combat a cold, it is necessary to speed up the elimination of poisons and accumulated waste from the body. The best way to do this is by restoring normal nerve energy to the liver, kidneys, bowels, lungs and skin, by releasing constriction from spinal nerves. CHIROPRACTIC SPINAL ADJUSTMENTS PROVE EFFECTIVE in warding off a cold or in breaking up a cold which has become either acute or chronic.

MADOC HONORS HER WAR HEROES

Seventy-Five Names Of Her Glorious Dead Carved on Memorial

Colonel Roscoe Vanderwater, D.S.O., Unveils Beautitful Scotch Grey Granite Column To Those Who Fell In Great War.

IMPRESSIVE CEREMONY HELD BEFORE MEMORIAL LARGE PARADE HEADED BY PRINCE EDWARD BAND

Name of Canada Was Made Famous World Over, Declares Speaker, Who Pleads For Rights For the Returned Soldiers.

MADOC, Nov. 26 (Examiner Staff Correspondence).—Yesterday afternoon hundreds of citizens of the village of Madoc and the surrounding district stood bareheaded while Colonel Roscoe Vanderwater, D.S.O., Mons Star, pulled the cord which swept the British flag from the face of the beautiful Scotch grey granite column, which is the memorial erected by the citizens in honor to the momory of their men who did not return to their homes when the tumult and the fighting died. Although one of the speakers claimed that the county of Hastings and the village of Madoc had not resounded to the roar of the artillery or the rattle of the smaller weapons, the hundreds present yesterday afternoon were privileged to see a guard of honor of men who had fought in the line of battle and who were standing at their posts in the exact same equipment as they had so often worn into action. The guard was dressed in battle order, from their steel helmets to their iron-shod military boots. Battle flashes on helmets and shoulders gave the finishing touch, so essential to such occasions.

Seventy-Five Names on List

The memorial stands in the park about one hundred yards east of the armouries. It is of Scotch grey granite, and the six pieces, above the three-tier base, stand almost twenty-feet high. On the face, carved in large letters are the names of five engagements where the Canadian Corps won glory—Somme; Festubert; Vimy Ridge, Passchaendaele. On the east side of the structure is the name of one memorable battlefield, Ypres. Under this name is a partial list of the fallen. On the opposite side is the one name, Mons, with a continued list. In all there are seventy-five names carved in the grey stone. Carved in smaller letters lower down the face of the memorial are the words: "Erected in honor of the men of Madoc and vicinity who gave their lives in the Great War." The back of the memorial is perfectly plain.

The actual beginning of the memorial fun, which has provided the excellent structure which was unveiled yesterday, was with the women of the village. The Woman's Institute did much of the first work toward the fund and later the men of the town were asked to take charge of the fund. But this was not before well over a thousand dollars had been placed at their disposal. Yesterday, these people had reason to be proud of the successful termination of their efforts and the village of Madoc has a memorial of which it is justly proud.

Impressive Parade.

At one-thirty yesterday afternoon, the parade left the armouries, and marched to the memorial, where the unveiling ceremony followed. The band of the Prince Edward County Regiment in red coats and blue trousers, with red stripes, led the line of march. Then followed the firing detail, Women's Institute, cadets, Daughters of the Empire, and the veterans of the district in mufti and with medals. The commissioned officers in uniform brought up the rear. E. C. Tufts, reeve of Madoc, presided at the ceremony at the memorial. He spoke briefly before calling on the regimental chaplain, the Rev. T. H. H. Hall, to lead in prayer. After the hymn, O God, our help in ages Past, had been sung, Lieut Colonel Green of Stirling, read the names on the honor roll. He said he deemed it an honor of a very high degree to take this part in the ceremony. The Scripture lesson was read by Sergeant, the Rev. J. G. Sparling, M.M. Military tribute to the departed comrades was paid in the form of three volleys fired by the special detail and the last post sounded by a bugler from the band who stood bareheaded as he sounded the call which marked the end of the day for every Canadian and British soldier. The impressive, but simple, tribute, of two minutes silence was paid before Col. Vanderwater spoke briefly. Reveille and a dedicatory prayer by Sergeant, the Rev. T. G. Marshall, concluded the service at the memorial and the scene shifted back to the armories.

The crowd that filled the armories made the matter of marshalling the returning parade a difficult task. But without delay, characteristic of the military, the troops were arranged in their proper order and the service began. The first number was by the band, a serenade, "The Little Grey Church." Then Colonel Vanderwater addressed the gathering. He thought that the interior of the building was much more comfortable than the open air, where there was a brisk, cold wind blowing, and he believed that sufficient respect and reverence could be shown inside the armories as well as out. Briefly then he sketched the events leading up to the Great War, and the state of

TWO STATIONS WILL BE BUILT

Imperial Oil Company Purchases Property For New Gasoline Depots.

VALUABLE LOCATIONS.

That Peterborough has not reached a "saturation" point as a city of many gasoline service stations is signified by the recent real estate negotiations of A. W. Blade, district manager of the Imperial Oil Compny. Within the past few days, those transactions have involved the purchase of two strategically situated pieces of property, on which are situated three large dwellings, soon to be razed to make way for new Imperial Oil Company service stations. The purchase prices total approximately $13,000.00, while the new establishments will represent a large additional expenditure.

Conroy Property

The old red brick residence and property of David Conroy, situated at the corner of Hunter and Burnham street, is one of the two locations acquired by Mr. Blade. The property is one of the most prominent sites in the city and has been owned by the Conroy family for a great many years. It has only changed hands four times since about the year 1863, being formerly owned by Sir Joseph Flavelle, and later by the Burnham family.

This property has a frontage on Hunter street of one hundred feet and on Burnham street of ninety feet and the purchase price, it is understood, was approximately $5,000.

George Street Site

Representing an expenditure of $8,000, the purchase from Miss Emma Stenson has been made of two brick dwelling houses on the property, south of and adjacent to the public library on the east side of George street, numbered 500 and 502.

According to the terms of the agreement of sale possession is to be given by December 1st.

The size of the lands purchased is one hundred and fourteen feet by eighty-seven feet. It is proposed by the Imperial Oil Limited, at an early date, to take down and remove the dwelling houses and erect an up-to-date service station. The two dwelling houses to be removed are two of the oldest in the City, and the change to be effected will be prominent to strangers and Peterborough citizens alike, as this section opposite the Confederation Square has long remained a residential section, so close to the business section of the city.

The new service station will create a noticeable change.

THE WEATHER

There was a sharpness in the air this morning that presaged the approach of zero days. The temperature was down to within ten degrees of that point, the zero mark. When the temperature scale which is now in general use, was first established it was thought that zero was the point of absolute cold — that no lower could be reached. That fallacy was soon discovered. Several men, who are wise in weather lore, have told me that the snowfall this winter is going to be light, owing to the excessive rains we have had this fall. The rain indeed has been excessive, and it is quite possible that the snow will be light, as the total for the year is generally about the same, whether it comes in the form of rain or snow. But there are exceptions, and to forecast the coming weather is more uncertain than betting on a horse race.—W. P.

TEACHER SPEAKS.

Miss Laura Wilson Gives Some of Her Impressions of France.

One of the strongest impressions brought back from her visit to France this summer, Miss Laura Wilson of the Public School Teaching staff informed the Peterborough Rotary club at its weekly luncheon to-day, was the feeling that the people of France still hate and fear Germany and have a chip on their shoulder even for people of Allied nations more prosperous than themselves.

Miss Wilson, who was introduced by Rotarian School Inspector Alex. Mowat, gave a most interesting address in which she discussed the impressions formed by her during several weeks in Paris and elsewhere in France. While they were received with courtesy by the higher classes of the French people, she said the lower strata showed a frigidness that was difficult to understand. They had realized that there was hostility in France against the Americans, but it was the experience of the Canadian teachers that this feeling also existed in the case of Anglo-Saxons, and it was exemplified in various ways by the treatment they received.

Miss Wilson declared that while the French war cemeteries showed little signs of care as compared with the Canadian cemeteries there, France on the other hand had most beautiful war memorials and apparently those of the war of 1870 were as deeply cherished as those of the last war.

She found that among the French people war was looked upon as one of the inevitable things of life, and as something that not only represented sacrifice but glory. The French resented the attitude of the Anglo-Saxon peoples toward Germany and they themselves lived in fear that Germany might one day regain strength and renew hostilities against France.

The speaker gave much interesting information about the France of to-day, the high cost of living, the attitude toward tourists and other features, and her address was thoroughly enjoyed.

Rotarian Fred L. Roy expressed the thanks of the Rotary Club, and Rotarian Father Paul Costello presented Miss Wilson with a bouquet of flowers. President W. R. Morris added a few words of appreciation.

President Morris at to-day's meeting reported the successful opening of the Rotary Hall at Oshawa, and the first luncheon of the Campbellford club, both of which events were attended by delegations of Peterborough Rotarians. He also reminded Rotarians of the fact that Rotarians were to have dinner at the St. Joseph's Hospital bazaar on Wednesday night.

THREE KILLED IN PLANE CRASH

Mother Was Waiting For Son To Take Her On a Promised Ride.

FATHER HAD BEEN UP.

SEEKONK, Mass., Nov. 26 (Canadian Press).—While his mother waited for a promised ride, William Lang, 24-year-old owner and pilot of the plane he purchased two weeks ago, crashed to his death here yesterday carrying two youthful companions with him. The others were Stanley Dambra, 20, and Francis Clancy, 19. All were of Providence, Rhode Island. The tragedy occurred less than fifteen minutes after Lang's plane had taken off from the flying field at Pawtucket, Rhode Island.

Earlier in the day Lang had taken his father aloft, and it was while the latter had gone to accompany the mother to the flying field that Lang decided to give his friends a ride.

Two Little Girls Find Death In Can Of Syrup Used Water To Dilute Solution Before Drinking

GLOVERSVILLE, N.Y., Nov. 26.—An old syrup container held death for Eva and Nina Morrison, children of Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas J. Morrison of Wells.

At play about their home the children discovered the can with a remnant of last season's maple syrup in it. They added water, mixed it well and drank the solution. The following day they died.

Dr. John Warner, the family physician, was called by the parents early in the morning when the children complained of severe pains in the region of the stomach.

The doctor's ministrations did not alleviate the pain. It appeared to grow steadily worse.

Before their death the children were writhing in agony. Dr. Warner diagnosed the case as blood poisoning, originating in the intestines.

He said that some chemical reaction had taken place when the water was mixed with the stagnant syrup. Possibly corrosion of the tin container contributed the poisonous factor to the mixture the children drank.

Probably considering their treat a mischievous prank the children did not tell their mother of finding the can. They went about adding water to the syrup secretly. The can was found after the children died and its contents were analyzed.

ENGINEER CLAIMS FIREMEN MUTINIED IN VESTRIS CRISIS

Quit Posts On Last Morning—Work Might Have Saved Ship.

DID NOT USE GUN.

Members of Engine Crew Deny Story—Stayed Until Water Rose.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—Following the admission on Wednesday by Chief Officer Johnson of the Vestris that his officers defied him when he ordered them to get into lifeboats to take of passengers, and that he did not know what to do in this situation, Chief Engineer Adams admitted Saturday that the negro firemen mutinied at 10:30 o'clock the morning the ship sank.

He also admitted that he failed to get his pistol and compel them to stick to their jobs in the stokehold. He agreed that it was his duty to do this, and that if he had done it enough steam might have been kept up in the boilers to keep the pumps going long enough to keep the ship afloat until the rescue ships arrived. Adams explained he had a pistol in his cabinet but no ammunition.

Previous testimony had shown that there was some mysterious fault in the ship which caused her to take in so much water and gradually list all the way over to starboard. After Adams's admissions had come on top of Johnson's, the question arose whether there was also some mysterious psychological factor at work among the officers to bring about the admitted lack of discipline and the admitted failure to get the passengers off safely in the crisis.

Fireman Denies Mutiny.

Adams testified at the inquiry conducted by the Department of Commerce at the Custom House. Joseph Boxill, a negro fireman, followed him on the witness stand with a denial of any mutiny. Boxill swore that he and other firemen remained at their posts until the water in the stokehold rose so high that neither engineers nor firemen could remain there.

Assistant Secretary of Commerce Walter F. Brown at the end of yesterday's hearing told reporters his theory of the cause of the sinking was that pumping water out of the starboard ballast tanks, which was done in the hope of correcting the list, actually caused the list to increase. He said the ballast tanks were low in the ship and that when they were pumped out the result was greatly lightened, while the upper part, because of the enormous amount of water running all through the coal bunkers, become top heavy.

At the inquiry conducted by United States Attorney Tuttle in the Federal Building, a British subject testified and an affidavit from another British subject was introduced in evidence, corroborating previous testimony of mismanagement in handing the lifeboats. This evidence was regarded as a reply by Mr. Tuttle to charges in the British press that his inquiry had been unfair.

FIERCE STORM ON CONTINENT

Shipping Is Paralyzed By Gale Along the French Coast.

VESSELS IN DISTRESS.

6,000 Ton Freighter Reported Water-logged—Crew Unable To Leave.

PARIS, November 26. — Canadian Press. — The winter gales sweeping the French Atlantic seaboard for the past 72 hours continued with renewed violence yesterday after a temporary lull in the early hours of the morning. Two vessels had been sunk, one was known to be in serious distress, with another ship standing by, numerous others had flashed distress signals, and coast shipping was generally paralyzed.

The French coasting ship Cesaree foundered with all on board, five miles off Algiers yesterday morning. There were 12 men in the crew. The Italian freighter, Barbara, sank in the Bay of Biscay, but the trawler Laconbre saved the crew of 15.

The Admiral Ponty, a 6000 ton freighter, belonging to the Chargeurs Beunie Company, radioed that it was water logged 30 miles west of Ushant Light, with such high seas running that launching of the boats would be precarious. The steamer Macoris was standing by the distressed vessel last evening while the sea-going tug Iroise had put out from Brest to give further aid.

There are 48 in the crew of the Admiral Ponty, but no passengers.

The liner Aquitania left Cherbourg a little after midnight, when the storm appeared to be abating. It had delayed departure for nine hours. The Aquitania responded to the S.O.S. from the Admiral Ponty, but resumed its voyage to New York when the Macoris reported it had the situation in hand.

Unable to Enter Port.

The storm rages unchecked along the Dutch coast with five known dead, many missing, and others reported in grave danger. Not a single vessel has been able to enter Amsterdam since Friday.

A small Dutch vessel foundered in the Zuyder Zee. The captain, his wife and three children, were drowned. A German tugboat arrived at Helder with five members of its crew injured and the vessel itself severely battered. She had been towing a timber-laden lighter, which with eight men on board, was adrift during the gale.

After heroic efforts in which the tug was seriously damaged, five men were rescued but all efforts to locate the lighter with the three others were unvailing.

TWENTY-ONE VESSELS ARE IN DISTRESS

Air is Full of Radio Messages of Vessels Seeking Assistance.

COASTS ARE FLOODED.

Weather Forecasts Offer Little Encouragement For Abatement of Storm.

LONDON, November 26. Canadian Press. — A gale of four days' duration was sweeping the coasts of western Europe, the Mediterranean and Africa to-day, and taking a heavy toll of shipping.

No less than twenty five ships appeared on Lloyd's list as wrecks or in distress over the week end.

The air was full of radio calls of distress from vessels in peril. Lifeboats and tugs were doing a gallant service on all coasts and the toll of those rescued from threatened ships was far greater than the losses.

The casualties of the past week-end ashore were less numerous than might have been expected in such heavy weather. They were sufficiently serious, however, although the exact number was not available. Reports from several centres where the storm was the worst merely stated that "many were injured," or "numbers were injured." The damage to property was great, but there was no big outstanding disaster.

Little Improvement.

The forecast for to-day did not encourage hope of immediate improvement in the weather and the public was told to look for more fury from the gale.

The French coasting ship Cesaree foundered off Algiers with its crew of twelve, and a Dutch vessel foundered in the Zuyder Zee with five on board. Three men were missing on a lighter which broke away from a German tug. The German steamer, Heinrich Podeus was stranded near Zaandvoort, Holland. Fifteen of the crew of the Italian freighter Barbara were rescued when the vessel sank in the Bay of Biscay.

Coast Flooded.

The coasts of Great Britain, France, Germany, Holland, Belgium and Denmark suffered tremendous buffeting by the huge waves. There was severe damage to dykes in some places The low north Friesland coast of Germany was flooded by giant waves rolling in from the North Sea. In the town of South Westerland the roof tops were all that showed above the waters. The inhabitants of Sylt Island fought through the night to preserve the railway dyke connecting with the mainland.

TWO KILLED IN AUTO CRASH

Mother and Baby Lose Lives in Collision Near Windsor.

THREE OTHERS INJURED.

WINDSOR, Nov. 26. — Two people were killed and three injured, one perhaps fatally, when a heavy interurban car on the Windsor-Amherstburg run crashed into a motor car at the intersection of the River Front Road and Lafferty avenue, in LaSalle, late last night. The dead are: Mrs. Laura Monforton, 32, of Loiselleville; Frances Monforton, her year-old baby.

At Hotel Dieu are the father, Ovila Monforton, 34, and two other children, Joan of Arc, aged 8, and Genevieve, aged 7. The father was still unconscious at a late hour last night.

The Monforton car was turning off Lafferty avenue onto the river front pavement when it was hit by an Amherstburg car driven by Motorman James Daniels, 44 Wyandotte street east. The motor car was thrown 45 feet and completely demolished.

Provincial police from Windsor are investigating the accident.

World War Heroine Dies At Brockville

BROCKVILLE, November 26.—Canadian Press. — The first woman to enter Chateau Thierry after its capture by the United States troops in the war, died here to-day. She was Mrs. Louise F. Fleming, who served as a Y.W.C.A. secretary, with the A. E.F. She was awarded the Croix de Guerre for rendering service under fire in the Verdun sector. She was born here but spent the greater part of her life in the United States, returning a few weeks ago following an operation.

Three Guns Now Lie Amid Rubbish Piles On Bank of River

Returned Soldiers of City Are Incensed By Action and Toronto Officer Declares His Ideas Cannot Be Expressed in Printable Language.

MEETING OF EX-SERVICE MEN CALLED TO-NIGHT TO DISCUSS SITUATION THEY GREATLY RESENT

Chairman of Parks Committee Refuses To Comment, But Other Aldermen Admit They Knew Nothing of the Proposed Removal.

These guns, symbols of Canadian heroism and courage, were stormed and taken, perhaps in the last great push, perhaps in the storming of Vimy Ridge, or in any other of the famous battles in which Canadians helped to win freedom by putting such im-

The three guns captured by Eastern Ontario Units in the Great War and presented to the city of Peterborough by the Department of Militia and Defence were to-day taken to the public rubbish ground and placed on the dump there.

plements of destruction out of action, now lie on the garbage dump just south of the gas works and Cereal Company. Near by are the piles of refuse and old scraps collected from the scavenging of all the back yards and alleys of the city.

Adding insult, there is now written in bright red chalk, on one of the guns, "For Sale; 2 bits". The trophies are grouped in sad confusion about the trunk of an old tree. From the muzzles of two stick long poles, bearing signs on their ends, now obliterated. On the trunk of the tree is a sign, "To the dump."

Thus Glory Fades.

When the guns were presented to the city on July 1, 1920 there were speeches in which it was declared that the glory of the men who captured them would never fade. To-day the guns lie in the discard; on one side flows the river, the only clean thing in the whole landscape, while engines puff up and down, wrapping the guns in thick smoke.

Before the presentation, The Examiner remarked:

In view of the fact that Thursday is a national holiday and that these captured guns are tangible evidence of Peterborough's part in the Great War, the presentation of the trophies should be an event of unusual interest, and a large crowd is expected to participate. It is appropriate that the ceremony will take place in the same park from which a former Mayor bade public farewell to Peterborough's first volunteers of the 2nd Battalion, C.E.F. It will form a fitting finis to Peterborough's chronicle of glory.

The feature and the special opportunity and occasion of Dominion Day were realized by Ald. Gainey in calling his committee together. It is understood that Col. Clegg will make the formal presentation of the trophies and that Mayor McIntyre will receive them on behalf of the city and the citizens.

"For Posterity."

Then, at the presentation itself, it was declared that the guns were accepted on behalf of the city for posperity. They were to be full of meaning for "future generations" of Peterborough people.

Alderman H. Gainey, chairman of the Parks Committee was the chairman of the meeting.

In the absence of Lt.-Col. E. B. Clegg O. C., the 7th Regiment, the presentation was made by Major A. W. MacPherson, of the 57th Regiment who spoke of Peterborough's magnificent war record, and stated that in point of volunteers in proportion to population, Peterborough was one of the leading Canadian cities. He alluded to the memories which these trophies would arouse and then on behalf of the Department of Militia and Defence, made the presentation.

Mayor McIntyre accepted them on behalf of the city and spoke at length of the meaning they would have for future generations, and the city's remarkable war record, of which it should be proud. He dwelt upon the sacrifices made in the war, and the inspiration which these trophies should prove to be.

Following the playing of the National Anthem by the G.W.V.A. band, J. H. Burnham, M.P., made an address.

Mr. Burnham was followed by Thomas Tooms, M.L.A., who briefly traced the history of the war, and pointed out some of the lessons to be derived from it. These guns, he believed would serve as reminders of the sacrifice made in our defence and would inspire us to a better citizenship.

Rev. Father Phelan next spoke He drew a vivid picture of the 60,000 Canadians who lie in Flanders and appealed for a better and purer Canada, a fuller realization of the Supreme Power and the co-operation

BULLETIN HAS LITTLE RELIEF

His Majesty Passed Restless Night—Nothing Definite Revealed.

PHYSICIANS ARRIVE EARLIER.

LONDON, Nov. 26 (Canadian Press).—To the nation that awaited in anxiety over its sovereign's health, the first official bulletin to-day failed to afford much relief when the physicians announced that His Majesty had passed a restless night.

Anxiety continued since the statement did not reveal anything definite about the King's condition. The statement that pleurisy and variability of temperature must be expected at this stage of the illness, however, led to the conclusion that the medical advisers were not perturbed.

Physicians arrived at the Palace this morning earlier than usual but remained with the King only an hour. After leaving the sick room they remained some time in the Palace talking to members of the Royal household.

A large crowd gathered outside the Palace gates, anxious for the latest word from the sick room. There was the usual changing of guides, and during the ceremony the Coldstream Guards played cheerful selections.

It was stated on good authority that a message was sent to the Prince of Wales yesterday telling him there was no need to change his plans. The Prince is hunting in Africa.

There was a surprise for the crowds in front of the Palace shortly before noon when officials brought out a glass-fronted mahogany case which they hung on the railings. The frame contained the official medical bulletin on the King's condition, and it was the first time it had been posted.

Two Night Nurses.

Another happening that added to the anxiety was the stationing of two nurses at the King's bedside during the night. Previously he had only one nurse.

Queen Mary and other members of the Royal Family, however, went about their visits in the customary manner, and a message was sent to the Prince of Wales, who is now hunting in Africa, telling him that it was needless to make any change in his plans. The Duke and Duchess of York called at the palace and attended divine services in the palace chapel with the Queen and Princess Mary while Fervent prayers were being offered throughout the kingdom for the recovery of His Majesty. Later the Queen and her daughter took a motor ride.

Britain Issues Warning To Bulgaria

POWERS SEND JOINT NOTE TO BULGARIA

Great Britain and France Seek To Secure World Peace.

WAR IS THREATENED.

Cessation of Feud With Macedonian Revolutionary Leader Is Demanded.

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Nov. 26.—(Associated Press).—European powers Saturday intervened in the critical situation in Bulgaria caused by the continued bloody Macedonian feuds. Great Britain and France were reported to have jointly demanded cessation of the strife, as not only menacing to Bulgaria but jeopardizing the peace of the Balkans.

Foreign Minister A. Buroff, while not attempting to disparage the gravity of the situation, replied that the Government had sufficient troops to subdue Ivan Michailoff, but that it was most difficult to capture him and his thousands of well-armed Macedonian revolutionaries, who, when confronted with danger, flee to inaccessible mountain retreats.

Buroff declared that while regular troops are within reach of Patritch the Michailoff stronghold, the Government desires to give the revolutionary leader a last chance to capitulate before giving the order to engage him in battle.

The government dispatched a peremptory demand to Michailoff Saturday afternoon, saying that the sanguinary feuds must cease immediately or he and his partisans will be captured.

Macedonian Defiant

Undaunted, the Macedonian chieftain hurled back the defiant reply, "Any Government official who signs a decree against me, signs his own death warrant."

In ministerial circles it was said that War Minister Volkoff was in disagreement with the rest of the Cabinet and that the Liaptchieff Ministry had been weakened by the vigorous diplomatic representations made by Great Britain and France. The vendetta between the Macedonian factions has claimed fresh victims. It was learned that two men, Apostoloff and Popoff, had been slain here a few days ago after leaving a meeting. They were said to have opposed the Michailoff faction. Another killing was reported at Kustendil, Bulgaria, where the mayor of the village was assassinated.

In contradition of these reports were statements by Finance Minister Moloff and the Bulgarian news agency. The Finance Minister categorically denied any serious troubles had arisen from the Macedonian disputes and said that rumors had been spread with the sole object of compromising the success of the Bulgarian loan abroad.

The news agency statement read, "We are in a position to declare that not only in Sofia and Bulgarian Macedonia but throughout the entire country perfect order prevails.

FEVER OF KING INCREASES; LUNG CONGESTION IMPROVES

His Majesty Is Reported To Have Had a Disturbed Day On Sunday.

STRENGTH MAINTAINED.

Last Bulletin Said King George Passed a Good Night.

LONDON, Nov. 26. — (Canadian Press.)—Buckingham Palace officials said at 3 a.m. that King George was passing a good night. At midnight it had been said that he was resting more comfortably than earlier in the evening when he was still suffering from the high fever which had disturbed him during the day.

The Daily Mail reports somewhat obscurely, "There is in the King's case a lurking microbe which may possibly become active and until it is routed the case cannot be said to be without danger."

The newspaper adds that the cheerfulness of King George is considered by his physicians to be an asset toward his recovery and to foster it he is allowed, at his own request, to receive visits from certain friends. He prefers talking to reading. He is proving an excellent patient and shows no anxiety but treats lightly of his illness. His only complaint is that he is confined to bed.

Although latest bulletins on the condition of King George, who has been suffering from a lung ailment, are encouraging, it is obvious, even to a layman that His Majesty's illness will render him totally unable to pursue his usual daily round for some time. It is almost inevitable, therefore, that the Royal family's ordinary plans for Christmas will have to undergo alterations

Usually Go To Sandringham.

Since their married life began, King George and Queen Mary have spent almost every Christmas at Sandringham. As the Prince and Princess of Wales, during the reign of King Edvard VII and during the widowhood of Queen Alexander, they occupied York Cottage—cottage is a modest term for such a dwelling, although the house is quite unpretentious. After the death of Queen Alexandra King George and Queen Mary moved into Sandringham House which was the personal property of King Edward bequeathed first to Queen Alexandra and later to King George.

As far as possible, Christmas at Sandringham with the royal family has been as much a family re-union as with a Britisher more lowly placed, but it was always the grotesque invention among certain light-hearted journalists to depict Sandringham at Yuletide as a sort of glorified "Dingley Dell."

Christmas for many older royalties brings many sad memories. His Majesty's elder brother, the Duke of Clarence, was in the grip of an illness one Christmas, which later caused his death and hence altered the whole life of King George. Queen Victoria, unknown to the general public, was sinking slowly toward death another Chrismas and it was during the Christmas season following the close of the war that King George's youngest son, Prince Charles, who was 13 years of age, passed into a condition which ended in his death

Automobile Strikes Colt; Both Hind Legs Are Broken

(Examiner Correspondence.)

BAILIEBORO, Nov 26.—While James and Harry Campbell were bringing a number of excellent colts from a ranch on Friday afternoon, a car travelling at a fast rate of speed along the provincial highway hit one of the colts, breaking both of its hind legs. Mr Campbell was forced to shoot the animal.

The loss sustained was quite a heavy one as the colt was a very valuable animal. The car was also considerably damaged.

THREE ACTIONS OVER ONE CALF

Judge Huycke Delivers $55.00 Judgment in Favor of Plaintiff.

MANY WITNESSES

Three law suits over one calf was the record of the case in Port Hope of Harvey Wallace against Thomas McMillan, tool maker, in the Canadian General Electric Company, of Peterborough.

The plaintiff, Harvey Wallace, is a farmer, who lives near Welcome, and he sued Thomas McMillan for $55.00, the price of a calf which was killed on the Provincial Highway, near Welcome, one night last summer, when Mr. McMillan was bringing All Saints' baseball team from, Toronto.

Some time ago Traffic Officer Halleck laid a charge against Mr. Wallace for permitting his cattle to run at large upon the Provincial Highway, and Mr. Wallace was fined, but he appealed from his conviction, and failed in the appeal.

Jury Present

However, on Friday, the action he brought against Mr. McMillan, for damages for killing his calf, was sustained by a jury, with His Honor Judge Huycke sitting, and the jury found that Mr. McMillan was negligent, and was assessed damages at $55.00, and Judge Huycke gave judgment for $55.00, and costs of the action. The case lasted nearly all afternoon, and a large number of witnesses were examined as to the condition of the gates through which it was thought the cattle had escaped upon the highway. An action is pending by Mr. McMillan against Mr. Wallace for damages, as the automobile of Mr. McMillan was completely wrecked in the accident.

J. F. Strickland, of Peterborough, appeared for Mr. McMillan, and Hon. G. N. Gordon, K.C., appeared for Mr. Harvey Wallace.

DEMAND SMALL FOR POTATOES

Manvers' Farmers Have Shipped Very Few Cars This Fall.

PRICE IS LOW

(Examiner Correspondence).

PONTYPOOL, Nov. 26.—W. H. Hooper shipped a carload of potatoes from this district on Thursday. Fewer cars have been shipped from this locality than for many years. The variety and quality of the Manvers potatoes is well known and hard to be equalled, but a poor demand has existed this fall. The price has been low and few farmers have received much profit from their tubers. This failure, accompanied by just a fair grain crop, has made times harder than usual and unless some farmers receive a higher compensation for their labors, the acreage of potatoes will be much less in the future.

Mr. James Mitchell and son, of Ballyduff, intend holding an auction sale in November 30, when they will dispose of a large number of well-bred stock and a good line of farm implements.

To Hold Bazaar.

The Ladies' Aid intend holding their annual bazaar on Wednesday, December 12, with a larger display of articles for sale than ever before. It is expected that a play will be held in the evening.

NEW SKATING RINK PLANNED BY CLUB

Rosseath Citizens Will Use Agriculture Building at Fair Grounds.

(Examiner Correspondence).

ROSENEATH, Nov. 26. — S. A. Tucker and others have completed the work in building two cisterns in connection with the new agricultural building. A cistern at each end of the 110-foot building, they are 10 feet deep, 6 feet square and cased with a 5-inch cement wall. The tops are covered with cement, reinforced with iron. The capacity of the cistern is 80 barrels of water. The Athletic Club is planning on using the water in flooding the grounds of the hall for a skating rink, and has everything in readiness to flood with the first heavy frost. For several years a skating rink has been started but never materialized. This year is more promising and everybody is enthusiastic to make it a success.

USES PLEASANT WAY TO END STUFFY COLD

Many Here Who Try Hospital Method in Own Homes Get Almost Instant Relief.

Instead of enduring the needless misery and pneumonia risk which often results from neglecting colds, numbers of Peterborough people are getting rid of head and chest colds in a few hours by a hospital method which doctors are now recommending for home use.

The pleasant experience of C. H. Perry is typical. For three days the different remedies he used failed to check a cold which began in his head. Then he consulted his doctor who advised double strength doses of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral — a medication of wild cherry, terpin-hydrate, etc., which is used even in extreme hospital cases.

Relief began almost instantly, the doctor reports. By night congestion was clearing up rapidly and the "feverish," "achy" feeling was gone. He continued the treatment as his doctor directed and in a day or so the cold was entirely gone.

Note: Other cases reported daily—all certified by attending physicians.

This hospital certified medicine quickly penetrates and heals inflamed linings of the air passages. Absorbed by the system it helps get rid of congestion, reduces fever and drives out the cold from the nose passages, throat and chest.

Just a few pleasant spoonfuls of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral now and you, too, will feel like a different person tomorrow. At all druggists—50c and twice as much in $1.00 bottles.

She "CLOCKS" the Telephone

THIS YOUNG LADY'S JOB is to "clock" the telephone service. She sits there with her decimeter stop watch and measures to tenths of a second the time taken to complete a call. Other "clockers" record the errors made, the speed with which "trouble" is repaired, all the items of telephone efficiency.

If speed and efficiency are not constantly on the climb these are the people who know it first and then there is a grand hunt to find out what's gone wrong.

It is a good game. It gets results. That is why your telephone serves you better this year than it did last year, and next year will serve you better than now. That is why it has contributed its share to Canadian progress.

FOR EXAMPLE, seven years ago the average interval from the time you lifted your telephone receiver until the operator answered was 5.1 seconds. Today the clocker finds the interval cut to 3.7 seconds. Tomorrow it will be still less.

Seven years ago there were 95 slow calls in every 1,000—a slow call being one in which the operator takes ten seconds or more to answer. Today there are only 33 in every thousand.

The number of errors of all kinds has been reduced from 40 in every 1,000 calls to 16, which is over ninety-eight per cent perfect.

FIVE YEARS AGO you ran 27 chances in every 1,000 calls of getting the wrong number. That is down now to 13 chances in 1,000, or nearly 99 times out of the 100 right.

There are only two chances in a thousand now that you will be cut off. There were five chances in a thousand, five years ago.

There used to be eight times in a thousand calls when you would break in on somebody else's conversation. Now there are only two such double connections per thousand.

THERE ARE "CLOCKERS" at work in other directions too and here are some of the things they have recorded.

The time taken to repair "trouble" on a line now has been cut to one-third of the time taken five years ago.

The time taken to install a new telephone used to be three hours and forty-five minutes. It has been cut now to one hour and forty-five minutes. That means something in hours saved, with 139,000 telephones installed in Ontario and Quebec this year.

PRETTY GOOD results. But the clocker isn't satisfied. Nobody in the telephone business is ever satisfied with today's mark. The system tomorrow must always be better to keep pace with the Canada of tomorrow.

ATHLETIC CLUB HAS ENJOYABLE SOCIAL EVENING

Employees of Canada Cement Company Meet in Lakefield Memorial Hall.

MANY IN COSTUME

Euchre Prizes Won by Mrs. William Watson and John Carlton.

(Examiner Correspondence)

LAKEFIELD, Nov 26.—The social and athletic club, organized recently at the Lakefield plant of Canada Cement Company, held its first social function in the Memorial Hall on Thursday night last. The hall was very prettily decorated with flags and streamers and festoons of rainbow-hued crepe paper which transformed the rather bare auditorium into a very attractive ball room. Card tables were set out on the stage and serveral tables of progressive euchre were played. The idea of having card tables on the platform so that the card players could look on at the dancing has never been managed with success till the Canada Cement Company did it on Thursday night. Music for the round dancing was provided by Ferdy Mowry and His Collegians of Peterborough and for the square dancing by Messrs. Ira Lennox and Thomas Sullivan, Jr., of Lakefield.

Girls in Costume

Pretty girls in costume were the rule and not the exception and the gaily hued frocks of every conceivable shade made a veritable kaleidoscope of color. There was no stiffness or lack of enthusiasm, for the dancing as the first notes of the music brought a large number to the floor at once. In the square dancing there was equal enthusiasm and never during the entire evening was any lack of respect to the hosts shown by over-exuberant behaviour or undue noise.

G. J. Elmsley, R. L. Mason and Keith Wannamaker were the committee in charge of the general arrangements and deserved great credit for the success of their efforts. They spared no trouble to make the affair a success tand they were rewarded by the enjoyment of the crowd and the smooth way in which every detail was run off.

In Charge of Cards

H. G. Armstrong and J. R. Hill were in charge of the card tables and managed splendidly. E. N. Pearson and T. A. Simpson were in charge of the tickets and, reckoning the habits of Lakefield people for arriving late at a dance, they remained faithfully on duty till after eleven o'clock. Co-operation was evident everywhere and the success was due in a large measure to the co-operation of all the committees in preparation and in the actually carrying out of the evenings program.

The refreshment committee, like all the others, was a competent one and a bountiful supper was served about 11.30.

During the supper intermission, E. W. Bailey, superintendent of the plant, presented the prizes for cards and the lucky number dance. The first prize for euchre, which was a handsome serving tray was won by Mrs. William Watson, Jr., and the men's prize, a smoking het, was won by John Charlton. Mrs. H. J. Brown won the ladie's consolation prize, a box of dainty handkerchiefs and John Young won the thermos flask, which was the gentleman's consolation prize.

A large box of Laura Secord chocolates and a box of 50 cigarettes were given respectively to Miss Mary MacKenzie and Jack Gilson, who were the winners in the lucky number dance. During the latter part of the evening serveral other novelty dances were put on and tremendously enjoyed. The dancing continued till the "wee sma' hours" and at the end, tired young people wended their way homeward, after a happy evening and fervently hoping that the event will be repeated during the winter.

A.Y.P.A. Euchre

Twelve tables of euchre were played at the A.Y.P.A. card party on Thursday night.

Miss Winifred Payze and Mendell Smith were prize winners and Miss Hampton and Mr. Stenner won the consolation prizs.

Bring Cattle Home

On Tuesday the snow remained on the ground all day. Because of the cold weather, farmers are bringing their cattle from the ranches, to their winter quarters. Some herds managed to get out and wander in a homeward direction, with the result that some who did not know their way home are lost. Threshings have kept the farmers from going for their cattle earlier.

SEVENTY-FIVE NAMES OF HER GLORIOUS DEAD CARVED ON MEMORIAL

the nations fifteen years ago. He believed that the war was caused partly through fear and partly through ignorance of facts. When the war broke out and Germany invaded Belgium and the Channel ports, Britain was forced to take a hand in order to protect her own shores. Much credit was due Sir Sam Hughes for the capable way he had mustered the first 33,000, the first Canadian contingent and sent them overseas in such a short time. He recalled how the Canadians had acquitted themselves gallantly in such engagements as the second battle of Ypres, Festubert, Gavinchy, the Somme, Hill 70, Passchendaele, Vimy Ridge, and particularly during the last hundred days of the war. There were also a series of minor engagements fought during the months of winter trench warfare that had made the name of Canada famous the world over. He hoped that the honor and respect which the memorial showed to these men, who would never return, would serve as an inspiration to the younger generation as they passed it each day on their way to and from school, and that it would serve to unite them into one body under one flag, the Union Jack.

Hon. J. R. Cooke Ill.

The Hon. J. R. Cooke, M.P.P., who was to have spoken, was ill in his bed and not able to attend the ceremony. Captain, the Rev. Father J. V. Meagher, was the next to address the throng. He expressed his thanks to the committee for having afforded him the privilege of speaking at the ceremony. He had been a chaplain overseas, but had not been serving in the forward areas, he claimed. He put himself down more as a spectator than a participator. But the deeds of the men who fought and those who died, did not require words from him to sing their praises. They were written in the pages of history for all men to read. But while Father Meagher paid tribute to the dead, he also pleaded for the rights of the living returned men. He thought they should be done honour as well.

Lieut.-Col. H. J. Smith, Trenton, recalled the harrowing ordeal of the parting of loved ones when the troops were leaving for overseas. The women had been brave, and had sent the boys away with smiles that hid the anxious hearts that were breaking lest their loved ones should never return. Then had followed the days, weeks, months and in some cases, years of anxious waiting, when those at home did not know what minute would bring a curt but polite message from the war department saying that something had befallen a kinsman, wounded, prisoner, dead, or killed in action. Colonel Smith also pleaded for consideration and honor for the men who had come back. They, too, had fought in these same battles. Monuments, he said, were never erected to men "simply because he was a millionaire." They were erected to men who had done something that their fellowmen might live better. The men whose names were on the memorial, had given all in response to the call for men. They would not be slaves to any man. But the fight which they had carried out, was not yet finished. There was war to be waged against lawlessness, intolerance and the vices of the present modern times. It was the duty of the living to continue to combat these conditions in respect to the dead.

The Rev. A. E. Stewart, who had been a clergyman in Madoc from 1914 till 1928, recalled the events of the village during that period. "Idle Fancy" an overture by the band, preceded the address of Dr. A. T. Embury, M.P.

Dr. Embury recalled the purpose of the meeting, to do honor to the war dead of Madoc and vicinity. He thought it fitting that officials of both church and state should be present to give addresses. Canada he said, was blessed with a responsible government, responsible to the people and which was, in reality, the voice of the people. This was not the case in Germany. There, momentous questions were left to the decision of a few high officials. This did not tend, he thought, toward patriotism. But in Canada there were none more patriotic than the people of Hastings county and the village of Madoc.

Receives Applause.

That the Rev. Hall had enjoyed much popularity with both soldiers and civilians was attested by the burst of spontaneous applause which greeted his impromptu appearance on the platform. He said he had been warned by some of the boys to "make it short", and he would do so. He had not been in Madoc when the troops went overseas, but had been there to welcome them back. He was pleased to recall the receptions tendered the men as they returned to their native village and also the spontaneous response which had been manifest at the first armistice service when the news of the signing of the agreement was officially received. Now, he claimed, it was the duty of each and every person present to ask themselves what they were doing to bring about universal peace.

W. E. Tummon, M.P., congratulated those responsible for the fine memorial which had been unveiled. He was able, he said, to recall to his memory, practically every man whose name appeared on the stone. It was just ten years since the cease-fire order had been given and the fighting ceased, he said. And there were still many things to keep the memory of that day clear in our minds.

There were many duties for the present generation. No war drums or cannons had ever sounded in the village of Madoc, he said. But it must not be allowed to pass into the dim forgetfulness of the past that 50,000 Canadian dead were buried in the fields of France, in plots that had been dedicated to Canada. Maple trees had been shipped from this country in the hope that they would grow in the foreign soil and that the Canadians would sleep the better in the shade of the trees that they loved so well at home.

The Rev. G. W. Rivers, Madoc United Church, spoke briefly. The next number was an overture by the band, "Zenith." The Rev. MacTavish also spoke.

Honors Captain Broad.

Major B. C. Donnan said he brought good news. He was the last speaker and had been warned by his comrades to be brief. He paid high tribute to the Canadian dead and particularly to those from the village of Madoc. But he wished also to honor the name of a man from the village of Madoc who had enlisted as a private soldier in 1914 and returned as a commissioned officer. There was a burst of applause as the speaker asked permission of the chair to name the officer. Captain Broad of Madoc was the officer named. He was called to the platform but was not present at the moment.

"Abide With Me," the benediction by the Rev. W. G. Lansbury and the National Anthem closed the ceremony.

Place Wreaths.

Before going to the Armouries for the service, there were thirteen wreaths placed on the memorial. These were from St. John's Church; Sacred Heart Church; The Moira Chapter, I.O.D.E., Madoc; The High School; Trinity United Church; The War Veterans; the Chairman of the Memorial Committee; St. Peter's Presbyterian Church; the Village of Madoc; the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Belleville Branch of the Canadian Legion; Given and Son of Belleville; W.C.T.U.; Mrs. George Harris. The wreath placed by Mrs. Harris was to the memory of her son, Harold B. Harris, whose name is one inscribed on the memorial.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., Nov. 26—(Canadian Press).—The demand from foreign buyers for grain here Saturday was quiet and little business transacted. The trade in cash grain in the domestic market was also inactive but values were steady.

Prices for all grades of spring and winter wheat flour were well maintained under a good demand.

The inquiry for all lines of millfeed continued active and the undertone to the market was firm. The tone of the market for standard grades of rolled oats was steady with a moderate trade passing.

A moderate amount of business was worked in butter and values were unchanged. Receipts Saturday were 933 packages.

The export and local trade in cheese showed a slight improvement and a fair volume of business was done at steady prices. Receipts were 3,170 boxes.

The trade in fresh and storage eggs continued active and prices for all grades were firmly maintained. Receipts were 2,410 cases.

Further weakness developed in the potato market and prices suffered a further recession. New Brunswick Green Mountains sold at 50 to 55c per bag of 90 lbs., in bulk, and Prince Edward Island cobblers sold at 70c per 90-lb. bag, in bulk, and Green Mountains sold at 80c. The market for beans was steady under a moderate demand. Imported beans sold at $5.25 per bushel, and Canadian grades at $4.85 to $4.90 per bushel, ex-store.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, Ills., Nov. 26.—(Canadian Press).—Corn prices headed downgrade fast Saturday, and in the end carried other grain along. Action of the corn market was largely a result of efforts to anticipate the bearish effects of an expected larger movement of the corn crop next week. Closing quotations of corn were heavy 1¼c to 1⅝c a bushel net lower. The finish in wheat was unsettled, ¼c to ¾ and ⅞c down, oats ¼ to ½c off, and provisions unchanged to a setback of 12c.

With the official forecast pointing to generally auspicious conditions all of next week for the movement of the corn crop, traders flocked to the selling side of the corn market Saturday, and prices began to drop as soon as business opened. Some moisture was indicated by the forecast, but the outlook as a whole was construed as decidedly favorable for enlargements of recepits of corn at terminal centers, notwithstanding that Saturday's country offerings of corn to arrived lacked volume.

Colder temperatures as well as clear skies appeared likely to form the rule in the corn belt, and these conditions were relied upon by speculative sellers as sufficient to enable farmers to get into the fields on a greater scale to gather the new corn crop. Meanwhile, much notice was also taken of reports from western states implying that cattle feeding this winter in the region referred to will be on considerably reduced scale. Under such circumstances, closing prices for the day in the corn market were at almost the bottom level reached, with many holders of future deliveries letting go and commission houses buying inadequate to support the market.

Wheat and oats worked lower; largely in sympathy with corn weakness, although at first wheat showed an upward trend on account of an unexpected upturn in quotations at Liverpool. Wheat crop advices from Argentina, however, were a little more favorable, with rain looked for in drought sections to the south and weather in the harvest region fine.

Provisions were somewhat easier on account of scattered selling.

FEVER OF KING

three weeks later, Prince John had been afflicted since his birth and the fact that his affliction was hopeless, had never been concealed.

Will Not Go On a Cruise.

It has been announced that if King George recovers his health he will not undertake another Mediterranean cruise. Whether he will go to Sandringham will depend of course, largely upon the rapidity of his recovery and the advice of his physicians.

Norfolk weather is not particularly inviting at this season of the year. The atmosphere is usually damp, the country being low-lying. It would not be surprising if the doctors order His Majesty to some place like Brighton. King Edward, some years before his last illness, was ordered to Brighton when suffering lung trouble and returned home much improved. The only difficulty in sending so august a personage to Brighton, lies in the difficulty in restraining the curiosity of other visitors to the resort. When King Edward took a course, in what Thackeray in a memorable passage called "Doctor Brighton," the local authorities checked undue congestion in the streets about his residence by diligently painting every seat and railing within the immediate neighborhood. This was done daily.

NEW SOCIETY IS FORMED AT CAVAN

"The Ugoigo Society" Name Chosen By Members at Meeting.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAVAN, November 24.—At a meeting of the newly formed society of Cavan church, held on Wednesday evening, in the basement of the church, the name "The Ugoigo Society" was chosen.

The meeting was in the name of a social evening, R. Sutton, the president, conducting a brief business session first. A motion was carried that the young people of Mark St. United church, Peterborough, be asked to give their play in Cavanville, under the auspices of the Ugoigo Society, about the middle of December.

Miss Segsworth was appointed organist for the society.

After this business was completed the meeting was turned over to the vice-president of the Social department, Eldred Snider. The rest of the evening was spent in playing group game and contests. A lunch, consisting of sandwiches, cake and coffee, was served by the Social committee. At this time the prizes were presented to the winners of the contests, Miss Segsworth and Ralph Staples. The society will meet next Wednesday evening in the church, when the main feature will be the missionary talk to be given by Rev. George Pringle, of the Marine Missions on the coast of British Columbia.

The Light and Power Companies of Canada

AMONG the great and useful industries of Canada are her Light and Power Companies, operating in all places where man has advanced far enough to utilize modern conveniences.

Power generated at the falls is of no use to the ultimate consumer until it has been relayed to transforming stations and distributed in such a manner as to be usable by factory or home in any quantity desired; enough to run a loom, or heat a curling iron.

In spite of the great sums spent on this equipment, the cost to the individual is insignificant compared to the service performed, for the presence in the house of the electric wire means not only light but also the ability to use all modern electrical equipment.

From Halifax to Vancouver, our Light and Power companies are operating day and night for the benefit of the public.

The Northern Electric Company wishes to pay tribute to the tireless and unremitting efforts of our great utility companies to aid and encourage better living conditions throughout the Dominion.

INFORMATION

Hydro-Electric development in Canada represents a total investment estimate at over $875,000,000, while her water-power development approximates 5,000,000 h.p., which represents only 11% of the total hydro-electric resources of Canada

POETS AND PUBLICITY.

Wilson Macdonald, the Canadian poet, who calmly informed the Kiwanis Club here the other day that Peterborough had produced a greater poet than Longfellow in Isabella Vallancy Crawford, seems to have the knack of saying things that gain headlines in the newspapers.

Whether his remarks are designed for that purpose or by a fortunate coincidence just result that way, the publicity must be useful even for a poet.

In the ordinary course of events a struggling poet may write a lot of verse before he becomes front page copy, but Mr. Macdonald has stumbled upon a short-cut to publicity that keeps him in the public eye and should have a stimulating effect upon the sale of his verse.

When business in the poetry line is dull a tirade against the unfriendliness of Toronto or the discovery of a Peterborough poet who was greater than Longfellow does no harm.

But if Mr. Macdonald really wants to get Peterborough excited he should try telling us that we have produced a greater hockey player than Howie Morenz.

THE TRAFFIC SQUAD.

The Attorney-General has congratulated the Provincial Police, who were responsible for the bold capture of a trio of armed men accused of robbing a Toronto fur store, and Col. Price's commendation has been merited.

The constables acted quickly and courageously, and although carrying one revolver as opposed to an armament of two revolvers and a sawed-off shotgun, they succeeded in making the arrest.

The traffic squad also shared in the honors of the occasion as an inspector of that force first spotted the wanted men, followed them, and notifying the Provincial Police was responsible for their capture.

In fact, the part he played in the affair will attract attention again to the proposal that the traffic squad should be made part of the Provincial Police force and transferred from the control of the Highways Department.

There seems reason to believe that such a transfer would result in more effective work, not only in controlling traffic, but in the wider field of police work generally.

It is believed that this opinion is shared by many law-enforcement officials, and that before long the highway traffic officers will be Provincial constables under the direction of the heads of that force.

OUT OF POLITICS.

Sir Henry Drayton's ultimatum that employees of the Ontario Liquor Control Board must keep out of politics in the municipal, Provincial and Federal arenas, and must not only refrain from running for office but also from assisting in anybody else's campaign, has met with approval in Provincial newspapers.

The opinion seems to be general that the operations of the Control Board should be divorced from politics, and that such a condition could not be arrived at were employees allowed to interest themselves in political campaigns whether on behalf of themselves or of some other candidate.

While there may not be the same objection to participation in municipal affairs, and while there is no legal impediment to prevent Control Board employees from holding civic offices, Sir Henry is regarded as following sound principles in refusing to permit members of his staff to become involved in political entanglements.

There have already been charges made that there has been political interference with the enforcement of the Liquor Control Act, notably in Waterloo County, and the head of the Control Board is wise in deciding that so far as his branch is concerned he will not have to suffer the same experience as the Attorney-General, who has not yet succeeded in making a detailed reply to the serious charges uttered by an ex-member of the Provincial Police.

LINE UP BEHIND THEM.

The composition of the local committees named to deal with the work of organizing and carrying through to a successful culmination the Old Home Week project will inspire confidence and command support from Peterborough's citizens generally.

Their task is obviously not a light one; as a contribution to a community enterprise that they believe to be altogether worthy, they have consented to make the sacrifice of time and energy that a faithful discharge of their duties renders necessary, and for this spirit they deserve thanks.

And more than thanks, they deserve and should have loyal support from the people of the city and district.

Co-operation from organizations and individual citizens is essential to the success of Old Home Week; without enthusiastic assistance the committees are of themselves powerless to produce the results that are desired.

All doubt as to one important angle of the affair has been dispelled.

Enough has been heard from former residents of Peterborough to show that the first announcement of Old Home Week has been greeted with excited enthusiasm, and has produced offers of help from well-known old boys who are "for" the reunion and are eager to tell the world about it.

If here at home we can match their interest, Old Home Week can be already marked down as a red-letter occasion for Peterborough.

TRADE SITUATION IS GOOD.

The season of navigation now drawing to a close has recorded the largest movement of freight and passengers in the history of the country, bringing to transportation companies a marked degree of prosperity, says the November statement of the Bank of Montreal. Tonnage of ocean vessels arriving at the port of Montreal has been in excess of last year; inward cargoes have been larger and outward cargoes up to capacity of carriers. More grain than ever before has passed through the port, and passenger steamships have enjoyed steadily growing patronage by reason of excellence of accommodation and the increasing popularity of the St. Lawrence route. In little more than seven months there will have passed in and out of the port over 400,000,000 bushels of grain, or about 13,000,000 bushels in excess of 1927, this immense traffic stamping Montreal as much the largest grain-handling port in the world.

Some signs appear of a slowing down in industrial activity as is customary at this period, but the general level of production, distribution and consumption is high, especially in iron and steel, while such lessened output as has occurred in other industries is mainly seasonal. Manufacturers of automobiles and agricultural implements have had a busy year, and in the case of all industries it is to be remembered that comparison is made with 1927, a year of brisk, expanding and profitable business. Building construction goes on actively, with undimmed prospect of continuance; there has been a larger mining of coal and ores; considerable construction of railway branch lines; and railways have recently placed orders for substantial quantities of equipment. The pulp and paper industries have, indeed, faced a rather sharp decline in the price of newsprint in consequence of over-capacity, but the actual output of the mills exceeds that of any previous year and, with steady consumption persisting, is not likely to decrease in the aggregate. Hydro-power development grows continuously and the end is not yet. Production of steel ingots and direct steel castings in October was 106,987 long tons, an increase of 9 per cent. over September and of nearly 100 per cent. over October, 1927, while production of pig iron rose 3 per cent. in October and was more than double that of the corresponding month last year. As a whole the trade situation may be termed good.

UNSEEMLY TALK.

The action of the Imperial Merchants' Service guild in cabling instructions to their New York lawyers "to protect the good name" of the late Captain William J. Carey, master of the ill-fated Vestris, at the official wreck inquiry being conducted in New York City, comes as a refreshing incident in the chorus of vituperation and censure which is being raised against the dead mariner. So also does the plea of Rear Admiral D. W. Taylor that criticism be withheld until all the facts are available. The latter authority has had exceptional experience in the investigation of marine disasters, and gives it as his considered opinion that there is no evidence of criminal negligence. Yet that is exactly the charge which is being made with such persistence against the captain. One of the survivors, a Captain Sorenson, announces in public print that he is "thoroughly convinced" that the disaster was due to "the criminal neglect of her captain." It is only a personal opinion, after all, however emphatically it may be asserted. He proceeds: "I saw him in the last moment go down with his ship. He had refused to put on a life preserver. When he bobbed up to the surface after the ship had sunk he was quite alive, but he only trod water for a few moments and then let himself go under. He knew he was guilty. That is why he died rather than make an effort to keep on living." The unfortunate captain's sacrifice is capable of a far nobler interpretation than this, and one does not like to read prejudgments of this nature, stated in such positive terms. They savor of prejudice.

Whatever facts may be ultimately established regarding the conduct of the captain and crew, the eagerness with which this catastrophe has been seized upon and is being played up is a most regrettable development. It is easy to make allowances for the strong feelings of those who were aboard the vessel; but that much of the talk is an example of "hindsight being better than foresight," as Rear Admiral Taylor puts it, is more than probable. In any event, the placing of blame, if any, is a responsibility of the legal investigators. Bitterness will not help in securing a just verdict.—Hamilton Spectator.

STILL UNSETTLED.

The status of commuters resident in Canada and working in the United States is something akin to that of the well-known Mr. Finnegan, of "on again-off again" fame. It was little more than a month ago that the Supreme Court of the United States, with a test case before it, ruled that the Jay treaty of 1794 gave people domiciled in Canada the right to cross the international border at will. Loud cheers from the commuters. But, at the request of the Government, the Supreme Court has consented to reopen the case and to decide again whether persons resident in the Dominion can cross to the United States to work, or in search of employment, without passports and visas. It is not difficult to understand the anxiety of the immigration authorities of the United States. If only bona fide Canadian citizens were involved, there would be no problem. Canadians are not subject to the quota restrictions of the United States Immigration Department. It was pointed out, however, that if the decision of the Supreme Court was allowed to stand, it would be tantamount to lowering the immigration bars to all nationalities. Immigrants from Europe, kept out of the front door, would slip in by the side entrance from Canada, it was argued. The action of the Supreme Court means that the whole case is "in the air again." In the meantime, the immigration authorities at border points, where commuting is heaviest, are acting with admirable restraint. There have been no complaints that residents of the border cities who cross to work in Detroit daily are being subjected to any greater inconvenience now than formerly. There are certain regulations with which they must conform and they pass through the immigration hoppers with neatness and dispatch.—Hamilton Spectator.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

The battle of Southampton almost supplied some work for the League of Nations.

It looks as if that Regina football might save a lot of time and money by deciding to stay in the West.

A Government official is quoted as saying that hunters this year encountered no wolf packs. It is evident he had not been talking to those who hunted in the Apsley district.

The registration of the names of Peterborough old boys and girls will be one of the first steps in the plans for Old Home Week. Citizens generally can co-operate in this important work.

The old argument in regard to the cutting of Christmas trees is being revived. Most forestry authorities, however, can see little harm in the Christmas tree trade.

Ontario's best bass for 1928 was taken in Clear Lake. That helps to offset the general complaint of poor fishing registered by Kawartha Lakes summer resort proprietors.

A Thought

BOUNDARIES.

Breadth must have some limits; otherwise it cannot be breadth. The limits of breadth are as real and as well defined as the limits of narrowness. But many a man flatters that he is a broad man or a man of broad views, or a man of breadth, just because he is not within the limits of a narrow man, yet while he cannot define the limits which contain him.

No man can be a broad man, or a narrow man, or indeed any sort of a man, without some well-defined boundaries. Even a hole in the ground must have its sides or edges. It is not worthy the name of a hole without these.

GOD'S MINUTE.

I will, therefore, that men pray everywhere.—Tim. 2:8.

* * *

Our Father, we are Thy children by faith in the Redeemer, we are Thy children when we are obedient and Thou art pleased; we are Thy children when we are wayward and in grief Thou dost chasten us. We know that our sins are wholly displeasing to Thee, and they are painful to us. For Jesus' sake forgive our sins.

Accept our deepest gratitude for Thy tender mercies in all our past, for the promise of Thy grace in all our needs, for the assurance of Thy presence always.

Bless us in the duties to which we have been called; deliver us from the fear of man. Keep us from measuring our duties by the conduct of others, and help us to be great in Thy sight. Let us remember that there are but twelve hours in the day, and the night cometh. Help us to see that the great questions are issues of eternity, and may we be kept in the love of God.

Guide, O Great Jehovah, in the affairs of state; bless all movements, and men that promote our Redeemer's Kingdom; and give Thy holy benediction upon the homes wherein our loved ones dwell. In Jesus' Name. Amen.

BROKEN

A Story of Revenged Love, by Ruby M. Ayres

CHAPTER XLI.

"Go away, please go away," she whispered.

"Julie"—he caught her hands in hi "forgive me, Julie, say you forgive me, that you don't hate me, that you understand."

She shook her head, she could find no words, and Chittenham went on passionately, his forced self-control breaking at last.

"Perhaps some day, but God only knows—what do you want me to do, Julie?—after all I love you and you love me, it's for you to say—if you are willing to take me as I am—oh, my dear, don't turn away from me like that."

For Julie had dragged herself free, she even tried to laugh as she answered him:

"What do I want you to do? Why, nothing! There is nothing we can do; we must just go on. I always knew it would be like this, even last night. There's nothing we can do. I shall marry Lawrence Schofield, I suppose, if he will take me back again."

She passed a hand over her eyes as if to clear away an obscuring mist that would not let her see anything beyond just the immediate present that hemmed them in.

"Perhaps he won't want me either," she went on. "Yesterday I sent him away, yesterday I told him I wouldn't marry him after all." She laughed again drearily. "Poor Lawrence! I believe he really does love me honestly and sincerely—"

"You don't believe that I love you, Julie?"

"What does it matter, anyway? We shall never see one another again."

"Julie, don't be cruel!"

"I am not so cruel as you are. I never wanted you to come into my life. It was you who followed me." The icy despair within her was breaking up fast; she was beginning to feel pain, like a slow awakening to consciousness after an anesthetic. She felt that if she stayed with Chittenham she would break down, thereby disgracing herself for ever. The tears were burning her eyes, forcing themselves upwards. With a smothered sob she turned to rush past him to the door. But Chittenham was too quick for her; he reached the door before she did, barring her way.

"Let me go—let me go!"

She beat at him with impotent hands, the tears raining down her face. "Oh, let me go, let me go!"

"Not like this, Julie, we can't part like this—oh, my dear, dear child!"

She was in his arms, her face hidden on his shoulder, his lips against her hair while he whispered over and over again how much he loved her, how only she filled his heart, but what could he do? If only she would tell him what he could do! But Julie had no answer, and presently her bitter sobbing ceased and she lay quietly in his arms. It was she who spoke first, after a long silence.

"I'm sorry I cried. It was silly—and so useless. After all, it's no more than I expected. I always knew if I let myself care for anyone it would be like this." She drew away from him. "I think you had better go before I make another scene for you to remember me by."

She wiped her eyes and tried to smile.

"It's all right—please go now." She averted her eyes. "Please go now, and please never come back again."

It was what Chittenham had wanted her to say. With all a man's dislike of scenes and suffering he had hoped that she would refuse to listen to him and send him away, but now that she had done so, he knew it was not what he had wanted after all. He had wanted her to keep him against his better judgment; he had clung to the belief that she would try to keep him from Sadie for whom he had no feeling but the merest pity—a pity that was not and never could be akin to love.

With Julie sobbing in his arms it had seemed impossible ever to let her go—he loved her so much. No woman had ever before stirred his heart and his imagination—no woman ever would. If they never met again it would be the same always, she was his, they were made for each other. He thought of his wife as she had been when he left her an hour ago, frantic with fear, crying and sobbing, it made him shudder to remember the way she had clung to him, begging him not to leave her.

"After all you're my husband, and I've got nobody else in the world. I know I haven't been as nice to you as I might have been, but don't leave me now I'm blind, don't leave me, Giles! Oh my God, what will become of me?" Even while his heart had been wrung with pity he had found himself seeking for excuses, evasions. How could he stay with her? He did not love her, he loved Julie, and yet—

"After all you're my husband, and I've got nobody else in the world."

The pathos of her was heart-breaking—Sadie who had always been so independent, so free, to be clinging to him like this, imploring him not to leave her. In the end he had promised—in order to quiet her and to get away, he would have promised anything.

Now he was nailed to that promise. Of what use was it to say to Julie: "Wait—let us wait a little. Soon—in a day or two—things may be different, the doctors may be mistaken, and even if they are not—"

Well, what then? Even if they are not, what then?

His own despair answered him.

It would make no difference—nothing would ever make any difference. He could never leave Sadie; she was his wife, he was pledged to her by honor. Yet now that Julie had told him to go, he broke out passionately.

"How can you think of marrying Schofield? What happiness would it be for you if you don't love him?"

"I don't expect to be happy." Julie laughed shakenly. "Anyway it cannot matter to you any longer. Please go away and leave me."

"I can't leave you here alone."

"I want to be alone."

"Let me at least send for Miss Lennox."

"I don't know where she is and even if I did, I don't want her—"

"Julie, you break my heart!" She looked at him with eyes that were all the more tragic because they fought so hard for indifference.

"You'll get over that," she said in harsh defiance. "Besides, I don't believe hearts ever break."

"You're not going to send me away without a kind word, without forgiving me?"

They looked at each other and both their faces were white.

"I'm not sending you away," Julie said. "You need not go back to—your wife unless you want to."

"You won't admit that it's my duty then?"

She would not answer. Chittenham laid his hands on her shoulders.

"Last night you said you loved me." She drew away from him.

"Last night I did not know that Sadie was your wife."

"What difference does it make? I ought to have told you, I know, but it makes no difference to my love for you. It makes no real difference to anything."

She stood in silent apathy, not answering, and Chittenham folded her closely in his arms. He bent and kissed her lips, just once, a hard kiss of finality.

"Ask me to stay Julie," he whispered, "and I will never leave you. After all, nothing matters but that we love one another, Julie"—he shook her gently in his impatience, for she had not moved or attempted to answer him—"Julie, my beloved, I'll never leave you if you ask me to stay, if you want me. We belong to one another."

Julie looked up, her face quite white, her eyes cold.

"But I don't want you to stay," she said dully. "What's the use? I want you to go. I want to be left alone."

"You are angry with me. Don't be angry! It's not my fault this has happened."

She met the passion of his eyes unflinchingly.

"Everything that has happened is your fault. Switzerland was your fault, you need not have followed me as you did. Last night was your fault—"

The dull color beat into his face. "You are very cruel and unjust." She made a gesture of utter weariness.

"Am I? I can't help it, I don't mean to be. I only want you to go away and leave me in peace."

"You speak as if you no longer care for me."

She pushed the hair back from her forehead.

"I don't think I do. I don't seem to care for anything. I hope I never shall again. It's hateful caring for anyone. I—oh please, please go!" she broke out feverishly. She wrung her hands in impotent despair. She stood back from him, leaning heavily against the wall. "Oh, it would be kind of you to go away and leave me!" she pleaded.

Chittenham looked at her in miserable indecision. During the past hour he had become conscious of a barrier between them that was not wholly because of Sadie—not because of anything he had said, but, because of something which emanated from Julie herself—something forbidding and unapproachable. It was almost as if she were holding out iron hands to ward him off, and yet she looked weak and spent as she stood there—utterly broken.

(To be continued.)

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY WE ARE HALLOWED HYPOCRITES.

There are at least three types of hypocrites, the old-fashioned hypocrite, the hypocrite who leans over backwards, and the hallowed hypocrite.

The old-fashioned type is well known. He is the contemptible fellow who pretends to be better than he is. The kind of hypocrite that leans over backward is the fellow who pretends to be worse than he is. And the hallowed hypocrite is the one who pretends to be what he is not from an unselfish motive, for the purpose of helping another.

Hallowed hypocrites are found in every walk of life. Every mother is this type of hypocrite. She pretends to be well and ministers to the needs of the family when she is sick enough to be in bed. The lover who effaces himself because he believes that his sweetheart will be happier with the other man is a hallowed hypocrite when he pretends he has lost interest in the girl. The clown must laugh and make others laugh even though his own heart is at the breaking point. "Laugh, clown, laugh."

All of us are hallowed hypocrites at times. When our feelings are hurt we pretend we are in the best of spirits in order not to offend the offender. In brief, every rule of etiquette is calculated to make us hallowed hypocrites insofar as the aim is to refrain from giving offense.

This necessarily involves a certain type of insincerity. Nevertheless it is commendable because the motive is not selfish.

In the popular brands of hypocrisy the motive is decidedly selfish. By covering up the truth and pretending to be better than we are and putting the best foot forward we are selfish in the pig sense of that word. But in being a hallowed hypocrite we are prompted by exactly the opposite motive of self-sacrifice and sympathy.

We are hallowed hypocrites because we are more than brutes.

THE WEEK

Monday, to resume our task,
Doing all that duties ask,

Tuesday, and another chance
Plan or project to advance,

Wednesday, when the heart grows warm
Watching something taking form,

Thursday, and another dawn
And a day to carry on,

Friday, when the estting sun
Shows us something nearly done,

Saturday, the task complete,
Making all our labors sweet,

Sunday, with the hands at rest,
Knowing hearts have done their best.

Uncle Wiggily

A Bed-Time Story by Howard R. Garis

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE WHITE BANK

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

Once upon a time Uncle Wiggily saw Squeakie Eekie, the cousin mouse, creeping down the forest path in Woodland, where the rabbit gentleman lived in his hollow stump bungalow. Squeakie Eekie had on a warm fur coat and she even had some red flannel wrapped around her long tail to keep that warm, for there wasn't much fur on the tail of the little cousin mouse and the weather was cold.

"Hello, Squeakie Eekie!" called the rabbit gentleman as he saw the little tot creeping along. "Where are you going?"

"Nowhere, if you please," answered Squeakie Eekie politely.

"I'll come with you then," offered Mr. Longears, "for that's just where I am going."

So the rabbit gentleman and the little cousin mouse went along together down the forest path through Woodland. Pretty soon Uncle Wiggily thought he saw an adventure off amid the trees and, fearing it might be the kind of an adventure the little cousin mouse wouldn't like, Mr. Longears said:

"Here is a penny for you, Squeakie Eekie. Take it and run along that way and I'll go this way," and he pointed to the different paths, at the same time giving the cousin mouse a penny.

"Oh, thank you!" said Squeakie Eekie. "What shall I do with all this money?"

"You can buy a lollypop if you like," said Uncle Wiggily, "or you can put your money in the bank."

"What's a bank?" asked Squeakie, who was a very little cousin mouse.

"A bank is a place to put money so it grows and grows until it's a whole big pile," said the rabbit.

"Oh, goodie!" squeaked the cousin mouse. "Then I'm going to put my penny in a bank so it will grow into three sixteen pennies and then I'll buy a bushel of lollypops."

"Putting money in a bank is a good thing to do," said the rabbit gentleman. "Creep along, Squeakie Eekie, I'm going adventuring."

So Squeakie, holding the penny tightly in her paw, crept along looking on this side and that side of the path until she met Peetie Bow Wow, the puppy dog boy.

"What are you looking for, cousin mouse?" barked the doggie boy.

"I'm looking for a bank where into which I can put my penny so it will grow into a lot of money and then I can buy a quart of lollypops," said Squeakie.

Then Peetie, knowing that the cousin mouse was very little and that she knew nothing of saving banks, played a trick on her. Said Peetie to Squeakie Eekie:

"There's a bank around the corner by that big rock," and he pointed to it. "You can put your penny in there, cousin mouse."

"What kind of a bank is it?" asked Squeakie.

"It's a white bank," said Peetie, and then he ran away.

Squeakie Eekie crept around the corner of the big rock and there she saw a white bank. But it was a bank of snow, and Squeakie, not knowing the difference between a snow bank and a savings bank, thought this was the kind of bank Uncle Wiggily had spoken of.

"Oh, that's a fine place to put the penny Uncle Wiggily gave me—in a white bank!" laughed Squeakie. "I'll put it there and pretty soon my one penny will be two sixteen pennies and I can buy a bushel of lollypops."

So, going close to the white bank of snow, Squeakie tossed her penny into the drift. Now the penny was warm from having been held in the paw of the little mouse for some time and as soon as the warm penny fell on the cold, white bank of snow it melted its way down, leaving a little round hole to show the way it had gone.

"There, now!" said Squeakie Eekie, much pleased with herself, "my penny is in the white bank and soon I'll be rich."

Squeakie did not know much about snow. She sat down on a stone beside the white bank until the penny she had thrown in should come rolling out with a lot of brothers and sisters and cousins.

"What are you waiting here for, Squeakie?" asked Uncle Butter, the goat, as he came along a little later.

"Oh, I'm waiting here for sumfin," said Squeakie, but she did not tell what. And the goat gentleman, seeing a queer look on the face of the cousin mouse, thought to himself:

"I had better tell Uncle Wiggily about this. Maybe there is a Bad Chap hidden under that bank of snow." So away ran Uncle Butter, and what happened next you shall hear in the story after this.

YOUR HEALTH

CATARRHAL DEAFNESS.

Practically every case of deafness not resulting from accident can at least be partially cured by dietary measures. Complete deafness does not come on suddenly without warning, as there is usually a gradual loss of the sense of hearing covering a period of several years before one becomes conscious that he cannot hear as well as his friends.

There are a few cases where the ear-drum has been ruptured or some other portion of the hearing apparatus destroyed by accident; there are also a few cases where the sense of hearing is interfered with by a retention of wax in the external ear-passage; some are caused by a chronic state of engorgement of the tonsils, which may produce deafness, and the inflammation may spread to include the eustachian tubes leading from the nose to the middle ear; but by far the greatest number of all cases of deafness are the result of chronic catarrh. I believe that over 90% of all cases are caused by chronic catarrh.

An unusually severe cold in the nose and throat may cause such a change that it seems as if the deafness comes on quite abruptly, which is seldom true, as the chronic state of catarrh preceding the cold had been developing for a long time. The eustachian tubes leading into the ears have been slowly becoming more and more filled with mucus until finally only the cold was needed to cause the passage to stop entirely. Local treatment from your physician, in removing the wax from the external ear and opening the eustachian tube, will prove helpful in many cases, but you must remember the constitutional cause of your trouble and endeavor to remove this by the proper dietetic and fasting measures.

In most cases the orange-juice fast will bring a quick relief from the annoying throbbing and in some cases hearing is restored in a remarkably short time. Of course, this cannot be expected in those cases which have existed over a period of years since the delicate tissues of the inner ear have undoubtedly become thickened by the chronic inflammation.

If the trouble is purely catarrhal, one must not only avoid the starches but should leave out the oils and fats for a considerable period of time. Even the use of milk may retard a recovery. Remember that the blood-stream must be cleared of its accumulated toxins of years. It must be literally starved of the mucus or acid-forming foods for about a year before the catarrhal inclination will disappear altogether. In many cases osteopathic or other manipulations of the neck are helpful in addition to the fasting regime.

It is a striking fact that while those with catarrhal deafness always improve on a fasting and diet regime, they often do not realize the change which is taking place. They are so used to not hearing well, and are often discouraged, when they are actually being cured, unless certain hearing tests are made and they can be assured of improvement. During the last few years some fine testing instruments have been devised and cures are more numerous because a patient seeing a report of these tests is willing to remain on a careful diet over the long time necessary to effect a cure.

One who is deaf should not give up hopes of having his hearing restored until he has tried this method persistently.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Correct Blood Pressure.

QUESTION: Ralps J. asks: "What, as a rule, is the correct blood pressure of a man 68 years old in good health and spirits? Mine is 160 systolic and 100 diastolic. Many thanks for your information and advice."

ANSWER: The systolic blood pressure should range between 118 and 132 millimeters at any adult age, but perhaps 145 millimeters would not be too high if you have a tendency to high blood pressure. Your present blood pressure certainly is too high but can be easily reduced through living on a careful diet.

Gaining Weight.

QUESTION: E. J. writes: "I would like to know the easiest way to gain weight.

ANSWER: Gaining weight is not an easy matter. It is first necessary for you to discover the functional cause of your thinness. One thing certain, you cannot gain weight and be healthy by using any stuffing process. You must first of all get well and your weight will then gradually come to its normal.

Pyrrhea.

QUESTION: A. J. asks: "What causes pyorrhea, and what is the cure?"

ANSWER: Pyorrhea is caused by an infection of the gums which have been irritated from hyper-acidity of the stomach. In addition to following a correct fasting and dieting regimen (instructions for which I will send you upon receipt of a large self-addressed stamped envelope) you should brush your teeth night and morning with lemon juice diluted with water, rinsing your mouth afterward with water in which a small amount of bicarbonate of soda has been dissolved.

JAPAN ENGINEERS INVENT NEW SHIP

Working On Vessel Which Will Destroy Usefulness of Submarines.

TOKIO, Nov. 26.—(Canadian Press.)—Submarines have always been a great time of trouble in time of war. They have the habit of sinking ships at the wrong time and in the wrong place. Convinced of the necessity of inventing some other monster of the deep that will put the U-boats out of commission, Japanese mechanics have been working on the problem for some time.

It has been announced that such a ship has been perfected and two of these are now under construction, one in Osaka and the other in Yokohama. They ought to be ready for service before the end of the year.

Nothing is said of the principle behind the invention other than that it is a small ship, capable of more than 30 miles an hour, and equipped with nets which catch submarines 'just as we catch fish."

SCENES IN PARIS ARE DESCRIBED

Miss Mayme Montgomery Delivers Address To Women's Art Association.

FAMOUS GALLERIES.

Glimpses of the beauty and charm of Paris and of the interest of its old buildings and famous historic surroundings, was vouchsafed her hearers yesterday afternoon in the studio of the Conservatory of Music, by Miss Mayme Montgomery of the staff of the Collegiate Institute, giving "Impressions of Paris" as gleaned from her recent trip there, when she spent six weeks last summer taking a French course at Parisian schools.

Miss Montgomery gave one of the most delightful talks heard for some time by members of the Women's Art Association, to whom she spoke. There was a large attendance yesterday, the two rooms being filled to capacity, and one and all listened with spellbound interest to the charming recital of impressions of the ancient city, given in eloquent, poetical language and with a softly modulated voice that added much to the attraction of the address.

Speaking from memory, Miss Montgomery recalled many of the fleeting images gleaned from her visit abroad, from the time she arrived at the Lycee Victor Druruy, the old-time convent which is now used as a school and residence, to the moment, on departure, when she left her hearers sipping an aperitif at one of the marble-topped tables of the famous Cafe de la Paix.

A bird's-eye view of Paris and its beauties included a glimpse at many things; the Eiffel Tower with the garden of the Champ de Mars at its feet; the tower with its three floors and its holding capacity of 10,000 people; the Bois de Boulogne, haunt on Sundays of the Frenchman and his family, "along with the pet dog and the Victrola," the Place d'Etoile and the Arc de Triomphe; the Champs Elysee with the Tuileries and the famous Hill of Montmartre, the boulevard cafes with the waiter coming with two tall silver coffee pots to pour the liquid and the hot milk which goes with it to make "cafe au lait"; the sleighbells which adorn French horses all the year 'round, and the famous Cafe de la Paix. Here one sees the peoples of the earth; a Chinese student sauntering by with a French demoiel, a Hindu or a German with a French maiden or a Spaniard walking by with a pretty Japanese.

Then there is the Place de la Concorde, "where Napoleon reviewed his troops, and where, later, Prussian soldiers danced to the strains of the Blue Danube," the place where Marie Antoinette lost her head, along with thousands of others; the Rue de Rivoli with its myriads of alluring little shops, the Church of the Madeleine, and the flower market, where one buys roses at twelve cents a dozen.

There is Les Invalides with its golden dome, the Avenue de la Grand Armee leading down to the Bois, the Louvre and the Luxembourg. Miss Montgomery paused here for a moment to speak of the treasures of the Louvre, with the Winged Victory of Samothrace and the Venus de Milo as its chief art treasures. The miles and miles of picture galleries contain the famous pieces of the ages, the Mona Lisa, "padlocked now since she tried to run away"; the Murillos and Van Dykes, and Fragonards, and Greuze.

Famous Art Galleries.

At the Luxembourg are many examples of the sculpture of the French in the dazzling white French marble; that sculpture which has been designated as "the difference between nakedness and nudity," and here are the beautiful gardens of this wonderful art gallery, where the band plays every Sunday and where, at moonlight, it is said that lovely ladies come with whispering petticoats to dance on the grass and walk with Marie de Medici and Anne of Austria.

Of the Church of the Madeleine, Miss Montgomery remarked that it looked like a Greek temple and was more beautiful without than within. Notre Dame, she said, is beautiful within and without. A Little Sister of the Poor takes alms at the entrances and one goes in to see the beauty of the interior, with its three gorgeous rose windows and its statues of saints, apostles and knights.

"To get the most out of Notre Dame, one must linger there in the quiet and the silence." Here is Notre Dame herself, near the altar, a golden canopy over her head, and La Sainte Chapelle, built by Louis Ninth to enshrine relics brought from the Holy Land, with 11,000 panels of stained glass depicting every story in the Bible.

With brief references to the Pantheon, to the Church of St. Denis, where for two thousand years were buried the kings and queens of France, to the statue of Ste. Genevieve, patron saint of France, placed on the bridge over the Seine and looking down with watchful eyes toward the border of her country, Miss Montgomery took her hearers with her on a trip to one of the little cemeteries near Pairs, where British and Australian and Canadian soldiers are buried. This is called Villers au Bois, and is near Arras It is beautifully kept up and looked after voiced by the president, Mrs. W. ful and beautiful atmosphere" as she described in detail the pretty white headstones and lovely flowers which grace this small bit of God's Acre.

A sincere and enthusiastic vote of thanks to Miss Montgomery was voiced by the preseident, Mrs. W. Blackwell, after which tea was served and the members took advantage of the occasion to look at the pretty things on exhibit in the studio during Thursday and Friday of this week.

TWO NEW MEMBERS JOIN JUNIOR SOCIETY

Members Are Given Talk on Bees and Earthworms by Mrs. Chandler.

The weekly meeting of the Peterborough Junior Humane Society was held in St. John's Sunday school hall, on Thursday last. Mrs. J. S. Chandler presided.

The pledge was repeated, and then the roll was called, eighteen being present.

John Kilbrick and Harry Vass took the pledge and became members.

Miss Margaret Skitch read a very fine story entitled, "When Mickey Dear was Missing.

Mrs. Chandler displayed to the members, the 1929 Humane Society calendar. It is a 12-page one with twelve full color reproductions of Major Allin Brooks' famous paintings of Canadian birds.

Mrs. Chandler resumed her talk on the bees and also discussed the earthworm. She spoke of its habitat and of its value to the earth.

One boy reported having requested his fellow boys to leave a dog outside school as crowds are bewildering to dogs. It was also reported that a dog gave a fire alarm on Stewart street, not long ago. It was reported that one boy who is quite well known to the socie was seen trying to start a fight between a dog and a cat. This act on the part of this boy, especially, surprised the members.

MANY ARE HOMELESS IN TYPHOON'S PATH

Schooner and Steamer Are Wrecked—Aid Being Dispatched.

MANILA, Nov. 26. — (Canadian Press).Leaving thousands of homeless in its wake, a typhoon which struck the central and southern parts of the Philipine archipelago has passed into the China Sea after piling two ships on the rocks and wrecking hundreds of buildings.

An unnamed two-masted schooner was added to the list of the typhoon victims yesterday when the British freighter Medon reported that she had picked up a crew of six Filipinos in Manila Bay Saturday. The schooner foundered inside the bay.

The Japanese steamer Saka Maru was driven ashore on the Island of Masbate, southeast of here, on Nov. 23, and was still aground yesterday.

Relief measures for the benefit of sufferers in the central and southern parts of the Philippine archipelago, believed directly in the storm's path, got under way when the United States cruiser Milwaukee left for the stricken districts. The warship carried Red Cross doctors and nurses and a staff representative from the ofice of Governor-General Henry M. Stimson. The party was ordered to make a survey of the storm damage and recommend such relief measures as it deemed necessary for the central Government to undertake.

COLDS THAT DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

CREOMULSION
FOR THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

A surprisingly common error was the notion that sunken ships do not go to the bottom, but float at some mid-way level. Heavy objects sink because they are denser than wate and they sink clear to the botton cecause water's density remains virtually unchanged, despite enormou pressures at great depths.

THREE GUNS NOW LIE AMID RUBBISH PILES ON BANK OF RIVER

of all for the betterment of Canada.

Judge E. C. S. Huycke and Rev. F. E. Malott were to have spoken but were unavoidably absent.

The ceremony closed with a selection by the G.W.V.A. band.

The guns are placed as follows: The 150 mm. field gun at the south bureau and urged co-operation in this east corner of the park; the 75 mm. field gun ("Whizzbang") in the middle and the 150 mm. howitzer, at the northeast corner.

Ex-Mayor Surprised.

At the time when the guns were presented to the city, A. A. McIntyre, of 559 Aylmer street, was Mayor of Peterborough.

In discussing the removal of the war trophies from Confederation Square to-day, Ex-Mayor McIntyre voiced either criticism or approval of the act. "I was not aware that they were removing the guns, but I suppose some of the present city council could explain it. It seems rather an unusual thing to do, but there must be some good reason," said he. "I would not like to condemn anyone unless I were well acquainted with the matter. I recall the presentation of the guns and I thought they would be especially significant. It would be a shame to discard them entirely, but maybe they will be placed elsewhere. That is about all I would care to say on the matter."

Calling his brother, Alderman Malcolm McIntyre, by 'phone, Ex-Mayor McIntyre had him come over to his residence. Alderman McIntyre was also rather surprised and quite unacquainted with the reason for removal of the guns.

"The first I knew of the guns being removed was when I was going by this morning," said he. "The city team was hitching on to one of them. I did not hear the matter discussed in council or committee. I think they were suited to the park, though I remember a veteran suggesting to me that the muzzles should be kept pointed downward as an indication that the German nation to whom they had belonged, had been defeated."

"Insult to Men."

"It is an insult to the intelligence of the returned men," said Lieutenant J. A. McNabb, who served with the 93rd Battalion and the 4th Battalion. "Whoever is responsible for moving the guns should certainly have first consulted the returned soldiers of the city ,and in any case, it is a gratuitous insult to place the guns on the garbage dump."

Major Hurrell Dodds, at preent Officer Commanding No. 3 Company, 4th Battalions, Canadian Machine Gun Corp, expressed the opinion that the moving of the guns was an ill-conceived idea. "To many,," he said, "the guns captured in honorable battle mean more than any memorial that can be erected anywhere."

"It seems to me," said Major R. T. E. Hicks-Lyne, M. C. "from the information I have, a peculiar thing to move trophies captured in warfare without there being any explanation or understanding arrived at between the City Council and the soldier body. There must be some misunderstanding."

"It is a disgrace and an outrage against the citizens of Peterborough," said Lieut.-Colonel Charles Ackerman, present president of the Ontario Command of the Canadian Legion, and Past President of the local branch. "No man would give his assent to the order to move those guns who fought in the Great War, or had the least conception of what the war was about."

"The guns that were Peterborough's war trophies were not a symbol of war, but of war's end," said Major G. G. Winterbottom, M.C., Bar, D.C.M. "Their presence in Canada indicates that the Canadian forces helped in great measure to end the Great War, and their presentation to Peterborough is a symbol of the efforts Peterborough made, both through its soldiers and through its civilians. I think it was a mistake to move them without consulting the men most concerned, and a greater mistake to place them in so demeaning a position." Major Winterbottom is a past president of the Great War Veterans' Association. He expressed the opinion that the guns should be placed on Armour Hill as a reminder to coming generations that the British Empire won a just victory.

What Toronto Men Say

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 26.—Military men here, while declining to comment for publication until the fact were fully known, expressed deep surprise and concern at the action of the Peterborough City Council in consigning to the municipal ash can the Lift Lock city's war trophies from the park.

At military headquarters number 2, officers avoided any statement since it is not within their jurisdiction, but they exhibited the frankest interest in the matter which one of them described as a "disgrace."

It was pointed out that similar action had been taken in several towns in Scotland.

Captain C. R. Nash said, "Any comment that I might make would prove unprintable. There are no words to properly express the smallness of such minds. It is strange that this was not their attitude in the years from 1914 to 1918."

Meeting To-night.

There will be a meeting of all returned soldiers in the Canadian Legion Hall to-night at eight o'clock, to discuss the situation.

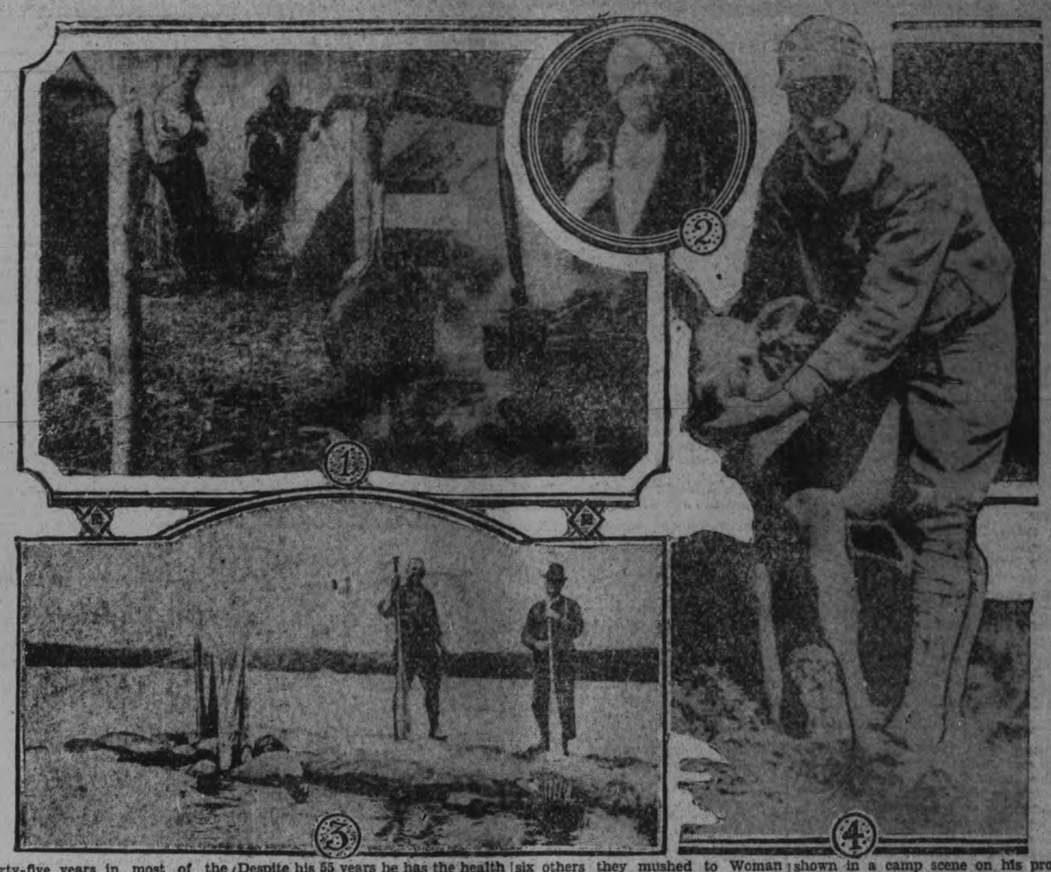
This will be preceded b ythe regular meeting of the Canadian Legion branch at 7.30.

No Comment

Alderman J. M. Greene, chairman of the Parks Committee of the City Council, refused to comment on the situation. The Examiner learned from other aldermen that they knew nothing of the proposed move, and no motion to remove the guns from Confederation Square ever pasesd through Council.

Don't Know What They've Done

Lieut.-Col. A. W. McPherson who, representing the Department of Militia and Defence, presented the guns to the city, said, "I don't think they realize what they have done in taking the guns to the dump. Those guns are just as much of a memorial to the deeds of our soldiers as the memorial they have in the park, and their meaning is a great deal clearer. Certainly they should have an honorable resting place in some prominent place where the children and people can see them. Something should be done about it."



Thirty-five years in most of the mining districts in Canada has been the experience of W. S. "Bill" Jackson, co-discoverer and one of the principal shareholders of the Jackson-Manion mines, and now he says he's going to sit easy for a while. Which may be another way of saying he may retire, but he doesn't like to say so. Despite his 55 years he has the health of a stripling. His father lived in the first house in Regina. "Bill" can vie with any oldtimer in telling of the west. In 1894 he was in the Kootenay gold rush. Then he wooed Dame Fortune in the Alberta coal lands. Then he got into the Red Lake rush, after linking up with Joe Manion. With six others they mushed to Woman lake. The rest is history. Each of the eight saw his original $200 grow into $156,000. "Bill" says: "The prospector's greatest struggle is to overcome his feeling that he is going to strike the greatest claim ever heard of." These pictures are pages from his adventurous life story. "Bill" is shown in a camp scene on his property in No. 1; No. 2 is a picture of Mrs. "Bill"; they were married in Fort William, Ont.; No. 3 is Medicine Rock at Woman Lake, where the first discovery of gold was made; No. 4 is "Bill" himself with a pet deer he captured in the mining field.

TWO INJURED IN CAR CRASH

Local Young Men in Smash-up On the Provincial Highway.

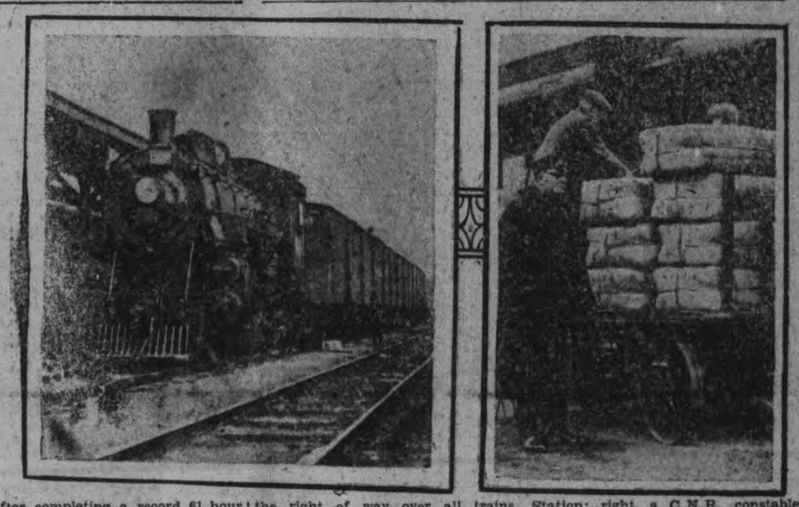
NEAR BAILIEBORO.

Their roadster said to have been travelling at a high rate of speed, two young men from Peterborough met with an accident on the highway between Bailieboro and Bewdley at about 7.30 this morning, which resulted in their being taken to Port Hope Hospital, one of them in a serious condition—the other less dangerously injured. Phone calls to the Bewdley garage, whence their wrecked car was taken, and to Highway Traffic Officer Hallick, of Port Hope, who investigated the accident, failed to elicit the names of the injured parties, the officer not having visited the hospital as yet.

Travelling at Fast Rate.

From these sources, however, it was learned that the young men were en route to Toronto, passing one car, the driver of which stated that they were travelling very fast. Their car, in some way, shot into one ditch, over to the other and then rolled over and skidded on its top for a considerable distance along the highway.

The two men were placed in a Toronto-Peterborough bus and taken to the Port Hope Hospital for treatment while their wrecked car was towed to the Bewdley garage, its top and windshield swept away and fenders and other parts of the body badly wrecked.



After completing a record 61-hour run from Vancouver to Toronto by rail, a silk train arrived in Toronto Friday with a cargo of raw silks valued at close to half a million dollars. Speed is the first consideration in the transportation of silk, due to its perishable nature, and the train bearing the valuable cargo is given the right of way over all trains. The trip just completed is a record,the cars covering the 3,000 miles from Vancouver to Toronto at an average of almost 50 miles an hour.

The above photographs show, left, the train steaming into the Union Station; right, a C.N.R. constable guarding the valuable packages as they are being unloaded for delivery to Toronto firms. The shipment included bundles for commercial houses in Toronto, Montreal, Sherbrooke, Drummondville, Buffalo, Hoboken and New York city.

IMPROVE STREET LIGHTING SYSTEM

Utilities Commission Arranging New System of Lights

During the last few days the Utilities Commission, have had their men at work arranging for a new and better system of street lights on Reid street, from McDonnel street to the boundary. The new lights will hang above the centre of the roadway and will be of much greater brilliancy.

There are limes which are almost as sweet as oranges.

ALBERTA PLACE-NAMES

Of the Indian tribes living on reserves in Alberta to-day, Cree and Blackfoot have contributed largely to the place-names in the province. A few Beaver Indian names are met with. Stoney Indian names are on record, but few, if any, are in use. Iroquois, Sarcee, and Chipewyan names are unrepresented in the province though Chipewyan names occur farther north.

Extraordinary effects have been obtained by Mrs. Percy Caldron of Penticon, B. C., by fastening masks to green apples. When the fruit ripens, it bears a sharp, clear outline of whatever object is desired. The apples above bear representations of flags, flowers, leaves, men's faces and other pictures.

STRANGE AS IT SEEMS by John Hix

NAVAL OFFICER PASSES AWAY

Commander of German Fleet at Battle of Jutland in May, 1916, Dead.

CHIEF OF ADMIRALTY.

BERLIN, Nov. 26. — (Canadian Press.)— Admiral Reinhard Scheer, who directed the German fleet at the Battle of Jutland on May 31st, 1916, against an English fleet, died to-day at the age of 65. His death occurred as he was travelling from Dresden to Mannheim.

Promoted to the chief command of the Imperial German fleet in February, 1928, Admiral Scheer conducted the historic battle so creditably that in July, 1916, he succeeded Admiral Von Holtzendorf as Chief of the Admiralty fleet.

In a good carpet there are about 10,000 stitches to every square foot.

This month has been a memorable one for Most Rev. Randall Thomas Davidson. On Nov. 12 he retired from the primacy of all England, after having served for a quarter-century as Archbishop of Canterbury, this being the longest occupancy of the chair of St. Augustine since the days of the Reformation. On the same day he celebrated the 50th anniversary of his wedding. While he is the son of Scottish Presbyterian parents, his wife, who was formerly Miss Edith Tait, was the daughter of a former Archbishop of Canterbury and accordingly has been doubly at home during her long sojourn in Lambeth Palace. Upon his retirement, her husband was created a baron by the King and thus will retain his seat in the House of Lords. He is the first archbishop so to be honored. The above picture of Lord and Lady Davidson was taken at Lambeth Palace upon the occasion of their golden anniversary.

DON'T THAT EVERYONE SHOULD PRACTICE

In this world of ours there are two small words that stand out above all others. Although they seem insignificant they mean a lot. These two words "If and Don't," are heard everywhere a person goes, and on all occasions. People are always saying, "If I only had this, or If I only had that," what they would do. Whereas should they take more pains in listening and following out the meaning of the word "Don't" they might realize some value from it. In a child's life the word Don't seems to crimp everything that he does not wish to do, although it is for his own good.

"Don'ts appear more often, but are not noticed so much.

The greatest laws of the land contain the word. "Don't" is found in the Ten Commandments; this word appears in nine of them, and in all laws the meaning of the word "Don't" is found in a vast majority of them. One cannot go through a full day without meaning the word dozens of times.

When you are getting dressed in the morning it appears immediately. Look at you feet; are you doing them justice. Don't wear short shoes, because they are the cause of bunions, corns and ingrowing toenails. Don't wear shoes with the heels worn off at one side as it is the reason for fallen arches, sore heels and weak ankles. Don't wear high heels for walking because then the weight of the body is not carried on the right bearing points of the foot. Don't wear the same pair of shoes continually as the perspiration from your foot, not only spoils the shoe, but also causes sore feet and corns. Don't wear the same shoes for every occasion as some shoes are built for special circumstances, and not for every use. Any foot specialist will tell you many things about your feet that you would not have the least idea of, and most of these things begin with the word Don't.

Care of Body.

Next there is the care of your body. Don't sit with your legs crossed, especially at your desk. Crossing the legs, or one knee across the other, pulls upon the ligaments and muscles around the hips, tilts the pelvis and causes a compensatory curvature to form in the spine, destroying the body symmetry and interfering with the nerve impulses.

Don't bolt your food. The mouth has glands opening into it that secrete the salvia which contains a digestive ferment that acts upon the starches and promotes their digestion.

Don't indulge in violent exercise after eating a full meal; the process of digestion requires a goodly share of the blood supply to properly carry on, and too strenuous exercise makes so great a demand on the circulation that an adequate supply is wanting to carry out properly the work of digestion.

Don't sit on the damp, cold ground, or on a cold surface of any kind; the sciatic nerve, where it emerges from the pelvis and runs down the back of the leg, is not far below the surface, and is easily chilled, leading to neuritis and neuralgia.

Don't sleep in a stuffy, over-heated room; the blood requires an ample supply of oxygen to carry on the various processes of metabolism and in order to obtain it must needs have a supply of fresh air from an open window or ventilator. Doctors, especially chiropractors, will tell you these simple things which are found prevalent in the life of nearly every human being.

Care of Teeth.

Next in importance to the care of the body is the care of the teeth. Outside of using their teeth for eating some people never give them another thought. Your teeth are an important part of your system, and should be looked after carefully.

Don't fail to clean your teeth after each meal, and before retiring; food particles get lodged between the teeth, and will cause the growth of cavities.

Don't fail to keep the blood supply in the gums in healthy condition by pressing your tooth brush against the gums when cleaning your teeth; should this be neglected the gums will become soft and weak, and will not support the teeth.

Don't use toothpicks, as they are often the cause of small cavities in the teeth due to the sharp point breaking the enamel.

Don't fail to have your teeth examined even long before you have any suspicion that a cavity may exist; often people neglect their teeth until it is too late, much to their sorrow, and results in having to have teeth extracted instead of just having them filled.

Don't believe the extravagant claims made by manufacturers of washes and tooth pastes; very rarely do they do any good and sometimes they do harm.

A thing of beauty is a joy forever, and much of the beauty of some people lies in their hair. However they never seem to care what they do to it as long as they make it give a striking effect. Sometimes they do more harm than good in trying to fix it.

Don't burn the ends of your hair as it splits the ends of the hair and gives it an untidy appearance.

Don't use soda or strong soap to shampoo your hair; it robs the hair of its vitality, and it will not be very long before the hair will begin to fall out.

Don't leave your hair oily after a shampoo, as it will ruin the effect of it, and it will not last so long.

Don't neglect your scalp; if you do so your hair will soon begin to fall out.

Don't forget to shampoo your hair before marcelling, as it will ruin the effect of the marcelling., and it will not last as long.

In the Motor World.

In nearly every home nowadays there is someone who owns a car, which has to be carefully handled to make it of the best use for any length of time. It is to their own advantage that they look after their car.

Don't start the motor with the garage door shut; the garage will fill with poisonous carbon monoxide fumes if you do, and many cases of asphyxiation have been known to result from this.

Don't start your car until you are sure it is out of gear. It will jerk ahead if you do and an accident may result.

Don't ride your clutch. Keep your foot off it as it makes the clutch slip, cuts down the speed and makes the engine race.

Don't drive your car with a minimum amount of oil; if you do you are liable to burn out a bearing or a connecting rod.

Don't forget that you are supposed to know the rules and regulations of the highway traffic act before you start to drive a car.

Don't drive fast on a wet pavement as serious accidents are liable to result.

Don't drive with defective brakes; you never can tell when you may need them.

Don't attempt to pass a car with traffic coming the other way. Many accidents are due to this.

Don'ts from the Post Office.

In everyday life the most important means of communication is through the mail.

Don't post your mail matter without checking the address. Every day the post office gets 10 to 12 articles of mail matter with the wrong address.

Don't forget to place the return address on the upper right hand corner. If your mail matter is not delivered it will be returned to the sender if the return address is on it.

Don't enclose coins or other hard objects in letters; letters pass through a stamping machine and if hard objects are enclosed the covers break and the contents fall out.

Don't forget to pack parcels carefully; if your parcels are not properly packed the contents become damaged and if the postage is not fully prepaid the addressee is called upon to pay twice the deficiency.

Don't forget to mail early, for mail posted early gets the preference.

Watch out for fires. The fire department is called upon many times each year to extinguish fires due to carelessness.

Don't put any ashes in wooden ette without first seeing that it is out, as many fires are caused this way.

Don't put wood ashes in wooden receptacles because hot ashes will take fire frequently, as they have small bits of coal mixed with them.

Don't hang electric wires over nails or any kind of metal pipes. This is liable to wear the insulation off and start a fire by short circuiting.

YOUNG GIRL DEFENDS PET

Clubs Huge Timber Wolf Which Had Attacked Her Little Dog.

WAITED HER CHANCE.

AMASA, Mich., Nov. 26.—The love of a girl for a pet dog caused Sylvia Lahti, 12 years old, to perform one of the most unusual acts of courage ever recorded in Iron County. Sylvia, who resides with her parents on a farm near here, twice clubbed a huge timber wolf into insensibility to break its hold on the dog's throat. She ended up by killing the wolf with a few well directed blows of the club.

Sylvia and her younger brother were alone at home when they heard the shrill cry of the dog. It was distinctly a cry of distress, and Sylvia ran out to discover that the wolf, coming out of the timber adjoining the farm, had attacked the dog and had closed its jaws about the dog's throat in a vise-like grip.

Without a moment's hesitation the girl glanced about, saw a large stick lying near and grabbed it. She walked about the fighting pair until she saw her chance. Then she raised the club high and brought it down on the wolf's head. Again and again she struck the animal until it slumped to the ground.

Sylvia ran into the house, found a rope, returned to the scene of her conquest and trussed up the animal. Then she dragged it 600 feet to the pole of a clothes reel in the yard adjoining the house.

No sooner had she completed that task than the body of the wolf began to quiver, and the animal started to struggle. Sylvia grabbed the club again and this time kept at her job until the wolf was dead.

White Nainsook

This was part of a clearing stock of fine cottons bought from an English manufacturer. It measures 37 inches in width, is specially fine in quality, and is actually worth about twice this figure.

In my opinion the Staple Department is the most important section in the whole store. I can boast of having spent many years in the dry goods business, and during this time have always paid special attention to this branch. But never before have I been in such a position to offer customers such wonderful opportunities for economy as at the present time, and 'pon my word, it has been interesting and encouraging to see the satisfaction which all my merchandise has given.

300 ATTEND FOWL SUPPER

Murray Street Women's Association Holds Most Successful Bazaar.

INFORMAL PROGRAM.

Over three hundred people were in attendance at a very successful bazaar and fowl supper held in the Sunday school room and basement of Murray street church, yesterday afternoon and evening, under the auspices of the Women's Association of the church. The ladies were energetic in carrying out a pleasing program and their efforts were rewarded by a large patronage

The supper was served in the basement of the church and the bazaar was in the upper Sunday school rooms. The supper tables were arranged with potted plants and held a sumptuous array of good things. Mrs. B. Jackson, president of the Association, acted as general convenor for the entire program, and Mrs. R. Gavine had charge of supper arrangements.

Ladies assisting Mrs. Gavine included Mesdames W. Kidd, Campbell, W. D. Scott, Alex Scott, George Johnson, Wray, McIlmoyle, J. Lewis, R. Hendry, Irwin, Irons, Tewsley, Thompson, Loomis, Blade, L. Smith, Rome, Harvey and Miss M. Garbutt. Young ladies assisted in the service also.

In the upper rooms, which were lovely with artificial 'mums in mauve and yellow, arranged on the various tables and in wall brackets, and with hanging fern baskets, the sale of various artiticles went on during the afternoon and evening.

Mrs. W. R. Breyfogle had charge of the sale of home-made cooking, Mrs. W. G. Shiner and Mrs. S. Hetherington of the sale of fancy work and Miss Jean Eastwood had the sale of books. Plain articles was sold by Mrs. B. Jackson and Mrs. W. Wilson and aprons by Mrs. P. S. White and Mrs. J. Kingsbury. Mrs. J. Post and Mrs. J. Eastwood sold candy in little mauve and yellow containers.

The table for afternoon tea was very pretty with its basket of real mauve and yellow 'mums and yellow candles in silver holders, while the smaller tables were centred with single 'mums in silver vases. Tea was poured by Mrs. J. Moulton and Mrs. F. M. Somerville, assisted by Miss Frances Routley and Miss C. M. Sexton.

Informal Program

An informal program was carried out in the evening, and was comprised of male quartette numbers by Messrs J. B. Sutcliffe, H. Graham, C. Westbrook and Dr. S. J. Graham and by a mixed quartette with members in Mr. and Mrs. H. Graham, Miss Trucie Pearson and Dr. Graham. There was also a vocal duett by Mrs. E. Kitney and Mrs. G. Liddle and a reading by Miss Edith Smith.

As an entertaining wind-up to the evening, an auction of unsold articles was held, Leslie Fitzgerald officiating as the auctioneer.

PILE SUFFERERS

Can You Answer These Questions?

Do you know why ointments do not give you quick and lasting relief?

Why cutting does not remove the cause?

Do you know the cause of piles is internal? That there is a stagnation of blood in the lower bowel?

Do you know that there is an internal remedy discovered by Dr. Leonhardt and known as HEM-ROID, sold by McDermid & Jury, Bond's Drug Store, and all druggists with guarantee of money back if it fails?

HEM-ROID banishes piles by removing the cause — stagnation of blood in the lower bowel. This simple home treatment has an almost unbelievable record for sure, safe and lasting relief to thousands of pile sick sufferers, and saves the needless pain and expense of an operation.

MARION'S MAIL

Address correspondence to Marion at The Examiner Office.

"Dear Marion,—I noticed your item about men noticing and commenting upon their wives' and friends' clothing. I have heard men say how snappy this one looks and how nice some one else dresses, but let their wives wear a dress of same length or color and what a row the dear fellow makes. Why, he even says he wouldn't walk down street with you in that outfit. Quite likely his wife wears the costumes quite as well as the one did he liked so well; she may even be younger. I often wonder if it is because they know how well they can't trust their own sex's wandering eye. Even at that it is very amusing at times and at other times it is exasperating.

Thank goodness my husband doesn't try to dress me to his tastes as well as look after himself. Perhaps he knows what a thankless job he would have. Sometimes he won't like a dress I wear at first but later maybe (couple of months) he will say, "That looks great, is it new?" Not long ago I bought a dress he didn't care for, thought it was too dark. When I wore it with proper hose and contrasting jewelry, he liked it very much, said it looked quite smart. Of course I didn't tell him I expected it would. So I have come to the conclusion that it isn't the dress, hat or coat, it is how you look when you're wearing them.

Will some reader please give a recipe for a dark Christmas fruit cake with plenty of cherries, other fruits and nuts in it? I don't like a dry cake and it can't be too dark to suit me.

Yours truly,
Councelor.

My Dear "Councelor!": You would almost warn one off marriage! I have heard it said that men admired other women dressed a la mode, but liked to see their wives and sisters "dressed decently"—and now you come along and confirm officially the truth of it.

I believe you are right about men not noticing—I think, myself, men go around most of the time with their heads in the clouds. I don't know what they think of, for sometimes one does not see much practical result from their cogitation.

I hope some neighbor will oblige with the recipe you desire. I printed the S.O.S. last week, but haven't had room for the letter until to-day.

I'll be looking for another of your delightful epistles soon.

Dear Marion:

As everybody comes to you with their troubles, I guess I'll be listed among them. I'm going to the P. C.I. and I am seventeen years old. I met a boy in a certain orchestra and I have completely fallen in love with him. I talk to him and I have been out with him. He loves me too. But we are both very bashful. My mind is on him always. He has had a steady down in the south end. He does not care for her as much as he does for me. But the trouble is we don't know how to get together. I have tried often to forget him but I cannot. I spoke to his mother and she said that she didn't know what to do with him—that he hadn't paid any attention to anything lately. Dear Marion, please tell me how I'll go with him.

Sincerely yours,
Lonesome "Blue Eyes."

Really and truly, "Lonesome Blue Eyes," I don't know what to say to you. It seems to me some of you youngsters would be better for a good old-fashioned application of the slipper. You love him; he loves you; you've been out with him; you want to know how to go out with him, his mother can't do anything with him—what nonsense! On second thoughts, maybe he needs the slipper treatment, too!

Have a good time, my dear, and live normally, and forget about "the grand passion" until you are a few years older.

Dear Marion: I have found a splendid way to use old flannelette blankets after they are unfit for use in their original way. I take one and cut it through the centre where thin; place outside edges to the centre of the mate to it, and cover on each side with pretty cretonne or chintz, and tie. It makes an ideal light comforter and can be used in summer when one does not need heavier quilts.

Mrs. H. C.: You can mend your cut figured table oilcloth very nicely by cutting a strip of court plaster a little longer and wider than the slip, and pasting it on the wrong side of the cloth, over the cut. If tightly pasted, this will keep the oilcloth from tearing more, and will prevent fraying.

WEDDING BELLS

BURNS—CARR

HAVELOCK, Nov. 26 (Examiner Correspondence).—Amid a setting of yellow and white chrysanthemums a very pretty wedding was solemnized in Our Lady of Mount Carmel Church on Saturday forenoon at 10.30 o'clock, when Catherine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Carr of Belmont, became the bride of Charles Arthur Burns, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Burns of Marmora. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. J. McCarthy.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was becomingly attired in a costume of beige lace over old gold satin, small, close-fitting metallic hat in the same shade, with shoes and hose to match. Miss Annie Carr, sister of the bride, as bridesmaid, wore a gown of peach georgette with mall hat to match. The bridegroom was attended by his brother, Gordon Burns of Marmora. During the offertory, Mrs. J. R. Bedford sang, "Ave Marie."

Immediately following the ceremony a wedding dinner was served at the home of the bride's parents, guests being present from Peterborough, Marmora, Deloro and Havelock. Later the happy couple left on a honeymoon trip to Toronto, St. Catharines and Buffalo. The bride's travelling attire was a sand crepe dress with brown trimmings, brown cut velvet coat, small brown hat, brown alligator shoes with hose to match and brown morocco purse.

On their return Mr. and Mrs. Burns will reside in Marmora.

TAYLOR—McILMOYLE.

Ibbott, here in River road, Wednesday night. The Rev. Dr. T. H. Ibbott officiated. The bridesmaid, who looked very charming, was Miss Aleda Russell, of Port Robinson, and the best man was S. Phillips, also of Port Robinson. Following the signing of the register, Mr. and Mrs. Taylor left for a short wedding trip and were extended many good wishes for success by Dr. Ibbott.

Prize Winning Essay

In contest conducted by Haboco Stores, Peterborough.

WHY I LIKE TO BUY IN A CHAIN STORE.

(By Archie A. Kidd, 228 Sherbrooke Street)

There are many stores in Peterborough where they seem very independent, caring little whether you are waited upon or not. The clerks in many cases are sitting about on boxes and chattering the while in high-pitched tones. After finishing their rather lengthy conversation, they come to wait upon you, executing their duty rather sluggishly. None of this is found in the chain stores. The clerks are always on the alert, ready to serve at a moment's notice, working cheerfully and actively, making no error in weight or change.

In the chain stores everything is placed neatly and conveniently on the shelves.

The chain stores do not deceive the customer as to "How old the bread and pastry is." Everything is fresh and clean and no partly decayed fruit or vegetables is on sale, neither is stale bread, cheese or butter sold at half-price.

In some places the clerks are a little careless while making exchange, once in a while giving you not quite enough or a little too much. The clerks in the chain stores are extremely careful while handling others' money.

A great asset to the business of the chain stores is the very moderate price of the goods. Many a five and ten-cent piece have I saved and how many ten-cent pieces does it take to make a dollar? It soon counts up.

These are only a few of the reasons why I, not saying anything for my friends, like to shop at the chain stores. I am also glad that they are so numerous as others will have a better chance to shop with more economy.

STUDY CLUB HOLDS CANADIAN NIGHT

Speaker Gives a Talk On Life of Dr. R. Tait Mackenzie.

The signal honor conferred upon a Canadian when Dr. R. Tait Mackenzie, a native of Almonte, Ontario, and now professor of Physical Education at the University of Pennsylvania, was chosen to make the "Spirit of 1914," a memorial to Scots who died in the war and erected in Edinburgh Castle, Scotland, by persons of Scottish blood residing in the United States, was referred to in the opening paragraphs of Mrs H. W. Morphet's talk on Dr. Mackenzie, given at "Canadian Night" of the Art Study Club, held this week.

Mrs. Morphet gave an interesting insight into the life and work of Dr. Mackenzie, who was born in Almonte in 1867, the son of a Presbyterian clergyman. He graduated in medicine and arts from McGill University and practised for ten years in Montreal, specializing in children's deformities. During most of his time he was lecturer in Anatomy at McGill University and was greatly interested in athletics, holding a record himself in the high jump. He instituted the medical examination of students, which has been carried on at McGill ever since.

He had done some sketching while in Montreal, but no modelling, and would have been very surprised, doubtless, had someone then told him that he would carry out the commission for the Scots Memorial, twenty years later.

Rideau Hall Physician

For a year in mid nineties he was house physician for Lord and Lady Aberdeen at Ottawa. In 1904 he became Professor Physical Education and director of that department, in the University of Pennsylvania. During the war, he served in England with the rank of Major, but his arduous duties did not prevent him from giving time to his predilection for modelling. Although his strenuous professional life seemed to be the very opposite to artistic development, he had inherited from his parents a fine sense of appreciation and an esthetic instinct and from his early boyhood, he cherished a passion for drawing and painting.

In connection with the institution of medical examination of students at McGill, he wished to have a figure which would show the effects of physical training in developing the ideal figure of an athlete. After obtaining the full measurements of eighty-nine track athletes, he could not find a sculptor who would model the figure for him, so went ahead himself, using methods which caused other sculptors to laugh at him. But he persisted and the fine figure of "The Sprinter" was the result, the finished excellence of which proclaimed its maker a sculptor of parts.

Mrs. Morphet went on to speak of the later work of this sculptor and of the originality and strength of his art.

DAILY READING

A FEW MINUTES A DAY WIT H THE BEST OF THE WORLD'S AUTHOR'S CONDUCTED BY THE NEIGHBORS AND MARION

This column originates in a suggestion by one of the neighbors, "Mariana," who wrote last week: "It is my idea that women can broaden out only by reading... My idea is that you might print, every day, a little excerpt from some great author—something that we could read in a few minutes and save, perhaps, for further reference." Enough other neighbors expressed approval of the idea to warrant my starting the column. If you like it, please tell me, and suggest short poems or prose writings suitable for it.

Each day's reading will be dated, for reference in your scrap book, and I will try, whenever I can, to give some information about the writer.

November 26, 1928.

To-day is the 32nd anniversary of the death of Coventry Kearsey Dighton Patmore, an English poet who was born at Woodford, Essex, July 23, 1923. He was librarian of the British Museum, 1847-1868. His writings include: "The Angel in the House," "Tamerton Church Tower," and "The Rod, the Root, and the Flower." The lovely little poems I print to-day are extracted from "The Angel in the House"; the first is sub-titled "The Lover":

He meets, by heavenly chance express,
The destined maid; some hidden hand
Unveils to him that loveliness
Which others cannot understand
His merits in her presence grow,
To match the promise in her eyes,
And round her happy footsteps blow
The authentic airs of Paradise.
For joy of her he cannot sleep;
Her beauty haunts him all the night;
It melts his heart, it makes him weep
For wonder, worship and delight.
O, paradox of love, he longs,
Most humble when he most aspires,
To suffer scorn and cruel wrongs
From her he honors and desires.
Her graces make him rich, and ask
No guerdon; this imperial style
Affronts him; he disdains to bask,
The pensioner of her priceless smile.
He prays for some hard thing to do,
Some work of fame and labor immense,
To stretch the languid bulk and thew
Of love's fresh-born magnipotence.
No smallest boon were bought too dear,
Though bartered for his love-sick life;
Yet trusts he, with undaunted cheer,
To vanquish heaven, and call her Wife.
He notes how queens of stillness still
Neglect their crowns, and stoop to mate;
How, self-consigned with lavish will,
They ask but love proportionate;
How swift pursuit by small degrees,
Love's tactic, works like miracle;
How valor, clothed in courtesies,
Brings down the haughtiest citadel;
And therefore, though he merits not
To kiss the braid upon her skirt,
His hope, discouraged ne'er a jot,
Outsoars all possible desert.

Love a Virtue.

Strong passions mean weak will, and he
Who truly knows the strength and bliss
Which are in love, will own with me
To passion but a virtue 'tis.
Few hear my word; it soars above
The subtlest senses of the swarm
Of wretched things which know not love,
Their Psyche still a wingless worm.
Ice cold seems heaven's noble glow
To spirits whose vital heat is hell;
And to corrupt hearts even so
The songs I sing, the tale I tell.
These cannot see the robes of white
In which I sing of love. Alack,
But darkness shows in heavenly light,
Though whiteness, in the dark, is black!

DEATH REDUCES LEADERS TO ONE

Board of Home Missions of United Church Meets On November 28th.

CRITICAL SITUATION.

By death, resignation or transfer, The United Church of Canada has lost four out of five of its home mission secretaries in the last three years and the Board of Home Missions meets at Toronto, commencing November 28th, to remedy the situation in some way.

At the end of September, 1925, the most experienced organizer in the group, Rev. William T. Gunn, D.D., left the department in order to become secretary of the new Committee on Literature, General Pulicity and Missionary Education, a much neglected activity in church life. He is for the next two years, Moderator of The United Church and, as such, bears additional responsibilities. Dr. Gunn has been for twenty years secretary of Congregational missions throughout Canada and was a noted author on home mission subjects.

Dr. Gunn's transfer had been preceded by the departure of Rev. A. Lloyd Smith, M.A., B.D., for eight years assistant secretary of Methodist home missions in Canada and Newfoundland, who, immediately on the consummation of union in June, 1926, tendered his resignation in order to facilitate reorganization. He was the youngest of the five secretaries employed by three uniting churches and is now the minister of the Grace United Church, Brampton, Ontario, and a member of the Board of Home Missions.

For Economy and Progress.

The General Council in June, 1926, at Montreal, had the duty of providing for a prospective development of home mission work and safeguarding the interests of economy.

Death in September, 1928, of two or the three workers retained in the general organization of 1926, further reduced the staff to one man, Rev. Colin G. Young, D.D., whose specific tasks was supervision of work among Non-Anglo-Saxons in reecnt weeks, he has prepared the business for submission to the Board at its approaching sessions.

The late Rev. Chas. E. Manning, D.D., who was incapacitated from June to his death in September, had oversight of missions in five of the eleven Canadian Conferences in addition to supervising immigration chaplaincies and related work. In the other six conferences, the late Rev. John H. Edmison, D.D., had oversight, besides directing the work of 350 summer supply workers. He died in September after a brief illness.

When the decréase from five to three had been effected two years ago, the next step was to reduce the number of field superintendents from 21 to 14. This was brought about by retirements of veteran workers throughout the period.

The supervising staff is now composed of Dr. Young, ranking as associate secretary, instead of the one Congregationalist, two Methodist and two Presbyterian secretaries employed before union. The plan of permanent organization adopted by the General Council of The United Church at Montreal in 1926 called for two secretaries and one associate secretary.

Missions Slightly Fewer.

The number of home mission charges under supervision is about 1,570, or approximately 90 fewer than three years ago, as is shown by statistics. Surveying the whole field, the Board at its approaching meeting will have to decide on the number and rank of secretaries and appoint men to the office.

Warnings that Canadian settlement was "getting ahead of The United Church" have been issued this fall by such lay leaders as Mr. J. H. Gundy, Toronto, Chairman of the Missionary and Maintenance Fund of The United Church, and by Principal Oliver, of Saskatoon, vice-chairman of the Fund.

Serious injury to Rev. D. C. MacGregor, D.D., London, Ontario, chairman of the Board of Home Missions, further complicates the situation. Seated in a car which was telescoped in a railway collision at Hamilton, Ontario, he sustained injuries which have laid him aside all fall and will necessitate his inactivity for many months.

ARTS SOCIETY SAVES HOUSES

Sixteenth Century Cottages in Gloucestershire To Be Restored.

FOR THE NATION.

GLOUCESTER, Eng., Nov. 26 (by the Canadian Press).—A row of England's most picturesque cottages, "Arlington Row," at Bibury, Gloucestershire, has been saved for the nation through the Royal Society of Arts which has raised enough money to buy the cottages and hand them over to the newly-formed Gloucestershire Archaeological Trust. The present inhabitants, who are agricultural laborers, are being allowed to remain at very low rents, and the cottages are being restored to their original condition.

Bibury, in the Cotswold Hills, the village in which these beautiful 16th century cottages stand, was described by William Morris, English poet and artist, (1834-1896), as "surely the most beautiful in England." The cottages are of stone, with dormers in the high-pitched, stone-slated roofs. They are protected by tall trees, and face a quiet little trout stream which runs alongside the road.

ALMOND GREEN.

An ensemble of brown tweed, with a dash of almond green in it, has its soft blouse of almond green satin crepe and its coats lined with the green, satin side out.

GREEN HANKIES.

Some very fine new French hankies are made of light green linen, plaided in darker green, with orange lines for galety.

SHOE LUGGAGE.

This luxury age now produces shoe luggage the size of suit cases, with covered partitions for shoes. Opened, it looks like a regular case for a dozen pairs.

NEW TASTE.

To dress up the lowly cream potato soup, chop some sour grass or water cress into it just before serving, and serve with croutons.

ORANGE VOGUE

Orange promises to be the favorite sports color for Southern wear this year. A pale blue kasha tweed and silk ensemble has wide orange bandings.

CHAMOIS GLOVES.

Olive oil added to the water in which you wash chamois gloves, keeps them from getting stiff and hard. Use only a teaspoonful.

The Thief of Charm ... don't be a victim

CONSTIPATION poisons the blood; it saps the vitality; it destroys the usefulness of its victims. It causes a lack of clear thinking, effective work—health—vigour—charm.

Eat Post's Bran Flakes regularly. It overcomes the evil of faulty elimination because it is the right kind of roughage food. Doctors say you must have roughage in your diet. And this perfect breakfast dish is good to eat as well—every crisp, golden flake.

Make this two weeks' test and note the difference

It is dangerous to experiment with patent medicine and drug laxatives. They bring only temporary relief and may make matters much worse. Ordinary cases of constipation brought about by too little roughage in the diet should yield to Post's Bran Flakes. If your case is abnormal, don't experiment. Consult a competent physician.

Constipation must not be neglected. Start a two weeks' test now. Order a package of Post's Bran Flakes from your grocer.

Start by eating a dish of Post's Bran Flakes for breakfast. Eat it as a cereal with milk or cream. You will like it as well as any cereal you ever tasted.

Do this every day for two weeks. We predict you will find a real difference in the way you feel, and that you have been "regular" all the time. But don't stop at the end of two weeks. Eat Post's Bran Flakes every morning for health and regularity. Post's Bran Flakes is sold by all grocers in a wax-wrapped package. Ready to eat.

THE MIRROR OF THE MODE

By Mary Marshall.

The Italian beret shown above is worked in shades of red and tan felt, and the Austrian cap and scarf set below are of blackwith very bright embroidery. The cap is rolled at the front to form a very narrow, little brim.

"Everyone is wearing them," observed an eighteen-year-old friend of mine as we went shopping together the other morning. She had led me to a shop where there was an unusually good collection of imported sports berets and caps and she was deftly going through a drawer full of Italian berets, the colorful designs of which are made by piecings of bright-hued felt. Really they were quite staggering in their bright light hues. "Everyone simply has to have at least three or four," she continued. "Even the men are wearing them."

I listened patiently, rather glad that the men I knew were old or sedate enough to prefer more conventional headgear. These berets were all from Italy, and another drawerful of importations which the saleswoman had opened for us to inspect was in cap shape with melon piecings of felt. They were embroidered also in bright colors, but somewhat richer in tone, and came from Austria. I understood from my enthusiastic young friend that everyone was wearing these caps, too. After much deliberation she chose an Italian beret of red and tan felt to add to her collection and an Austrian cap of black felt with much bright embroidery upon it. The brim of the cap was slightly rolled at the front to show a light lining, and the felt scarf that went with it was also embroidered.

From the same Italian source from which these pieced berets are received come charming coats for children made of colored cloth pieced in the same striking geometrical designs, and with these little coats there are berets to match.

That Body of Yours

By Dr. J. Barton

DULL IN MORNING, BRIGHT AT NIGHT

Perhaps you are one of those folk who are called "night bloomers," because you seem to wake up tired, tire easily, have frequent headaches, and yet toward afternoon and evening you feel better, come into "bloom," as it were.

This condition is thought to be due to a slight poisoning of the blood and the fluid that bathes the brain and spinal cord. And the source of this poisoning is thought to be from the intestinal canal.

Dr. Otto J. Kaufmann of Birmingham tells us that the functions of the mind are probably altered by the long-continued presence in the blood of substances that are just slightly poisonous, such as the poisons due to absorption from the wastes in intestinal canal. In patients suffering from intestinal toxemia poisoning, sleep is not refreshing and headache is frequent.

The fluid bathing the brain and spinal cord, in addition to protecting these delicate structures, actually carries food for building up the brain and cord structures, and also carrying away the wastes. The poisons may affect the pressure of this fluid. The pressure of the blood and of this fluid gets below normal, and causes mental depression. In these cases headaches at the top of head, and at the base of the skull just above the neck, are quite common, and are relieved by lying down.

Healthy persons will have similar headaches as a result of physical or mental strain or fatigue.

It is just a matter of poisoning in all cases. Whether from work in healthy persons, or absorption of poisons in those who are constipated. He suggests that early treatment is most important, as the longer poisons remain in the sstem, the more severe will be the symptoms, and the recovery will be slow.

So, if you find yourself lazy, with headaches, and feeling a bit brighter toward evening, let your doctor and dentist look you over and try and locate the source of infection. While it may be teeth, tonsils or sinuses, there is a good chance of it being due to slow intestinal movement.

Further, fruit, vegetables and regular exercise should correct the condition.

THE WHATNOT

A Place for Little Bits of Everything of Local Interest

By MARION

With the coming of the snow, and the striking wind which seems to go through all the clothes you have on, we begin to think of the evenings beside the fireplace and the hot lunches which we will serve.

• • •

We can eat considerably more during the winter than we can in the summer without having to go on diet, because our body needs extra fuel to take care of the exertion which we enjoy during the winter months. We use our muscles more than we do in the summer, and therefore can stand more nourishing food.

• • •

We seem to indulge more in hearty meals during the winter season than we do in summer, I suppose it is because we feel more like preparing them when it is cooler, and then again, we feel our system needs it.

• • •

After the bridge party, the hostess is often puzzled with what to serve. Tea is out of the question, some don't like coffee, while others shun drinking cocoa—because of the great amount of milk in it, I suppose.

• • •

However, there are some delicious fruit beverages which can be served hot—I guess they must have been especially made for the winter bridge parties. Sandwiches, crisp salted crackers or anything not too sweet may be served with one of these drinks.

• • •

There is a "Hot Grape Juice Punch" which sounds good and tastes just as good. It consists of six cups of grape juice, two cups of water, three lemons, four oranges, one-half cup of sugar and a few grains of salt.

• • •

The juice is squeezed from the lemons and oranges, the rind is cut in thin strips and let simmer with the sugar and water for ten minutes. The juices of the lemon, orange and grapes are added and reheated, but is not allowed to boil. It is strained before serving.

• • •

Then I have another, it is called "Cranberry Nectar" and is also very good. It consists of one quart of cranberries, six cups of water two and a half cups of granulated sugar, four oranges, two lemons, one banana and crushed ice—you see this one is served cold.

• • •

The berries are cooked with water for twenty minutes, after which they are strained and brought to the boiling point again. Sift in the sugar and boil about five minutes longer. After it is cool add the orange and lemon juice. This is chilled and served with crushed ice and slices of banana.

• • •

For the children, you almost invariably serve hot milk or hot cocoa. A fine sandwich to serve with either the hot milk or cocoa is toasted whole wheat or graham bread, spread with fig and lime mixture. About a quarter of a pound of chopped figs are cooked with a quarter of a cup of sugar and enough lime water to cover. This is put through the strainer when done.

• • •

I notice a number of the ladies in sending in recipes just now mention the fact that eggs are becoming more and more expensive, and they try to give a substitute in their recipe for the use of eggs. Did you know that one tablespoon of gelatine dissolved in a little hot water is an excellent substitute for three eggs? Of course, this would only be used in the making of cakes or puddings.

• • •

In housecleaning this fall, have you noticed how dull some of you black walnut picture frames are becoming? Try rubbing them with a little linseed oil, it will give them a rich luster.

• • •

Our table is becoming more and more colorful, isn't it? I have been watching with interest for some time, the colored-handled knives in the magazines, but only a week ago did I see some on exhibition in one of our local store windows. The ones I noticed are in old rose, but they can be had in blue or emerald green.

• • •

I wonder if our reader who was having trouble with moths, has succeeded in getting rid of them. I have just run across a couple of suggestions regarding the killing of this household pester. One is to place whole cloves among the clothes, or pieces of cotton wool or lint saturated with oil of cloves. The other one is also falling back to the much-used cloves. They are stuck all over an orange which is put in the oven and let dry slowly. The fragrant ball will keep away all the moths, and will, at the same time, scent the clothes pleasantly.

• • •

Quite a long time ago, some reader asked what would remove white spots caused by hot dishes from furniture. Here is another method which might prove useful to someone. Use powdered pumice and linseed oil, which is rubbed until dry and polished with the grain.

• • •

Oh yes, and by the way it will soon be time to plan your Christmas party. "Laura" has prepared a folder on Christmas entertaining for the help this week—send in the coupon before the supply is exhausted.

I believe I am doing a real good turn to all women readers by commencing in this issue, daily articles on health by Dr. James W. Barton, under the heading, "That Body of Yours."

Dr. Barton is not a faddist; he is a commonsense medical man who writes in an easy-to-understand way about things in which every woman is interested.

• • •

To-day's article, for instance will appeal to nearly every one of us.

• • •

Dr. Barton does not answer questions from readers, because, with his usual commonsense, he believes it impossible to make a diagnosis by mail, and prescribing for an ailment the physician does not know about, is impossible.

• • •

I commend Dr. Barton's articles to the attention of all the neighbors.

WEDDING BELLS

MASTERS—MUIR.

In Knox Church, Toronto, Thursday, November 22nd, by Rev. John McNichol, Florence Maud Muir, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Muir, Peterborough, to William Lennox Masters, youngest son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Alex Masters, Toronto.

BALDWIN—WINSLOW

The flag was flying on Saturday over Bishop Strachan School in Toronto, in honor of the wedding of a former pupil, Audrey Mary Victoria Winslow, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Henry Winslow of "Woodleigh," Ida, Ontario, to Edward William Charles Baldwin, second son of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Baldwin of "Mashquoteh," Toronto.

The ceremony took place at St. John's Church in Ida, on Saturday afternoon at half-past two o'clock, and was solemnized by the grandfather of the bride, the Reverened Canon W. C. Allen. The chancel and altar were decorated with gold and bronze chrysanthemums and white Michaelmas daisies and a service by the choir, preceding the bride, was accompanied on the organ by the bride's grandmother, Mrs. W. C. Allen. Mrs. W. McKee Bingham of Peterborough, a friend of the family, sang "Beloved, It Is Morn" during the signing of the register, which was witnessed by Miss Edith Baldwin, sister of the bridegroom, and Mr. Clare Winslow, brother of the bride.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a lovely gown of blue satin-faced crepe with small hat embroidered in blue and gold and grey squirrel scarf. She wore grey kid slippers and grey silk hose and carried a bouquet of ophelia roses.

Immediately after the ceremony, which was preceded by luncheon held at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. Baldwin and his bride left by motor for a honeymoon trip, after which they will live in Toronto. The bride travelled in a coat of blue broadcloth with opossum fur.

Guests present at the wedding from out of town were Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Baldwin, with the Misses Edith and Mary and Mr. William William Baldwin, Dr. and Mrs. Harold Allen, Mr. and Mrs. Barclay Falkner, Mr. and Mrs. Burke Allen, Mrs. Norman Allen and Miss Cynthia Allen, Mrs. Martin, Miss Winslow, Mr. Charles Baldwin, and Miss Bessie Baldwin, all of Toronto, and Mrs. W. McKee Bingham of Peterborough.

CHILDREN'S LEGS SHOULD BE CLAD

Edna Kells Wants Society To Combat Exposure To Winter Cold.

EDMONTON, Alta., Nov. 26 (CP)—Could some society interested in the welfare of the human race be persuaded to start an educational campaign with a view to having the legs of small children properly clothed in cold weather, says Edna Kells in the "Journal."

"Coming along Macdonald drive one morning recently I met a party of four, father, mother and two small children. My first thought was that they had driven in from the country for all seemed to be well wrapped up. My second thought was bewildering. It came when I got a closer view of the children. They wore woolen caps, very short coats and dresses equally short, woolen mufflers wrapped around their necks and ears, shoes and very short socks. Four small thin legs were bare from the ankle to at least six inches above the knee—bare and blue with the cold. The owners of said legs were cowering down into the folds of their mufflers as if that would help their legs, and they marched valiantly along apparently unconscious that things might be better.

"Since then I have seen several other children similarly dressed—or undressed—while father and mother were warmly clad to withstand the chill of autumn. Short socks are no doubt all right for children in summer, but when late September or October come, and the cold winds sweep down from the north, or worse still in from the east, those who fail to cover up small legs with stockings are either very thoughtless or downright cruel."

YOUR HOME AND YOU

By BETSY CALLISTER

Most housewives know the value of boiling sheets, towels and table linen—but very few think of boiling their dishes. Yet when you come to think of it dishes need this boiling treatment once in awhile even more than household linens do, because ironing or mangling of household linens subjects them to intense heat which, if they have been dried in the sun, provides a fairly satisfactory sterilization aside from the boiling. But no one would think of giving dishes a weekly sun bath and in the ordinary dish washing process really boiling water is used only for a very quick rinsing. And sometimes the rinsing water is far below the boiling point.

For this reason health experts are advising housewives to boil their dishes at least once a week. Cups, tumblers and other dishes which actually come in contact with the lips are especially in need of this treatment and spoons and forks should be included.

For this purpose I would suggest a clothes boiler. Use this with a wooden rack at the bottom—to prevent any of the dishes from coming in direct contact with the bottom of the boiler. Racks of this sort are sold for laundry purposes and may be bought for a small price in any store where household supplies are sold. The dishes should be put into the boiler carefully so that they will not break and then covered with water that is cool or only slightly warmed. The cover should then be placed on the boiler and the heat applied. Water should be brought slowly to the boiling point and boiling should continue for at least ten minutes. The boiling should be fairly gentle so that the dishes do not rattle about and break.

Fine china and delicately decorated pieces should not be treated in this way but the more substantial sort that most persons use for every day will not be harmed at all by the process.

VEGETABLE DISH

A palatable luncheon dish consists of diced carrots and turnips, boiled together, drained and covered with cream sauce and bread crumbs and baked 15 minutes.

WOMEN TO HEAR NOTED SPEAKER

Author of Songs of Ukrania Will Address Canadian Club.

Mrs. Livesay, who is to speak to the Canadian Club tomorrow is the author of "Songs of Ukrania," the well-known collection of folk poetry of the Ukranians. She is to speak of that country which lies in the South of Russia, along the northern shore of the Black Sea. When Nicholas II. was deposed and the communal system of government was inaugurated under the leadership of Lenine, the Ukranian people declared themselves independent of Russia, and signed a separate peace with Germany in 1918. It is now a Soviet Socialist Republic within the Russian Union. It is 154,000 square miles in area, and has a population of 28,887,919.

A very large number of immigrants come to Canada from Ukrania, and some of their children have proved remarkably apt in acquiring an education in our Canadian schools, winning high awards. Mrs. Livesay is most warmly commended by the Canadian headquarters in Ottawa, and a most interesting lecture is expected.

SENIORS ELIMINATED FROM RUGBY RACE

P. C. I. Is Defeated 22 to 0

University of Toronto Schools Victors in Interscholastic Semi-final.

GREAT BATTLE.

Garnet and Grey Team Show Their True Worth in Fixture.

Fighting every inch of the way against a heavier, well-coached team on a muddy, water-soaked gridiron, Coach Browne's game little P.C.I. team were put out of the Interscholastic O.R.F.U. race by the University of Toronto Schools' 22 to 0 victory at Port Hope on Saturday.

The score gives no true indication of the great battle that the Garnet and Grey team put up. Covered with mud until they became unrecognizable, tackling, sliding in the slippery ooze, fighting every minute, the P.C.I. team were decisively beaten by a better squad, but they kept hammering away until the end. During the second and last periods, the Garnet and Grey warriors held the U.T.S. team scoreless and forced the play deep into the opposition's territory. It was only the heavy condition of the wet ball that made it impossible for Cuthbertson and Dearborn, the kickers, to lift the ball very high or far, and that prevented them notching single scores on several occasions. They gained yards many times and their plays through the line were every bit as successful as those of the winners.

Brilliant Half Line

It was the great work of their brilliant half line, coupled with clever interference by the wing line that gave U.T.S. their great superiority. Stew Ferguson, their flying wing, was the man that the P.C.I. tacklers could not stop. His shifty, dodging style of running and fast speed on the greasy gridiron was brilliant. He carried the ball half the time and made two-thirds of the U.T.S. gains.

He was also equally good at running back kicks and in skirting the ends. The half line, Greer, Copp and Evans, teamed up with Ferguson for a daring series of extension plays. They passed the wet ball about almost recklessly, but with never a fumble. They would break away for an end run; the ball-carrier would draw the tackle and then pass far out into space and one of the others would come up fast, grab it, and be off at full speed. Evans kicked the ball for great distance, but he always got sufficient height to allow his tacklers full time to get down around the catcher.

The whole P.C.I. team worked hard but missed the leadership of their quarter, Gemmel. The line men opened up holes in the big U.T.S. line to let the plays go through and they got down low for the bucks. The flying squadron, Hewitt, Glover and Westbrook, tackled the U.T.S. halves hard, and their job was a difficult one, having to first elude the U.T.S. interference to get at the ballcarrier. Hewitt and Johnson made repeated gains, and the great work of the former, both offensively and defensively stood out. Green and Cuthbertson handled the high kicks that Evans sent at them very well, but they could not run them back i nthe face of the U.T.S. tacklers that swarmed around them.

Gained Early Lead

U. T. S. took an early lead in the game when they scored a point on a rouge before P. C. I. had had their hands on the ball. They came right back, after P. C. I. had made repeated gains, when Ferguson, eluding the whole team behind the cover of intereference, made long runs to score two touchdowns. After that, the P.C.I. tacklers began to solve the U. T. S. attack and they held them closely. The P. C. I. line plays through the centre garnered many yards and play swept back and forth in midfield. The break came when there was a scramble for a short, bounding onside kick of Evan's. Green showed good judgment when he dribbled the ball just as the U. T. S. halves were about to grab it up. Evans came up fast and beat Green in retrieving the ball. Winrow went over on the next play, an extend for a touchdown. It was a hard break after the P. C. I. team had been going so well. Evans kicked for another rouge after Ferguson and Evans had combined for a thirty-yard run. P. C. I. lost the ball on a fumble at their own 20-yard line, and Evans broke away on another extend and covered the distance for another touchdown. That was the last point that U. T. S. scored. For the remainder of the game the play was even. The P. C. I. line stopped the long U. T. S. extends and were themselves making slow progress up the field on determined attacks through the line. A twenty-yard gain by Hewitt put P. C. I. within scoring distance, but Dearborn's kick was a little low, and Ferguson ran the ball back before the P. C. I. tacklers could reach him.

The line-ups were:

University of Toronto Schools.—Snap, Keith; insides, Douglas and Ashdown; middles, Fear and Acers; outsides, Dyer and Stollery; flying wing, Ferguson; halves, Copp, Greer and Evans; quarter, Winrow; subs., Cunningham, Black, Plaxton, Walker, Oregon, Baumer, and Scully.

Peterborough Collegiate Institute—Snap, Preston; insides, Wiman and Dearborn; middles, Johnson and Armstrong; outsides, Glover and Westbrook; flying wings, Magee and Dunkerly; halves, Hewitt and Green; quarter, Cuthbertson; subs., Lord, Hall, Reynolds, Clayton, Wagar, Young, and Denisen.

Referee—Tillcock of Toronto.
Umpire—Kirland of Oshawa.
Timekeeper—E. Legon.
Head linesman—Dufton of Cobourg.

The play:—

First Quarter

Preston kicked off to U. T. S. 45-yard line. Ferguson gained yards on an extend. Ferguson then broke through for fifteen yards on a buck. P.C.I. line held two more bucks, and Evans kicked for a rouge. U. T. S. 1.

Magee, Johnson, Hewitt, and Dunkerly rammed through centre to gain yards three times in a row for P.C.I. P.C.I. lost ten yards on an offside and had to kick, Dearborn kicking to U.T.S. 40-yard line. U.T.S. gained their yards on plunges and then the P. C. I. line stiffened, and Evans kicked to P. C. I. 40-yard line. Armstrong gained six yards for P. C. I. and Dearborn kicked back to U. T. S. 40-yard line, Glover making a lovely tackle to bring down Ferguson. U.T.S. gained yards through the centre and then Ferguson skirted the end and ran for a touchdown. U.T.S. 6.

There was an exchange of kicks neither team being able to make gains. Ferguson made a gain of twenty yards and on the next play went over for a touchdown. U.T.S. 11.

U.T.S. made big gains on extends under close interference, and the quarter ended with the ball well up toward the P.C.I. touchline.

Second Quarter.

U.T.S. were called for interference and lost ten yards. Evans kicked to P.C.I. 20-yard line. Cuthbertson and Johnson gained yards, and Dearborn kicked to midfield. There was an exchange of kicks, and Evans sent up a short kick, which he grabbed himself, just beating Hall to the bounding ball. P.C.I. obtained a ball on an offside and Hewitt made a ten-yard gain. After an exchange of kicks, Hewitt and Johnson made yards on two bucks, but P. C. I. lost possession on a fumble. U.T.S. were penalized ten yards for interference, and obtained the ball on an offside at midfield. Neither team could make gains, and each took two bucks and then kicked.

Third Quarter

After the kick-off Varsity started another series of extension plays that netted them big gains. After an attempted onside which Green dribbled and Ferguson regained, Winrow went over for a touchdown. U.T.S. 16.

Evans and Copp combined on a wide passing extend for a thirty yard gain and Evans kicked for a rouge. U.T.S. 17.

Cuthbertson rammed through the U.T.S. line for a ten-yard gain. Dearborn kicked to U.T.S. 40-yard line. The Blue and White made great gains on wide-open extensions by Ferguson and Evans.

P.C.I. gained the ball on Evans' kick on their own 20-yard line, only to lose it on a fumble. Evans broke away for a long run that resulted in a touchdown. U.T.S. 22.

Fourth Quarter

P.C.I. uncovered their best brand of rugby in this quarter, and had U.T.S. backed up pretty well to their own end of the field. Hewitt made a twenty-yard gain when he nearly broke away from the U.T.S. team. Dearborn's kick went right up to the U.T.S. touchline, but Ferguson ran it out twenty-five yards. U.T.S. gained ground and kicked to P.C.I. 45-yard line. Hewitt gained ten yards on a buck. The teams were both tired out and neither could make gains, each kicking after two plays through the line.

THE PASSING OF THE P. C. I.

By F. D. C.

Peterborough Collegiate's fighting little football team has been meeting and beating heavier opposition all season, but until Saturday this opposition had on the whole been slow of foot and not very versatile in play-making. In their Interscholastic O.R.F.U. fixture with University of Toronto Schools at Port Hope on Saturday, however, Coach Browne's team encountered a team that was not only big but fast, with a smooth-working interference, a backfield that was speedy and daring in extension plays, and one of the shiftiest broken field runners in Ferguson that P.C.I. have ever had to deal with. The result was the disappearance of P.C.I.'s game little team from the Ontario series, U.T.S. winning on a muddy field by 22 points to 0.

The score does not do justice to the gallant fight waged by the garnet and grey battlers, who despite the weight advantage of the winners made their yards from scrimmage a surprising number of times, considering the fact that they failed to score a point. Through the line P.C.I. probably gained more than the Toronto twelve. Their light advance guard opened holes smartly, while defensively they showed a consistent ability to smother U.T.S. plunges. It was through the air and round the ends that the blue and white team made their gains. In the kicking department both Dearborn and Cuthbertson, who shared the booting duty for P.C.I., failed to get heighth into their punts, and the U.T.S. backfield men were usually in full stride before the garnet and grey flying squadron could get down the field, while, on the other hand, the U.T.S. kicking was high enough to enable the Petes' ball catchers to be nailed in their tracks. But the chief difference between the teams lay in the wonderful running of Ferguson and in the success that attended the spectacular, long passing extension runs of the U.T.S. rear guard. It was difficult for the P.C.I. squad, good tacklers as they are, to stop Ferguson before he had made a big advance, and those speedy combined thrusts round the end, with the ball tossed with almost reckless abandon and a smooth interference, taking P.C.I. men out of the play, rarely failed to register a substantial gain. The muddy field failed to bog down the U.T.S. ball-carriers, who opened up the game and won by so doing, despite the uncertain footing. On a dry field it is to be imagined that the running game so successfully exploited by the winners would have been even more difficult to check.

Too much cannot be said of Ferguson, whose individual brilliancy was the chief source of strength for the winners. This sturdy, shifty player has a fine turn of speed and is one of those weaving, twisting broken field runners that make life miserable for the expert tacklers. Ferguson carried the ball on two-thirds of the U.T.S. plays, and either through the line or round the end was most difficult to stop. It was Ferguson's long gallop for the winners' first touchdown that marked the beginning of the end for P.C.I., coming as it did when the garnet and grey had thrust the play deep into U.T.S. territory and looked to have a royal chance to score, and all through the game Ferguson was by long odds the most consistent ground-gainer on the field.

P.C.I., starting without Gemmell, their clever quarterback, were under a handicap to begin with, but they stuck to their guns to the bitter end, with Hewett leading the forlorn hope with a determination that earned the plaudits of friend and foe alike. Hewett was not only P.C.I.'s most successful ball-carrier, hitting the blue line at top speed and with consistent success, but he played a heroic role defensively and did some effective tackling when he went down under kicks. Every P.C.I. youngster, regular and sub alike, gave all he had, first in a fighting effort to avoid defeat, and then when that was seen to be impossible, in an equally determined fight to avert a shut-out. Once in the last period it looked as if their gameness was going to be rewarded when Hewett broke away for a 30-yard gain and carried the play into U.T.S. territory. Two plunges failed, and when Dearborn essayed to boot over for a point, his kick was low, and Ferguson, taking the ball behind his line, was in full stride before the tackling brigade could reach him and cleverly ran the kick out.

P.C.I. are to be congratulated upon a very successful season, the winning of seven games in nine starts and the capture of the Central Interscholastic championship and the Neal Trophy. These exploits will be remembered in Collegiate annals as the achievements of a plucky little team, fitting to be numbered among the most worthy of P.C.I. football squads. The Collegiate youngsters, too, are to be thanked for popularizing football in Peterborough, the following that accompanied them to Port Hope bearing testimony to the fact that the game has been sold to many of Peterborough's sport-loving citizens.

LEAFS DEFEAT MAROONS 4-1

Score First Goal After Thirty-seven Minutes of Play.

N.H.L. GAMES.

TORONTO, Nov. 26—Another jinx was laid to rest, for the time being at least, on Saturday night when the Maple Leafs defeated the Montreal Maroons, last year's Stanley cup finalists, scoring their first victory over the invaders on local ice since the first year the Maroons were in the league. In the season of 1924-25 the locals won four out of six games from the Montreal entry, but since then, according to those who have followed the progress of the Toronto team, their engagements with the Maroons have been devoid of success. The win on Saturday night was therefore long overdue and the score, 4 to 1, brought more than the average amount of satisfaction to both players and supporters.

On the hour's play the Leafs deserved the victory as they uncovered a flashy and effective brand of combination in the third period that carried them through the Maroons' defence for close-in-shots on Benedict and the goalie had practically no chance to stop the four shots that beat him. In addition to the four goals counted, Bailey picked up a loose puck after Blair had been tripped on a sortie through the Maroon defence and scored but it was called back for some reason or other. In scoring the four goals the Leafs were credited with six assists and this flash combination, most of it coming in the last part of the final period, showed that the players are steadily becoming acquainted with each other's play.

Senators Play to Tie

DETROIT, Nov. 26.—The Ottawa Senators, at the top of the international division of the National Hookey League, remained unbeaten here last night later an overtime battle with the Detroit Cougars, which ended in a 1-to-1 tie. The game put the Cougars in a tie for first place with the New York Rangers in the American division.

To Alex. Connell, Ottawa goalie, went the credit for the game. Time and again when Lewis, Hay and Herberts, Detroit forwards, broke through the Senators' defence wall he saved sensationally. He was forced to work almost twice as hard as "Dollie" Dolson, Cougar goaltender.

Finnigan snapped in the Ottawa score two minutes after the first period opened, when he skated through the Cougar wall, forced goalie Dolson to the edge of the net and drove the disc through the opposite side. George Hay tallied for the Cougars a few minutes later, when he received a pass from Captain Reg Noble and flashed the puck past Connell.

Rangers Defeat Pirates

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—The New York Rangers clung to their place at the top of the American division of the National Hockey League by taking a hard-fought game from the Pittsburg Pirates last night by a 2 to 0 score. Two brilliant bits of play gave the New Yorkers the victory, although they were outplayed for the larger part of the game.

Paul Thompson, reserve forward, made a fine individual dash to the Pittsburg net to tally a goal in the second period, and Bill Cook and Frank Boucher staged a well-timed passing combination in the final period to score the second counter. Thompson carried the puck through the entire Pittsburg team, around the net, and lifted it in over Miller's protrate form when the Pirate goalie made a headlong dive in an effort to prevent a score.

TIGERS ARE EASTERN RUGBY TITLE HOLDERS

Bengals' Brawn Too Much For Students In Football Final.

FINAL SCORE 28 TO 5.

The Hamilton Crew Ploughs Through Varsity at Will in Final Period.

HAMILTON, Ont., Nov 26.—Hamilton's famed Tigers captured the Eastern Canada football championship on Saturday afternoon when they defeated Toronto Varsity, champions of the O.R.F.U. by a score of 28 to 5, and on Saturday next they will clash with Regina on a Hamilton field for the championship of the Dominion. The Orphans were troublesome for the first half of the game, Tigers led only by 8 to 5 at the interval, but the superiority of the Interprovincial Union representatives certainly asserted itself in the final thirty minutes of play, especially in the last quarter when they scored three touches and a single point.

Tigers were held in check in the early stages because of the blue team's plucky fight Leadley's tackling and the masterly kicking of young Jack Sinclair, the Collegians' backfield ace. The Jungle Kings also contributed largely toward their own failure to pile up points in the first two quarters by lack of co-ordination in al departments and offside penalties that cost them seventy yards and numerous scoring chances. But when Coach Rodden got through telling his stalwarts their mistakes during the rest period the Big Four champions stepped into their much lighter opponents with a vengeance and the third quarter was not very old before they had worked the ball into scoring position. They injected a rouge and a field goal to increase their lead to twelve to five and from then to the finish it was a rout. The Orphans, who had battled gamely for forty-five minutes against a heavier, stronger and more experienced machine, found it impossible to stand up further under the strain and after giving of their all, cracked wide open, while the grimly determined Bengals carried on relentlessly, taking full advantage of every mistake to increase their majority. When the final whistle sounded Tigers had a twenty-three point margin and were in a mood for further action, while the courageous Students were all fagged out, though heroes in the eyes of the eleven thousand fans who sat through the battle, because of their gallant stand.

Four Touchdowns

Hamilton's twenty-eight points were the results of four touchdowns, a field goal by "Pep" Leadley in the second session and five single points which came from the toe of young "Huck" Welch. Varsity's five points came through the superb kicking of Jack Sinclair, a field goal and a pair of singles, all in the first thirty minutes of play. Gibb, Benman, Baker and Boadway scored the Hamilton touchdowns, Gibb's coming in the second quarter and the other three in the final fifteen minutes of play.

From a standout standpoint honors must go to Jack Sinclair. Fighting against great odds, the youthful Collegian kept his team in the fight for the first half with sensational running back of punts and his long hoists to relieve the situation for his team mates. Sinclair out-kicked Welch by a goodly margin throughout and was loudly cheered for his game stand. Carrick, Don Wood, Snider and Knowles tackled well at all stages and it was their brilliant display that held Tigers in the early stages. Picking a start on the Bengal team would almost be impossible, as the entire squad played well once they hit their proper stride. Pep Leadley's long run in the third quarter through the Varsity team for forty-five yards was the most spectacular run of the day, while his shorter excursions around Varsity ends were numerous and successful. It was really the Tiger "tanks" that spelled disaster for the Students. Gibb, Small, Baker, Timmis, Elford and Boadway pounded away at the light blue line from whistle to whistle and it was in the last period that the heavy pounding began to take its toll. The teams.

OSHAWA TAKES ONTARIO TITLE

Blue Devils Overcome Sarnia Lead in Intermediate Final.

17-15 ON ROUND.

OSHAWA, Nov. 26.—The intermediate rugby championship of Ontario was won by the Blue Devils of Oshawa here Saturday when they overcame a seven point lead to defeat the Sarnia Wanderers 18-7 and win the round 17-15. The Blue Devils now have the right to meet Montreal Canadian Nationals for the Canadian intermediate championship.

Not only did the locals have to overcome a seven point lead that Sarnia brought with them, but also a four-point lead that the Wanderers piled up in the first quarter of Saturday's game. The quarter scores were 5-1 for Sarnia, 9-6 for Oshawa, 14-7 for Oshawa and 16-7 final score.

Both teams played a fighting game from start to finish, but it was nevertheless a clean struggle, only one penalty being issued to Cook in the third quarter, for high tackling, which was admittedly unintentional. Hail and snow at the start of the game threatened a miserable field, but Old Sol took pity and shone intermittently thereafter, leaving Sarnia's advertised hope for a fast field.

LEAGUE FINAL AT LAKEFIELD

Bridgenorth and Harrisons Play To-night For Silver Trophy.

SOFTBALL LEAGUE.

LAKEFIELD, Nov. 26.—(Examiner Correspondence). —Only one game was played on Friday night in the Rink Company's softball league, and that was the game between De Laval and Harrison's. The result was in favor of the latter team which means that Monday's game between Bridgenorth and Harrisons will be for the silver trophy which was won last year for Bridgenorth, after a memorable game with the Cubs. Monday night's game will begin at 8 o'clock and will no doubt be the season's Waterloo as both teams are keen and neither of them has lost a game this season.

Friday night's game had no lack of pep and it was all needed as the rink was pretty cold and at one stage of the game the players shut some of the windows to keep out the draft.

The game was Harrison's from the drop of the hat, but De Laval played with as much enthusiasm from the first as if they were winners. The game was a friendly one and not a word marred the harmony of the proceedings. Frank Payne, the base umpire held a convention once for a few minutes while he explained a decision, but it was a peaceful session. Clare Chittick at the plate must have felt that the millenium was being ushered in by the spirit of peace and good will which was manifested. Neither team was quite up to full regular strength, but that was not evident in the play. A regrettable incident occurred when "Reg" Dyer, the popular catcher of the DeLaval team had his left fore finger injured so badly that he had to secure medical aid, with three stitches as a result. "Reg" was back before the end of the session, gamely making light of painful injury. Following this W and E. Simmons (father and son) took the place of the Dyer brothers as the batteries.

Green was the "strong man" of the Harrisons' making six runs during the evening including a home run in the third innings.

The line-up was as follows:

Harrisons'—Pitcher, C. Carruthers; catcher, M. Dobson; 1st base, A. Smith; short stops, R. Green and Montgomery; 2nd base, P. Calladine; 3rd base, Dorrington; field Curtis and P. Vinnett.

De Laval—Pitcher, F. Dyer; catcher, R. Dyer; 1st base, H. Fowler; short stops, E. Woodhouse and H. Stanley; 2nd base, K. Miller; 3rd base, R. Evans; field, J. Cooper and E. Simmsons. Sub., W. Simmons.

The score by innings:

Harrisons	3	4	4	0	8	2	5	2	4	—32
De Laval	2	2	0	0	0	4	1	2	4	—15

BISONS LOSE HOME GAME

Defeated By Cataracts 1-0 in First Pro Game at Buffalo.

PLAY GOOD HOCKEY.

BUFFALO, N. Y., November 26.—Canadian Press. — Fifty five hundred sports fans saw the first professional hockey match in Buffalo Saturday night when the Niagara Falls, Ont., sextet defeated the Bisons 1 to 0 in the new Peace Bridge arena, just over the Niagara River from Buffalo, in Fort Erie, Ont.

The Arena and pro hockey here formally were opened when Frank B. Baird, father of the Peace Bridge, tossed the puck between Rotor Moth, Buffalo, and Shorty Quesnel, Niagara Falls, for the face off.

The solitary goal was registered after 18 and one half minutes of the 20 minute second period had elapsed, when Frank Steele, secondary wingman, drove a shot at Bill Taugher, who fended it off, only to have Steele ride in and poke the rebound into the cage.

Slow ice prevented the usual speed, but the Bisons tossed everything to the winds in the third period and despite the handicap, rode three and four men into the Cataract territory in a vain effort to even the count. The Bisons played a strong up-hill battle through these final 20 minutes but the brilliant work of Rolly Beaudry at the Falls cage, fought off all attacks.

Adds to Lead

DETROIT, Nov. 26.—Eight thousand home fans turned out to see the Detroit Olympics play their third fixture at the Olympia last night and win it, against London, by a score of 4 to 0. Unbeaten in the Canadian League race to date the Olympics were never in danger Saturday evening. The Panthers managed to hold them to a scoreless draw in the first period, but Joe Ironstone gets most of the credit for that achievement and, thereafter, the visitors were completely outplayed.

SEASON'S FINEST ACTING IN "NOOSE."

Dick Barthelmess Gives Best Performance of Season in a Sensational Underworld Drama.

Nickie Elkins, the young rum-runner, who so narrowly escapes the gallows, is assured a permanent place in the screen's role of honor as the result of Richard Barthelmess' fine portrayal of this character in "The Noose," now at the Regent Theatre.

Barthelmess gives to the central figure of the story a vitality and sincerity that comes only from natural acting and his performance in this role is one of the best he has ever done

"The Noose" is the First National screen version of Willard Mack's sensational play of the underworld. It is the story of a youth who is led into evil ways by bad companions, but who goes to the defense of his mother's reputation when it is assailed, and nearly gives his life in so doing.

"The Noose" is thrilling and interesting entertainment, and the star is surrounded by a fine cast of capable actors and actresses.

Lina Basquette, former "Follies" dancing star, is seen as Dot, the cabaret girl, who sticks by the boy through thick and thin. Thelma Todd is the society butterfly, who deserts him in his hour of need. Montague Love portrays the "villain" in a convincing manner, and the cast includes such clever players as Alice Joyce, Ed Brady, Jay Eaton, Robert E. O'Connor and Robert T. Haines.

John Francis Dillon admirably directed "The Noose," and made the most of the dramatic qualities of the play. It is ideal entertainment with suspense maintained throughout.

Richard Barthelmess again demonstrates that he is one of the finest natural actors on the screen, and handles a difficult role with finesse and grace.

"The Noose" deserves its success because it is a good picture, well played by a fine cast.

AT THE CAPITOL.

John Barrymore, America's Leading Actor, in "The Tempest" Will be the Big Attraction at the Capitol Tonight.

John Barrymore has a new leading lady, a dark-eyed, blonde-haired German fraulein named Camilla Horn, who will be seen soon opposite Barrymore in "Tempest" at the Capitol Theatre Her rise from obscurity to fame was sensational after her performance as leading lady for Emil Jannings in "Faust."

Camilla Horn first saw the light of day in Frankfort-on-Main in 1908. Neither of her parents had ever appeared on the stage or screen, though her father started out in life as a musician. When she was very young, Camilla went to Switzerland to school. At the age of fifteen, she began to manufacture pyjamas. This business flourished for a while, but with the deflation of the mark Camilla was forced to give up her trade.

Always fond of dancing, Miss Horn decided to try her fortune at this new hobby, and subsequently hired an instructor and a piano and left the rest to fate. She soon obtained a position in a dance-hall and continued happily at this new work until, spotted one evening by an executive from the UFA Studio, she was asked if she would like to come to the studio the next day for a screen test. The test was successful. When Director F. W. Murnau saw her he immediately cast her in the role of Marguerite opposite Emil Jannings' Mephisto in "Faust."

When United Artists' executives saw Miss Horn in "Faust" they were so impressed with her they sent for her; and upon her arrival in America three short months ago, Miss Horn signed on the dotted line. She is now under contract to Art Cinema Corporation, United Artists' unit.

VIEWS ON SPORT

Two good little teams were badly beaten on Saturday, the Varsity Orphans and P.C.I. Both went down fighting.

It was weight, experience and a strong back field that beat P.C.I. and Varsity Orphans. Both were light, lion-hearted teams and had one remarkable success and each suffered an honorable defeat at the hands of better teams.

Too much credit for the University of Toronto Schools' victory cannot be given Stew Ferguson, their hefty fast running flying wing. Working behind clever interference this boy did most of their ball carrying. He had shifty dodging style of progressing and the muddy field didn't seem to bother him in the least. He will land a berth with some of the senior teams next year and should be a real acquisition for any squad.

* * * * * * *

The teams battled on a gridiron that was a record for its condition. The mud was inches deep, with a greasy covering of water that made it just like soup. The boys soon were so plastered with the goo and in such disarray that their own mothers would have had difficulty in recognizing them.

The Regina Rough Riders and Patricias, senior and junior champions of the West leave to-night for the East. The Rough Riders will meet the Hamilton Tigers in the Ambition City next Saturday and the Patricias will play the winner of the St. Thomas-M.A.A. series. Both teams come East carrying the assertions of sport writers that they are the best teams that ever came out of the West. Tigers rough riding Lochinvars will have to be good to trim the Tigers.

Oshawa deserve congratulations for the way their "Blue Devils" have battled through to the O.R.F.U. Intermediate Championship. Defeated in the first game in Sarnia they started poorly in the game at the Motor City and were eleven down at the end of the first period but came through with a 16 to 7 victory, winning the round 17 to 15. Sarnia has turned out many champion rugby teams and there is credit for Oshawa in defeating them the the first year in the series.

The Maple Leafs performed well Saturday night and defeated the Montreal Maroons 4 to 1. The whole team combined well for the scoring punch, nearly all the goals coming after clever passing attacks. All the N.H.L. teams seem to have the knack of winning at home.

HOCKEY CLUB IS ORGANIZED

Tool Department of of C. G. E. To Field Strong Team This Year.

OFFICERS ELECTED.

The account in the Examiner of the meeting which was held on Thursday, November 22nd in the Tool Room Department of the Canadian General Electric plant for the purpose of organizing for the coming hockey season was rather misleading, as it gave the impression that the officers elected were to represent the Works' Hockey League, when in reality this executive is to look after the interests of the Tool Department only.

The meeting of the Works' Hockey League will be held on Tuesday, Dec. 4th, in the Laboratory Lecture Room, when every department is requested to send a representative, and an invitation is also extended to all hockey players to be present to help iron out the many difficulties which usually confront the organizers of any hockey league.

Ray Evens Marathon Score With El Ouafi

BOSTON, November 26. — Canadian Press.—Joie Ray evened his professional Marathon score with El Ouafi, here on Saturday night when the American flier finished one-sixth of a mile ahead of the French-Algerian Olympic winner in a 26 mile, 385 yard race on the banked track at the Boston Garden.

Ray's time was 2 hours, 34 minutes and 54 seconds, more than ten minutes faster than Ouafi's winning time when he defeated Ray on the Madison Square Garden track several weeks ago.

Junior Pat Players To Play For Regina

REGINA, Sask., Nov. 24 (Canadian Press).—The Regina Rough Riders, Senior rugby champions of Western Canada, will not travel east in quest of Dominion honors unless they are able to include in their line-up four members of the Junior Pats: James, Currie, Doctor and Mitchell. This was the big point expressed at a meeting of the executives of the two clubs held during the noon hour yesterday. The feeling was that the Rough Riders, due to injuries to several of their players, were in such a weakened condition that to take a trip east in search of the greatest honor of all would be mere folly.

A further meeting was held last night.

HUNTING LICENSES SHOW DECREASE

152 Resident Deer Hunting Permits Were Issued This Year.

There was a considerable decrease in the number of hunting licenses issued in the city this year as compared with last season. This year the total number of all licenses issued was 168, a decrease of 71 from the total of 239 issued in 1927.

The licenses are issued at the Empress Hotel, and C. G. Graham gave the figures for the licenses issued this year at 152 for resident deer licenses, 6 for American general hunting licenses, and 10 duck shooting licenses.

Engineers' League.

The Price Setting No. 1 team, although they took four points from D.C. Section last night, are almost certain to win the first half of the schedule in the Engineers' League, as their total to date is 52, six points ahead of the D.C. team. Adams, as usual, kept up the good work and captured high triple with 573. Noble of the D.C. bowlers, had high single 229.

Switchboard No. 2 team almost blanked the A.C. Section and broke last week's tie of twenty points each. McRae and Lowe were the heavy hitters for the winners, the former taking high three 547. Kunst piled up 220 pins for high single.

The Mechanical Engineers gained six points from Industrial Control, but were just able to hold fourth place. Mason was the only outstanding bowler for I.C. Section, while Doris, Benson, and Mitchell were the mainstays of the winners. Benson with 240 took high single, and was one pin shy of high three, which was taken by Doris with 56.6

Price Setting No. 2 defaulted to "Sunshine" Gore and his followers, who are sitting pretty with eight easily earned points.

C.G.E. Girls' League

The onlookers at the Duffus Recreation Academy on Friday night were treated to a classy exhibition of pin toppling when the ten teams in the C.G.E. Ladies Shop League clashed in their weekly roll.

The Fractional Motor No. 1 team started the fireworks by taking two games from their old rivals, the Jolly Fellows. The winners didn't hit their stride until the second game when they chalked up their first win, assisted greatly by the poor bowling of their opponents three of whom failed to top the 100 mark. Jerry O'Connell was the outstanding striker with high scores of 213 and 456.

The Pirates slumped before the onslaught of B. Panter and her gang of Meter Makers who bagged two games out of three and piled up the highest pinnage score total of the night, 2129. E. Biddle was going strong and together with B. Panter turned in some nice scores. Miss Biddle's score of 564 took high three while Miss Panter knocked 227 in a single game.

The Smart Set and Insulation No. 1 teams staged the keenest battle of the night, the former winning two games and taking total pinnage by the close margin of thirty-one pins. B. Jones and H. Panter were the feature swatters for the Insulation Quintette but both high single and high three were gathered in by B. Thompson who made 178 and 346.

Handicapped by two dummy scores throughout the three games, Insulation No. 2 team was no match for Fractional Motor No. 2 who carried home the big half of the score. M. Connors is earning a reputation as a consistent bowler having made high total scores two weeks in a row, this time, her efforts resulted in 180 and 175.

The girls on Meter No. 2 team were not quite so successful as their fellow workers on No. 1 team and dropped two games to the Maple Leaf Bowlers from the Punch Press Department. Dot. Seabrook and L. Murphy were the mainstays of the winners but were outclassed by the clever exhibition of bowling by M. Todd who took high three [illegible]

ROYAL FAIR IS BIG SUCCESS

Greater Exhibition Than Ever Declares J. B. Nelson, Local Agricultural Representative.

EXHIBITS ARE LARGE.

"It is a greater fair than ever before, both in quality and quantity of the exhibits", said J. B. Nelson, local representative of the Ontario Department of Agriculture, to The Examiner on the subject of the 1928 Royal Winter Fair. Mr. Nelson has just returned after spending last week in close study of the exhibits at the Royal.

"Every inch of space in the great Coliseum is taken up by the exhibits. The livestock barns are full of cattle, hogs and sheep. There are about eifiht or nine thousand chickens in the show. The quality of the cattle is particularly noticeable. The three-year-old Holstein bull of Sandy Matchett, Otonabee, won third prize in its class at the Royal and at the C.N.E. the same bull won first in his class and reserve champion of the Exhibition.

"The fruit and flowers are particularly fine this year," said Mr. Nelson. "It was quite noticeable that the Ontario apple growers won a share of the prizes. W. L. Hamilton was a prominent winner. He won the major prizes for the MacIntosh apples and won the grand sweepstakes of the show with a box of his MacIntosh apples.

Surpasses Former Shows.

"There were more foxes and chickens than ever and here too the quality surpassed any former show. The jumping classes are outstanding and some of these classes run well over one hundred entries.

"The Educational exhibits are good. The Dominion Department of Agriculture are stressing some of the impressions gained by the farmers on their tour through Denmark and Great Britain last year.

"The British Columbia exhibit is outstanding among the provincial exhibits. It is a very large exhibit and reflects the care and choice of those who planned it, the wonderful uniformity and quality of the products makes it one of the most striking exhibits in the whole show.

The attendance seems to be larger this year. There was a good attendance from the first day and Saturday was a particularly crowded day."

TWO TESTS FOR TROUBLES.

Locating the exact cause of any car malady is more rapid if the right test is made first. Here are a couple to start with:

In case a light bulb apparently has burned out, test the connection at the base of the lamp.

A suspected leak in the radiator should begin with a check-up of the pump shaft packing nut.

SCHOOL HOLDS OPEN MEETING

Millbrook Classes Entertain Old Boys and Girls and Parents.

PRESENTATION MADE

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MILLBROOK, November 26. — The Assembly Hall of the Continuation School was filled to capacity on Thursday evening for the open meeting of the Literary Society, the graduates having a special invitation to be present, and the parents and friends also being glad of the opportunity to attend a very interesting gathering.

The president, Miss Bertha Lang, occupied the chair, and extended a cordial welcome to the visitors and former pupils, and later in the evening, the Principal, Miss Shirley L. Muir, explained that the public is always welcome to attend the M. S. C. literary sessions, the program being usually of an informal character, and the teaching staff glad to know that interest is being taken in this, or any other, branch of the school's activities.

An opening chorus, "Millbrook High School," was followed by the reading of the minutes by the secretary, Miss Marian O'Brian, the initial meeting for this term having been on October 20th, a Hallowe'en social providing a happy finish to the proceedings, the program which preceded the "fun and frolic," being of a more stately character.

Present Play.

A one-act play, "How Mrs. Gaskell did not Hire a Cook," created a good deal of merriment, the cast being:

Mrs. Gaskell—Francis Jones.
Her Mother—Margaret Seens.
Susan Bib Head—Sadie Allin.
Ah Ling—George Gray.
Nancy (the maid)—Marian Earle.
Elizabeth Priscilla Perkins — Jean Stinson.
Bridget O'Flannigan—K. Donnelly.
Maud Angelina Snigginson—Martha Earle.

A folk dance by six of the girls, with another pupil, Gladys Williamson, at the piano, won favor with the audience, judging by the warm applause, though indeed each number presented received the hearty approval of the large gathering.

A set of slides dealing with the subject of Astronomy, and providing much interesting information regarding the planets, was the next item of the program, Miss Muir giving the lecture material as the different views of the heavenly bodies were thrown on the screen, and H. Jordan managing the lantern.

Community singing with Miss Hamilton at the piano, gave opportunity for relaxation between the two groups in which the slides were shown, and the final chorus was "Dear Old High," Annie McMahon being the accompanist.

Presentation Made.

An "Impromptu Play" in charge of Eddie Nattress, vice-president of the Literary Society, was the closing number, carried out in a decidedly unique manner. Miss Muir, Miss Montgomery, B. B. Dawson, Miss Orchard, Miss Jean Burnham, and the "chief characters," Mr. and Mrs. Howard Jordan, who were greeted with a burst of applause, when called. The "orchestra" struck up "For they are Jolly Good Fellows," which was sung heartily. A handsome floor lamp was brought in by two little boys, Norman McBain and Stanley Johnston and presented to Mr. and Mrs. Jordan, as a gift from the teaching staff, the graduates, and the pupils of the Continuation school, showing in a tangible manner the regard in which the Assistant Principal of the school and his bride are held.

Mr. Jordan made a suitable reply on behalf of his wife and himself, speaking appreciatively of the kindness and the friendliness which had been extended to him ever since his coming to the village, both at the school and in the community generally, and mentioning also the fact that since bringing his bride here in September this same spirit of goodwill and friendship had been a marked feature in the welcome given to Mrs. Jordan as well.

An incident that preceded the formal presentation, and created laughter, relieving the tension which apparently always features a public presentation, particularly when the gift is an expression of a very genuine affection and esteem, had been the coming in of two of the pupils, who knelt before the guest of honor, and gave to Mrs. Jordan a glass rolling pin, elaborately adorned with the school colors, orange and black, and to Mr. Jordan a toy revolver, similarly decorated. Whether a "Maggie and Jiggs" flavor was intended or not, that was the impression that sent a gale of laughter over the audience.

A concluding song, "Keep Right on to the End of the Road," in which all joined, brought a most enjoyable gathering to a fitting close.

Eczema

"I have for some years been troubled with eczema, which salves, ointments, medicated baths and various systems of dieting did no more than temporarily relieve. A doctor remarked that my complaint was chronic. One day this year I bought a bottle of Kruschen, without having much faith in it.

"However, after a fortnight, the burning and irritation, which was the worst feature of the disease, had left me. Naturally I got another bottle and in short of two months all traces of eczema had vanished, and my skin became as white and clean as that of a new-born child. Nor has there since been any return of the trouble.

"I have continued taking the small daily dose of Kruschen and life has taken on a new aspect. I realise that the 'Kruschen feeling' is something more than a mere figure of speech." R. A.

Eczema

"I have for some years been troubled with eczema, which salves, ointments, medicated baths and various systems of dieting did no more than temporarily relieve. A doctor remarked that my complaint was chronic. One day this year I bought a bottle of Kruschen, without having much faith in it.

"However, after a fortnight, the burning and irritation, which was the worst feature of the disease, had left me. Naturally I got another bottle and in short of two months all traces of eczema had vanished, and my skin became as white and clean as that of a new-born child. Nor has there since been any return of the trouble.

"I have continued taking the small daily dose of Kruschen and life has taken on a new aspect. I realise that the 'Kruschen feeling' is something more than a mere figure of speech." R. A.

Original letter on file for inspection.

PRODUCTIVE CAPITAL A COMMON FUND.

The benefits of the international flow of capital are widespread. The backward regions are brought forward, the aggregate of world production is enlarged in the most economical manner, the trade of the world is increased and the general welfare is advanced, with the benefits of such development widely diffused. It is evident that Great Britain, as a great trading nation, has beenfited by the foreign loans made by the United States as well as by those made by herself. It is true that excepting loans made for the stabilization of currencies, the proceeds of these loans have been mainly expended in the United States, but as a rule for products which could be obtained only there. There has been no restriction upon their expenditure elsewhere, and in a number of instances large borrowings in New York by the British Dominions have afforded direct relief to the London market. The gold supplied for the reorganisation of currency systems almost of necessity was obtained in the United States, and the benefits of the stabilization of the exchanges have been shared alike by all trading countries. Obviously the outflow of this capital has had stabilizing and stimulating effects upon industry and trade everywhere.

We are simply emphasizing that the important thing about all these international investments is not who owns them, but the support they have given to the world situation. Industry and trade are the vital factors in economic life; if they prosper, if production grows, trade increases, the purchasing power of populations becomes greater, and the debtor and creditor relations will be of comparatively small importance. The interest or profits of capital are the smallest factors in industry, insignificant in comparison with the aggregate of wages or business turnover.

The international distribution of capital is a normal and permanent movement, inevitably increasing with the improvement of communications and the growing volume of trade and travel. It is in the interest of civilization, of good understanding and maintenance of peaceful and mutually advantageous relations.

Apparently trade balances and incomes from investments have become subordinate factors in the international balance of payments, opportunities for advantageous employment of capital being the decisive influence. The financial centres of the world, and particularly London and New York, are so closely related that demands upon one are quickly felt in the others, and any important movement of capital between them sets in motion compensating movements, which tend to maintain the general equilibrium.

Wheat Averages Higher Future Delivries Are Sold

CHICAGO, Nov. 26 (Canadian Press)—Owing largely to Liverpool quotations being firmer than looked for, wheat prices here averaged higher early to-day. Liverpool despatches said importers were buying future deliveries in face of record world shipments. Starting unchanged to ½ higher, Chicago wheat values reacted little and then hardened again. Corn also displayed relative strength, opening ¼ off to ⅜ to ½ up and later holding near to initial range. Oats were easy.

High Priced Industrials Take Lead On Market

NEW YORK, Nov. 26 (Canadian Press).—Quickly absorbing the heavy selling which followed the raising of the call money rate from six and a half to seven per cent., the stock market pushed forward again to-day under the leadership of high-priced industrial specialties, although a sprinkling of issues fell three to eight points below Friday's final quotations. The bulk of the day's activity was on the side of rising prices, many gains running from five to nearly twenty points.

The rise in money was believed to be incidental to a heavy month-end and Thanksgiving holiday demands for funds. Bankers indicated that call money would be available in fairly large volume at current rates until holiday demands begin to make themselves felt next month.

In its present speculative mood, Wall Street is not paying much attention to-day to business news developments, although most of them continue favorable. Many of the October railroad earnings statements now being published make favorable comparison with the same month last year, and there are indications of increasing inquiries for railroad cars and locomotives, which are reflected in strength of railroad equipment shares. The formation of an oil export company by the operating units of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey is preliminary to formation of the General Oil Export Association under the Webb Act, which trade believes will have a stabilizing influence on the industry.

International Nickel Scores Ten Point Gain

TORONTO, Nov. 26 (Canadian Press).—International Nickel, following its jump to 212 at the opening of the Toronto Stock Exchange, continued to soar and at noon had reached 214 for a net gain of 10¼ points. Its high for the morning was 216. Abitibi gained 6⅜ to 54½. International Nickel New advanced 2¼ to 37 in heavy trading, more than doubling the entire day's transactions on Friday. Banking issues were active. The Canadian Bank of Commerce gained one to 316. Dominion fourteen to 298, Imperial 1½ to 269½, and Montreal three to 390. British Columbia Power gained 1½ to 59. Brazilian crept to 73, up a half, and Canada Cement was up 1¾ to 34¾.

Massey-Harris slumped to 91½ for a loss of 3¼. Canada Dredge went up ⅝ to 64⅜, while Cockshutt dropped a similar amount to 35⅛. C.P.R. went up two to 250¾, Hiram Walkers advanced one to 81.

Unlisted securities were not quite so active, Northern Bakeries was in demand and gained 1½ to 41½. Canada Malting lost 2⅜ to 31. Oils were weaker.

Stock Prices Soar During Heavy Trading

TORONTO, Nov. 26 (Canadaian Press).—Heavy trading with a general upward movement in prices featured the Standard Mining Exchange to-day. Noranda suffered a break in its recent upward climb and was quoted at 66.50 at noon, a net loss of 25 cents.

The issue opened this morning at 68.50, and soon rose to 69.50. Coast Copper was up 1.00 at 63.00 and Hudson Bay a similar amount at 21.00. Sudbury Basin leaped 60 cents to 8.40 and Sheritt-Gordon 10 to 6.85 in very active trading. Amulet went up 1 to 3.25, Crown Reserve 1 to 37. McIntyre went up 30 to 22.50, and Mining Corporation 20 to 3.75, Teck-Hughes advanced 10 to 8.25.

There were good gains among the unlisted securities. Abana was at 3.35, a gain of 15, Big Missouri 60, up 2; Capital Rouyn 11½, up ½, Jackson Manion 25, up 2; Mandy Mines, 1.40, up 3, and Falconbridge 5.00, up 25 cents. Pend Oreille dropped 25 to 9.75, and Central Manitoba 2 to 76.

Noranda.

As mentioned in our market letter Saturday, the total volume of shares traded of Noranda Mines on the four markets where the stock is listed passed any previous mark. One hundred and one thousand, two hundred and fifty shares changed hands on the Standard Mining Exchange. The New York curb was a close second with 85,800. The Montreal curb and Toronto curb showed 39,458 and 35,055. As stated Saturday, rumors galore were heard on the Street. So far, the seal of official recognition has not been given to any of the many rumors.

A new motor has been installed on the No. 3 shaft, doubling the hoisting speed and thereby increasing the hoisting capacity by 25 percent. The No. 3 and No. 4 shafts will be connected up on the 100 foot level in ten days' time. Four drifts are in ore on the 975 foot level and two on the 725 foot level in the "H" orebody.

The present flux going to the smelter has run as high as $14 in gold, while the average is reported to be $4. One to two percent of copper is also present in the flux. Very high values have been obtained on the 975 foot level, up to 20 percent copper and some sections have shown $26, $35, and $46 in gold.

Sudbury Basin.

A special general meeting of the shareholders of Sudbury Basin Mines will be held on the 5th of December, 1928, for the purpose of authorizing the directors of the company to accept an offer from Ventures, Ltd., to buy 1,250,000 shares of Falconbridge Nickel Mines for the following considerations: (a) The payment of $600,000 in cash; (b) The issue and allotment to Ventures Limited, of 300,000 fully paid shares without any nominal or par value in the capital stock of Sudbury Basin; (c) The granting by Sudbury Basin to Venture Limited of a sole and exclusive option to purchase all or any part of an additional 200,000 shares without any nominal or par value in the capital stock of Sudbury Basin at the price of $10 per share, such option to be exercisable by Ventures Limited at any time up to and including the 31st of December, 1930.

Sylvanite.

An unexpected extension of the No. 1 vein is now being developed on the 850 foot level of Sylvanite Mines. Previously it was thought that the eastern end of this ore had been reached, but further work disclosed the fact that the high grade ore continued to the east. It is quite possible that this ore shoot may have a length of 400 feet and an average width of 10 feet.

Jackson Manion

A Government investigation into the circumstances surrounding the recent spectacular price slump in Jackson Manion Mines has been instituted by Attorney General W. H. Price. Toronto brokers Saturday received questionnaires from the Department with orders to report on all transactions in Jackson-Manion, executed by them between October 1st and November 20th. Second only in importance to the Attorney-General's action comes a request from the Hon. R. J. Manion for an investigation to be instituted. Dr. Manion has been a director of Jackson-Manion since its incorporation in 1927. Probably no event in Canadian mining stocks has attracted as much attention as the spectacular slump in Jackson-Manion during the last month from around 90c a share to an extreme low of 17c. (Mail & Empire)

Aldermac.

Our field man in Rouyn reports that Aldermac have cut 14 feet of high grade ore on the 500 foot level. This is a new body and is said to parallel the body which was cut recently on this level. It is thought that these two parallel bodies are the upward extension of the high grade ore that was cut by diamond drilling on the 1125 foot level some time ago.

Mining Briefs

A Special Service to The Examiner

A public offering of shares in the Lindsley Brothers Ventures Limited is anticipated within two or three months. Officials intimate to the Financial News Bureau that this is substantially correct. Ventures is a holding company for the Falconbridge Nickel Mines and holds other properties from coast to coast.

A report from Boston Creek states that the winze sunk on the vein from 250 to 375 feet at the Amity Copper property, along with about 140 feet of drifting at the bottom has put a large tonnage of concentrating ore in sight. Sinking of the shaft to a depth of 600 feet is now said to be under way. Amity has shipped eight cars of ore to the Noranda Smelter to date. The district at present is the scene of considerable activity, several scouts of big companies looking over prospects in the area.

It is reported from Kirkland Lake that diamond drilling from the 500 foot level of the Kirkland Hunton will commence shortly. This follows the recommendation of E. W. Tood, geologist.

Twelve men under the direction of engineer Swanson are said to be blasting and trenching on the new find at the Dugas property, optioned by Bunker Hill Extension, in Duparquet township, Quebec.

A suggestion that comes to our ears is to the effect that several of the operating companies in the eastern Kirkland Lake field may come together as they "over-lap." This last word means that their directorates are substantially the same. Among the companies which could be affected by the remark are the Pawnee and Ritchie, Murphy and East Main, and the Oliver Gold Mines and another company which is now being formed. In the first instance it is unlikely that any agreement will be reached as the properties have such widely different prospects. In the second instance the development work on one is far ahead of the other. The latter case appears suitable at first glance, but is unlikely also as it would be logical to assume that the incorporation of one would be withheld temporarily until the other was ready for a charter. The Bidgood and Cambro-Kirkland work closely together, but it appears as if this would be the ultimate extent of their relations. One is far in advance of the other.

NEVER INVITED TO BECOME JUDGE

Duke of York Tells Members of Hardwicke Society.

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 26— (Canadian Press.)—"I have not yet been invited to become a judge," declared the Duke of York, at the Hardwicke Society's dinner, when he alluded to the many positions he held.

The Society takes its name from one of the most famous Lord Chancellors. That famous and, happily, still living advocate, Sir Edward Clarke, has acknowledged that at its meeting he found his best training for his work at the Bar.

"Not long ago," continued His Royal Highness, "I read somewhere that members of the Royal Family were 'obvious' persons. I was not quite sure what this expression meant, so I thought I would look up the word 'obvious' in the dictionary, and one of the definitions given was 'goes without saying.' I have attended many dinners at which I have wished to be 'obvious' and 'go without saying,' but that is not the case to-night, for it gives me a real pleasure to propose this toast.

"I fear I have little personal experience of the law. It falls to my lot to hold many positions. I am president of hospitals and societies of every kind. I hold commissions in all three fighting services. I am a Maori chief, a Boy Scout, a draper, and at last, but not least, a bencher of the Inner Temple, but I have never been invited to become a judge."

MONTREAL, Nov. 26—(Canadian Press).—Directors of the Canadian National Railways decided at a monthly meeting to-day to co-operate with the Canadian Pacific Railway in the purchase and joint operation of the Edmonton and Dunvegan Railway in Alberta. The Canadian Pacific purchased the railway from the Alberta Government during the summer on an understanding that the Canadian National could participate in a deal on equal terms.

Around the City

The fire department answered two calls yesterday. The first was at 11.56 a.m. to 569 George street north, where a dirty chimney was the cause of a small blaze. It was extinguished, however, before any damage was done. The second was at 7.57 p.m. to 199 Hunter street, west where a defective chimney caused another small fire. It, too, was put out without damage being caused. Chemicals were used in both cases.

PASTOR TO HEAD BAPTIST COLLEGE

Describes Central London District As Home of Artificial Values.

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 26—(Canadian Press.)— Rev. Thomas Phillips, who after nearly 24 years' service as pastor of the Bloomsbury Baptist Church has become principal of the South Wales Baptist College, when saying farewell to his congregation described Central London as the home of artificial values. "It seems," he said, "to want a minister not out to serve, but out to swank. If I had come up in my Rolls-Royce and entered the pulpit all dressed up like a cardinal, and given learned sermons which no one could understand, everyone would have said, 'How Wonderful!' But that, to my mind, is not the way to minister; and in spite of the distrust of London, where everyone doubts everybody else and regards everyone as a rogue until he proves himself a saint, I think I can claim that I have not been a failure, and that I have won your hearts through service."

PROVIDING HOUSING WILL BE BIG TASK

Committee Is Commencing To Make Plans For Old Home Week.

Discussing the plans for Old Home Week with The Examiner this morning, James Dutton, president of the Chamber of Commerce, in whose organization the responsibility is vested, for providing accommodation for visitors, pointed out, that the task would require considerable skill and ingenuity. However, a committee would be appointed right away, said Mr. Dutton, and if the committee in charge of compiling mailing lists would take the names of parties turning in lists of friends the problem of finding accommodation might become less difficult, as the informant might find room in his or her home for a friend.

EX-SERVICE MEN TAKE ACTION

Government Officials Are Highly Incensed By Trophies Incident

Deputy Minister of National Defence Says Other Cities Are Clamoring For Guns and Peterborough's Can Be Disposed of To Them.

CANON SCOTT SAYS CAPTURED GUNS PREACH GOSPEL OF PEACE AND SHOULD BE HONORED

"The Whole Legion Is Right Behind You," Is Message of Vice-President To Peterborough War Veterans — Action of Ex-Service Men Approved.

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 27.—(Special to The Examiner).—"If Peterborough authorities don't want the war trophies given to them by the Government, there are hundreds of other cities and towns in Canada which would like to have them" was the declaration of prominent Government officials to-day when their attention was drawn to news despatches from Peterborough, where war veterans, incensed over the action of town employees in placing captured German guns on the local dump, according to them, from a place formerly in a square, protested vigorously.

To The Examiner this morning expressions of sorrow were made by those in whose care war trophies are placed that the mementoes of Canadian heroism in the battlefields of the greatest war of all time, should have been subjected to such indignities. At the same time the feeling was expressed that the whole matter was a case of carelessness and thoughtlessness rather than intentional sacrilege.

Action Is Shocking.

G. J. Desbaratas, Deputy Minister of National Defence, said such action as that credited to Peterborough officials was shocking, and that it was hardly in keeping with the undertaking of cities presented with war trophies to give them places of honor and to care for them. He felt that if it had been necessary to remove them from the square which they formerly adorned, the garbage heap in Peterborough was hardly the place for them.

While the department of national defence is not in charge of war trophies Mr. Desbarats said military authorities had a sentimental interest in captured guns and other relics of active service, and would prefer to see them given into the charge of those capable of taking good care of them and giving them the honorable locations their histories merited.

"There are so many cities which are clamoring for war trophies that I think if Peterborough did not want these guns any more, the least they might have done was to let us know so that others might be presented with them."

Archivist Regrets Action

Dr. Arthur G. Doughty, C.M.G., L.L.D., Deputy Minister and Public Archivist, under whose direct care war trophies were distributed, also expressed regret at the Peterborough incident but was inclined to believe that there had been no wilful malice in their removal to the 'ash can". He will take the matter up with the Minister of National Defence when Colonel The Hon. J. L. Ralston returns to the capital next week, and will ask a report on the condition of the guns from military authorities. The public archivist has authority to withdraw war trophies from any city which fails to keep them in proper condition.

Dr. Doughty announced that he has already distributed 1,300 sets of trophies to Canadian municipalities. The guns given to Peterborough were big German field pieces captured by Canadians during the war. Hundreds of other cities have asked for trophies but they are unable to procure them. It was pointed out that the government requires cities accepting trophies to take proper care of them. Officers of the Department of National Defence co-operate with the archives branch by making inspections of trophies on their visits to various centres in order to check up on the condition of the pieces.

All Legion is in Support

On behalf of the dominion executive of the Canadian Legion of the British Empire Service League, Lieut. Col. I. R. Laflech, Dominion Vice President and ranking official of the Legion in Canada at the present time, issued the following statement in the form of a letter to Colonel Ackerman, President of the Ontario Command of the Legion at Peterborough:—

"Timely and orderly recovery of guns by you and Canadian Legion members in Peterborough was most appropriate action possible. Congratulations! War trophies won by Canadians at heavy cost while defending the very existence of the Empire against bitter foes and at the same time raising Canada to the dignity and responsibilites of a British independent nation, may not be treated with disrespect. They should occupy the place of honour as a reminder of our fellow men who fell and of the blessings of peace. The Whole Legion is right behind you."

CANON SCOTT SYMPATHIZES WITH SOLDIERS' FEELINGS

Canon F. G. Scott, C.M.G., D.S.O., M.A., D.C.L., LL.D., of Quebec, formerly Chaplain of the First Canadian Division in France, honored and revered by everyone who served with him, sent The Examiner the following message:

Quebec, Que., November 27. —"You asked for my opinion in the matter of the City Council and the German guns. As it may affect other parts of Canada I would say that while German guns are not in themselves objects of beauty they stand as reminders of Canadian valour and noble sacrifice, and they tell to future generations the futility and wickedness of war. In this way they preach the Gospel of Peace. Consequently, it is quite fitting that they should be preerved in public places. I am confident that if the City Council had looked upon the matter in this light, the trouble would not have arisen. I can perfectly understand why it was our old soldiers felt aggrieved, and trust that some better understanding of the position will lead to a solution of the difficulty."

Toronto Veterans Tell Approval.

(Special to The Examiner.)

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 27.—Military men to-day express the greatest approbation of their Peterborough comrades' action in salvaging the captured cannon from the dump, where they had been relegated yesterday by the civic authority.

THE WEATHER

The mercury in the thermometer last night went down to 9 degrees above zero—the lowest up to the present date. There was an eclipse of the moon at an early hour this morning, and the conditions were perfect for viewing it. The sky was cloudless, and the earth's shadow was perfectly outlined as its passed over the face of the moon.—W. P.

Announcement Brings Forth Much Loud Cheering

"The Veterans have recaptured the guns and are now pulling them up George street," was the announcement flashed on the screen at the Regent Theatre last evening. The audience expressed their sympathy and full approval of the prompt actions being carried out by the Veterans by clapping, whistling and loud cheering. This is only a sample of the feeling pervading in the whole city last night. Everyone was desirous of seeing the guns quickly removed from their dishonorable resting place.

CANADIAN MINE VALUATION UP LAST QUARTER

Appreciation Is Greatest in Base Metal Producers of Dominion.

ONE HAS DOUBLED.

International Nickel Reaches Total of Nearly Half a Billion Dollars.

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 27.—(Special to The Examiner).—Market valuation of Canada's leading mines has appreciated greatly in the past three months and at present prices nineteen properties are to-day valued at $1,187,725,266 contrasted with a valuation of $825,288,345 as of August 27, last. The base metal producers have enjoyed the greatest appreciation and the valuation placed upon these properties is far in excess of the gold mines of Northern Ontario. The advance in the market value of International Nickle, Consolidated Smelters, Mond Nickel and Noranda in recent months has added nearly $350,000,000 to the total valuation.

News of the splitting of the shares of International Nickel and a pending merger with Mond has more than doubled the market valuation of the shares of this company and brought the total to nearly half a billion dollars, at $425,454,584, against a valuation of $182,944,536 as of August 27, last.

Nickel is currently valued at more than twice the second ranking mine, Consolidated Smelters. Smelters in advance to 400 has placed this property again in second position at $203,545,200, followed by Noranda with a valuation of $154,799,340.

Mond Nickel has a current value of approximately $100,750,000 giving four properties in excess of $100,000,000.

Hollinger has regained its position as the leading gold property, not so much by an appreciation in value, but more by the fact that the valuation of Teck Hughes and Lake Shore has depreciated in the past few months. Hollinger, which at one time was well above the $100,000,000 mark, has dropped back to $41,328,000 and Lake Shore and Teck Hughes have both lost ground. Lake Shore, at current prices, gives a total of $37,000,000 compared with $48,000,000 in August last and Teck Hughes is down from $44,623,153 to $39,401,295.

Manitoba has two properties in the first ten. Hudson Bay is well up the list at $42,200,000 ranking fifth, and Sheritt-Gordon ninth with $27,200,000.

Quebec is represented by Noranda in third position and Abana is 13th, currently valued at $12,000,000.

Wright Hargraves is well down in the list in 14th. position, and the valuation has dropped from $19,250,000 to $11,000,000 in the past three months. Coast Copper, Premier and Pendoreille uphold the Coast in 12th, 15th and 16th position respectively. Dome Mines has slipped to 17th and Silvanite 19th with Sudbury Basin 18th.

ST. ANDREW'S SUPPER HELD THIS EVENING

Supper Served Until 7.30—Excellent Program Follows.

Despite several announcements which gave a wrong date the annual Fowl Supper and Concert under the auspices of St. Andrew's Ladies' Aid is being held in the Sunday School Hall this evening and, as usual, should be well attended as the ladies of St. Andrew's Church are famed for their fowl suppers. The program should be an excellent one and altogether a most pleasant evening should be held.

Statement Made By Mayor

Members of City Council Discuss Matter With The Examiner.

"STORM IN TEAPOT."

People of Peterborough Have Not Forgotten Pledge, Declares Alderman Ackerman.

Returning from Toronto at midnight last night, summoned by 'phone, His Worship Mayor Roland Denne, whose name, along with that of Alderman J. M. Greene, had been connected with authority for the removal of the guns from Confederation Square, this morning declared to The Examiner that 'the whole thing seems to me a storm in a teapot," when an interview was sought with him.

He and Alderman Greene were encountered on Water street as they were going to the City Clerk's office to discuss the matter and there was no objection raised as the reporter accompanied them. In the office was City Clerk S. R. Armstrong, Mayor Denne and Alderman Greene. The last named recounted a phone conversation with a man whose name he did not know. The unknown caller declared that had a bomb been exploded in front of his (Alderman Greene's) property, all he could say was "good luck to it."

"We're going to have a statement made ready for you," said His Worship, "for we have our interests here as well as anyone and it is not our intention to run away from the issue.

Alderman Greene—"We would like to talk it over together and when you come back you may have our statement."

A brief conference was held shortly afterward and at 11.40 am. the following statement was handed The Examiner:

Mayor's Statement

"I am sorry that I was out of the city yesterday when some feeling was worked up over the German guns that were in Confederation Square, but I was in Toronto to visit the Winter Fair, as it is useful as well as interesting for me to see these large exhibitions. It might have been as well if those who were behind the meeting in the Legion Hall had waited until they had heard the explanation of the matter.

"Some time ago the City Council authorized the representatives of the Council on the War Memorial Committee to clean up and beautify the Square in connection with the erection of the Memorial. It was felt that the Captain Brown monument, which stood in a position in front of the Memorial, should be moved, the concrete walks changed and added to, and the Square levelled and shrubs planted to give the Memorial as effective a setting as possible."

In Way of Work

"The guns were in the way of this work. At a meeting at the Square at which three of the Council's representatives were present, and other members of the War Memorial Committee were present, it was decided that it was advisable to move the guns to another location. A discussion at a meeting of the War Memorial Committee showed the same consensus of opinion. At a meeting of the Board of Works of the City Council the subject was brought up, and another location was not decided upon.

"Col. C. H. Ackerman is a representative of the Council on the War Memorial Committee and a member of the Board of Works, but he was not at these meetings.

"I saw Col. W. G. Hall, Command-

Endurance Flight Ends In Failure

FRESNO, Calif, Nov. 27 (Canadian Press).—The endurance flight of Lee Schoenhair and John Guglielmetti ended in failure at 1.40 p.m. to-day when their plane landed at Helm Airport, 40 miles west of here. It had ninety gallons of gasoline left, which was not enough to carry them to a new record. They had been in the air forty-two hours and fifty-nine minutes and would have needed to stay up another twenty-four hours to have set a new endurance flight record.

ROYAL PATIENT PASSES MORE RESTFUL NIGHT

Official Bulletin Relieves Anxiety Over King George's Illness.

DOCTORS ARRIVE EARLY.

His Majesty's Stamina Undergoes Severe Strain Today, Suffering Pain.

LONDON, Nov. 27 (Canadian Press).—Anxiety over King George's illness received a little relief this morning when the physicians issued a non-committal bulletin. The physicians said the royal patient had passed a more restful night and that his feverishness had somewhat abated. The temperature was not given, and other conditions were said to be unchanged.

The doctors were at the palace early, arriving shortly after nine o'clock, but it was not till noon that they left the sick room and issued the bulletin. Hundreds of persons were around the palace when the bulletin was posted on the railings of the gate.

The Duke of York, speaking at a meeting of the British Poster Advertising Association to-day, said: "I am glad to be able to tell you there is a slight improvement in the king's condition this morning."

"Some of you will know what pleurisy is and how depressing it can be," continued the king's second son. "There are two things to be remembered. From the nature of the illness, progress must be slow and there must be ups and downs, but progress has been made.

Undergoing Severe Strain

King George's stamina was undergoing severe strain to-day owing to the constant pain from pleurisy and the consequent loss of sleep. Although the anxiety has not diminished, variability of temperature and persistence of pleurisy were regarded as normal at the present stage. A pessimistic view of the king's condition was expressed by The Daily Mail to-day.

Important Message Sent

The Evening News to-day printed a despatch from Sir Percival Phillips, special correspondent of The Daily Mail with the Prince of Wales, dated Dodoma, Tanganlika Territory, Africa, reading: "Important message for the Prince of Wales arrived this morning. The courier was immediately despatched to meet him on the road from his camp to Dodoma. The Prince is due here early this evening."

The News adds that a high official at Buckingham Palace said that the Prince's return to Dodoma was part of his plans before he learned of the King's illness and was not due to any request from England.

HALL CROWDED BY MEN WHO PROTEST INDIGNITY THEY BELIEVE HEAPED UPON CANADIAN SOLDIERS

Marked Restraint Shown in Meeting Presided Over by Lieut.-Col. Ackerman—Two Ex-Officers Marshal Biggest Gathering Since 1919.

The guns have been saved!

Five hundred Peterborough veterans who had helped manhandle Canadian batteries up the chalky slopes of Vimy Ridge, through the shell holes of the Somme, and over the muddy hills at Passchendaele, last night bent their backs again to the long-ago familiar task.

On April 9, 1916; in September of 1916, and in that dismal fall of 1917 the men were inspired by the thought that victory might lie just over the hill, to be won by efforts of their guns.

Last night the inspiration came from a desire to save from degradation the only visible symbols of that victory which they so dearly won—the captured German field pieces.

And they succeeded equally well.

"The Battle of the Dump," as someone humorously termed it, began shortly before noon yesterday, when city employees hauled the guns from their concrete bases in Confederation Square to the civic rubbish heap, quickened in tempo as the afternoon saw the message carried to every returned soldier in the city, and swelled to a crescendo at the biggest gathering of veterans in Peterborough since the banquet tendered by the City Council on demobilization.

There was not an unseemly note in the whole meeting, or in the parade which followed, but, an evidently grim determination to right the indignity which the ex-service men believed had been cast upon these trophies, and upon the men who captured them.

A Bolt From the Blue

The action which called the veterans into activity came at noon yesterday as a bolt from the blue. City employees were seen hauling the guns down George street, and were traced to the rubbish heap at the foot of Simcoe street. There the guns were discarded, bearing insulting signs. There had been no smallest whisper of the proposed removal of the trophies; not even the Aldermen in whose care the trophies repose for the time being, knew of it. All that Harry Evans, in charge of the work, had to go on was his instruction to take the guns out of Confederation Square. Alderman J. M. Greene, to whom, with Mayor Roland Denne, is credited the giving of the order, told reporters he did not know where the guns were to be put; the instructions had not gone that far.

A meeting of ex-soldiers was called for last night, and the Legion Hall was filled, with many standing.

Captain Abraham Explains

The evening's events started, very appropriately, with a silence of two minutes in honor of the men with whom these men had parted forever in Flander's Fields. Captain J. A. Abraham, President of the Canadian Legion, presided at the regular meeting of veterans. He took occasion, before vacating the chair, to explain his situation as a member of the War Memorial Committee, from which emanated the first suggestion of removing the trophies.

"The matter was brought up by a lady who lost her son overseas," Captain Abraham said, "and there was a great deal of discussion about the guns. It wasn't mentioned that they were going to dump them anywhere.

"There was another officer of the Legion present, and he expressed his opinion. Then I was asked, and I will tell you the words I used. 'Well, in my opinion, and I'm not speaking as an officer of the Legion or as a representative of the returned soldies these guns do bring back memories to the parents and to the returned soldiers, and you can do as you please as far as I'm concerned.'

"A fews days later I met the Mayor on the street and he asked me if the Legion was going to find a place for the guns, and I said, 'No, we have no place for them.' I didn't think the Legion would want the guns.

"I just want to make this explanation because I don't want the idea going around that I am connected with the moving of the guns."

Meeting Thrown Open

Captain Abraham then vacated the chair, and Lieutenant Colonel C. H. Ackerman, President of the Ontario Command of the Legion and a past-President of the local branch, was elected chairman, with N. E. Crowe as secretary.

"I don't think there is any doubt in the minds of any person here as to why this meeting has been called," Col. Ackerman said, after being greeted enthusiastically. "I'm not here as an officer or ex-officer of the Canadian Legion, nor as a member of the City Council, I'm here as an ex-service man. (Cheers)

"I was advised at noon to-day of the change in the location of the only substantial memoirs of the Great War we have in Peterborough and I immediately sought the authority which had removed the trophies. I found that there was no authority in the minutes of the City Council, and could not find that any Committee of the Council had made a recommendation. Then I went to see for myself if these guns had actually been deposited on the rubbish heap, and I saw them on the dump behind the C. P. R. freight shed.

"In throwing this meeting open for discussion I would ask you as ex-service men to restrain whatever indignation you feel. Remember we are all desirous of being fair, and we must not jeapordize our situation in the eyes of the public by becoming excited about this matter.

"I am convinced that the situation has been brought about by a mistake or through indifference on the part of somebody. It is this indifference to the seriousness of what has been done that has brought you men out to-night. —((Cheers).

"It has been suggested that we replace the guns in Confederation Square, in the positions from which they were taken. I have secured legal advice, and we would be committing an untoward act if we were to do that. What I suggest is that

SUCCESSION IS DISCUSSED

Only One Sovereign and Sovereignty Not Shared By Consort.

DUTIES ARE SOCIAL.

(Special by Henry Somerville—Copyright).

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 27.—Whilst there is faith as well as hope that King George V. will be spared yet many years to reign over his people, there has been natural questioning as to the position that would arise from accession of the heir to the Throne whilst still unmarried. The constitutional principle is that there is only one sovereign and sovereignty is not shared by the consort. There are many instances of the sovereign being unmarried at accession. Queen Victoria's marriage took place after she had been three years on the throne. George IV. was separated from his wife, Caroline, when he succeeded in 1820. Caroline's name was omitted from the new prayer book issued at the accession of her husband, and she was not crowned with the King though she attempted to force her way into Westminster Abbey on Coronation Day. Charles II. came to the throne in 1660 and was not married until 1662. The public duties of the Queen Consort are chiefly of a social nature, the most important, perhaps, being the holding of courts in July. The Queen Consort is first lady in the land and has precedence over all subjects.

Is Second Lady.

Princess Mary now ranks as second lady in the land, and, strictly speaking, Princess Elizabeth comes third, taking precedence of her mother, the Duchess of York. In the normal course, the Queen Mother would preside in the absence of a Royal Consort, and Princess Mary, as the monarch's sister, would be next in order if her mother's strength were not equal to the demand. The duties of the Prince of Wales are those which he takes upon himself, or assumes in obedience to the sovereign.

There has been gossip of the Prince of Wales refusing the throne, but this is dismissed as idle and baseless. The Prince has made public reference to his expectations of the time when he will accept the responsibilities of the Crown. Upon the accession of the Prince of Wales, the Duke of York would become the heir apparent. Princess Elizabeth would be next in order of succession, failing the issue of the Prince of Wales, and the male issue of the Duke of York.

COMBS AND PENS FROM MILK.

When you button your shirt comb your hair or sign your name with a fountain pen you give little thought to skim milk. Yet says G. E. Holmhead chemist of the Bureau of Dairy Industry, U. S. Department of Agriculture, skim milk played an important part in producing the buttons, comb and fountain pen. Chemists are now using casein, one of the constituents of milk, says Popular Science Monthly, to produce synthetic ivory, and substitutes for horn, ebony, pearl, amber and tortoise shells.

TOMMY SEES.

Yesterday's incidents in connection with the war trophies call to mind the poem by Kipling, "Tommy," and many veterans thought of it. Extracts are:

"O it's Tommy this, an' Tommy that, an' 'Tommy go away';
But it's 'Thank you, Mr. Atkins,' when the band begins to play.

* * *

"For it's Tommy this, an' Tommy that, an' 'Tommy wait outside,'
But it's 'Special train for Atkins,' when the trooper's on the tide.

"While it's Tommy this, an' 'Tommy that, an' 'Tommy fall be'ind;
But it's 'Please to walk in front, sir,' when there's trouble in the wind.

* * *

Most of all, last night's events indicate the truth of the last chorus in Kipling's poem:

"For it's Tommy this, an' Tommy that, an' 'Chuck him out, the brute!'
But it's 'Savior of 'is country,' when the guns begin to shoot;
An' it's Tommy this, an' Tommy that, an' anything you please;
An' Tommy ain't a bloomin' fool —you bet that Tommy sees!"

The Peterborough "Tommies" who boarded the specials bound war-ward and stepped in front when trouble was in the wind a decade ago, showed last night that "Tommy sees."

Hydro Wins By Big Majority

Public Ownership Has 103 Majority Southampton Vote

Ratepayers, By 228 To 125, Authorize Commission To Proceed Immediately With Survey Which is Power To Community.

ALL THREE WARDS IN TOWN VOTE FOR HYDRO PRACTICALLY ALL AVAILABLE VOTE IS CAST

The Spirited Campaigning Which Characterized the Power Fight During Past Two Weeks Prevails to Last Moment Before Vote.

SOUTHAMPTON, Nov. 27.—Hydro won the first stage of its Southampton power battle in handy fashion yesterday, when ratepayers, by a vote of 228 to 125, authorized the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission to proceed immediately with the survey which ultimately, it is expected, will bring "power at cost" to the people of this community.

Hydro forces captured all three wards. In the North Ward the vote on the enabling by-law was 30 to 26 in their favor. In the Centre Ward they polled 87 vote to 32 for the private-ownership camp. And the South Ward gave them victory by a poll of 111 to 67.

The spirited campaigning which characterized the power fight during the past couple of weeks prevailed down to the very last moment. Indication of the interest displayed by the ratepayers in the battle can be gained from the fact that the 353 ballots cast during the day represented practically the total vote available of all property-holders, and from the fact that the last vote was cast before 4 o'clock in the afternoon. Suggestions that "sharp" practices prevailed in the closing hours of the campaign are discounted equally by both power factions.

Hydro Forces Are Happy

Local Hydro supporters are jubilant over what they term their "cleanly fought and clean-cut" success. To the last-minute participation in the campaign of Hon. William Findlayson, representing the Government, and of the complete personnel of the Hydro Commission they attribute the greatest credit for their victory. Steps will be taken, they state, to have the Town Council submit a money by-law to the people just as soon as the Hydro engineers complete their survey of the town's electrical requirements and submit estimates in connection therewith.

Last night there was strong talk of the W. B. Foshay Company appealing the ratepayers' verdict, on the ground, it was reported, that anti-Hydro voters had been left off the lists. Reeve James C. Tolmie, strong Hydro proponent, was inclined to scout the possibility of such action.

On the other hand, W. H. Grove, Assistant to the President of the Foshay interests, stated definitely that he would go to Toronto to-day to confer with the firm's solicitors, Kilmer, Irving and Davis, as to what action, if any, should be taken in this regard.

"Of course," said Mr. Grove, "I am not speaking for the company, but I would say, offhand, that the verdict will be appealed."

The citizens who supported the Hydro cause celebrated the victory by a street demonstration here last night.

WITNESS SAYS MAN ADMITTED SLAYING TO HER

Girl Swears Prisoner Told Her He Shot Cochrane Officer.

PRELIMINARY HEARING.

Shooting Took Place Two Years Ago—Man Charged With Murder.

COCHRANE, November 27. Canadian Press. — Evidence that John Invanchuk had made statements implicating himself in connection with the shooting two years ago, of Harry Constable, was given at Invanchuk's preliminary hearing yesterday. He is charged with the murder of Constable, a former Provincial License Inspector, and following the hearing Magistrate Tucker committed him for trial at the Spring assizes.

Sophie Dincorn, 18, said that Invanchuk had given her a gun shortly after midnight, October 16, 1926, an hour after Inspector Constable had been shot, within a few feet of his own door. She returned the weapon to Invanchuk a week later, she said, adding that some time afterward he had told her he had destroyed the gun and that he had shot Constable. She said that Invanchuk had warned her to keep the information secret.

Taxi Driver Testifies.

John Biletski, South Porcupine taxi driver, testified that in September last, he had arranged a meeting between Invanchuk and Sophie Dincorn at Invanchuk's request. He swore that Invanchuk had told him that the girl had a secret which he (the accused) did not want to get out, for if it did, "that would be the last of him."

Dominic Cozzubello testified that Ivanchuk had suggested October 18, 1927, that he start up a place where gambling could be conducted. Cozzubello testified that he had informed Invanchuk that he was afraid of the police, and that Invanchuk had replied that if the authorities interfered "he would handle them as he had done with Constable the year before."

Sergeant Frank Gardner testified that Cozzubello had made substantially the same statement to him on January 25 last. He told of arresting Invanchuk in Cochrane, early this month, and said that the accused had laughed and said that he had been in a certain hotel the night that Constable was shot. Invanchuk had denied the shooting, Sergeant Gardner said.

Other evidence was chiefly a repetition of testimony given at the inquest two years ago, detailing circumstances surrounding the crime.

Divers have been searching in Commando Lake for the weapon, but search for the weapon has been abandoned for the time being. The lake is frozen over.

CAR DRIVERS HAVE NARROW ESCAPES

Light Snowfall On Pavement Leaves Streets in Treacherous Condition.

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 27.—(Examine Staff Correspondence).—The new pavement is presenting a new phase to local motorists. The sudden cold weather with a light snowfall has left the smooth surface of the streets in a treacherous condition. Drivers have only managed to avoid accidents by very small margins in many cases. Early yesterday evening, a small closed car came east along Tice street. A large truck did not stop to give it the right of way of the through street and the result was that the driver of the car was obliged to turn sharply to the left and run up George street. But his car turned twice around on the slippery street before coming to rest against the curb on the opposite side of the street. The driver said he had disengaged his clutch and was not using his brakes since his car was going so slowly. He was unable to explain how he had skidded so far when he was only going about fifteen miles an hour in the beginning. At the corner of Front and Bridge streets, several cars executed fancy turns during the evening. One driver managed to turn completely around on the interscction when he applied his brakes to make a left hand turn.

HAS RESTFUL NIGHT.

LONDON, November 27. Canadian Press. — It was announced officially this morning that King George's temperature was somewhat lower but that his condition otherwise was unchanged. He spent a more restful night.

Airedale Howls When Siren Ceases Blowing

(Examiner Correspondence).

MARMORA, Nov. 27.—Hector Boudreau, of Deloro, has an Airedale which has developed an unusual habit. Each day the whistle blows four times at the plant. The animal, whether indoors or roaming around, straightens up as it hears the familiar sound, waits till the siren has ceased, and then gives the best impersonation that its canine mind suggests.

CHOIR STAGES ENTERTAINMENT

FACTORY CLOSES

(Examiner Correspondence)

BURNBRAE, Nov. 27.—St. Andrew's choir staged a very interesting entertainment on Friday evening in the basement of the church. An amusing dialogue by the lady members of the choir was the feature attraction, while other musical numbers and readings by local talent were well given. Alford Gifford, baritone soloist, assisted in the program and his numbers were much appreciated. At the close of the evening a dainty lunch was served. The proceeds amounted to $54.

Factory Closes.

Friday and Saturday marked the closing of the cheese factory season here, and the farm women now face the annual fall task of butter-making.

GASOLENE FROM SHALE

Pressure-cracking tests on Canadian crude shale oil and on bitumen from bituminous sands show that these raw materials are important reserve sources of motor fuel. Gasoline yields of 18 to 20 Imperial gollons per ton of shale retorted, and about 40 per cent by volume of the dehydrated bitumen are reported. Other products from these oil and bitumen raw materials are appreciable quantities of good value coke and uncondensed gas of high calorific value. The quality of the gasolene from the shale oil may be considered good and that from the bitumen exceptionally good.

MAN'S PRAYER IN JAIL CELL BARES CRIME

Deaf Mute's Devotion Leads to Confessions From Two.

LOOT IS RECOVERED

Two of Defendants Have Already Admitted Crime to Police.

CHARLOTTE, N.C., Nov. 27.—Prayers of a deaf-mute kneeling by his cot in the city jail gave the clue which led to the solution of three store breakings, probably thirteen others and the theft of an automobile, declared Detective Frank N. Littlejohn after three men had been bound over by the city recorder's court on charges of committing three of the crimes.

Officers expect to recover several thousand dollars' worth of stolen merchandise.

Believed His Story.

"It was the first time in my life I ever saw a man pray in jail," said Detective Littlejohn. "He told an impossible tale of renting the car he was charged with stealing from three young men so he could go to High Point to appear on a boxing program, but he was in earnest so much we believed it."

The deaf-mute was Caesar Lentent, who was released upon the arrest of the others, police said.

The two men bound over to Superior Court on charges of breaking into the Holland pharmacy, the Holloway Music store and stealing the automobile of Henry Harbour of Hawthorne lane, were Lee Stigall and B. C. Ferguson of Charlotte.

They were reputed to have gotten $1,500 worth of merchandise from the two stores. Detectives recovered much of it in various parts of South Carolina.

"Stigall and Ferguson," said Detective Littlejohn, "boasted of robbing the Moskin credit store in broad daylight and walking up the streets with suits of clothes on their arms."

"A Million Jobs."

Two of the defendants have admitted to the police as well as to one of the proprietors of a store robbed that they committed the crime, said police.

Stigall boasted to companions in jail, police said, that he had "pulled a million jobs and talked a judge in Rockingham into turning him loose. "I didn't have any partner then," police said he asserted. "The only reason I am here now is because I had a partner this time."

GLAD CHILDREN DO NOT READ PLAYS

Noted Playright Gives Humorous Address at Deptford Nursery School.

LONDON, England, November 27 (Canadian Press). — George Bernard Shaw enjoyed himself at the McMillan Nursery School Training Centre at Church Street, Deptford, recently when he delighted the 340 children in the school by asking them to perform the "Pied Piper" for him, and amused the forty students in training there by giving a humorous lecture on the present state of Europe. The noted author and playwright asked the children if they had read any of his plays, and receiving "No" for an answer, he remarked that he was glad to hear this.

The McMillan Nursery School is for children whose parents have to go to work. The youngsters are nursed and cared for in the open-air, and as a rule they range in age from two to five years.

Lord Astor is buying, at a cost of £3,800, a site for a proposed college in which nursery school teachers will be trained on the same lines as those at the McMillan Centre. Lady Astor is interesting herself in the erection of the college.

Hard Fight Is Being Made

Monarch's Strength Is Being Put to the Most Severe Test.

NO PROGRESS MADE.

Prolonged Battle of Anxious Nature Most Favorable Outlook.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—Associated Press).—The Daily Mail in its second edition this morning displays prominently the following comment on the condition of King George:

"We regret to state that hopes entertained two days ago have not been fulfilled and that up to the present there has been no progress toward recovery. It is realized that the King is engaged in a hard uphill fight, and that his constitution is being put to a severe test."

"The original infection persists and, in the most favorable circumstances, the battle must be of a prolonged and anxious nature. The condition of anyone at the age of the King (63 years) suffering from such an illness must be considered serious."

It is generally expected by medical men that the crisis in the illness of King George may be reached about the middle of this week and that until then no definite opinion can be formed.

His Majesty had an uncomfortable day, it was disclosed last night, but on the whole the report was not considered to be unfavorable. Although his physicians had said yesterday that he was suffering from a high fever, his exact temperature of 101.6 was given last night for the first time in the regular bulletin.

The statement by Sir Stanley Hewett and Lord Dawson of Penn, issued shortly after 9 p.m. read, "the King has not had a comfortable day. His temperature was 101.6, but the pleurisy has not extended further and his strength is maintained."

Issuance of this report from Buckingham Palace was awaited by the public with perhaps greater anxiety than on any day since His Majesty became ill last Wednesday.

Sir Stanley Hewett and Lord Dawson of Penn returned to Buckingham Palace again shortly before 11 o'clock last night.

No Further Bulletin.

No further bulletin was issued when the two physicians departed from the Palace about 12 o'clock. Some alarm was occasioned outside the Palace when the doctors returned last night shortly before 11 o'clock, but it was learned that they had arranged for the second visit before leaving at nine o'clock.

Word that the King had not had a comfortable day was not unexpected since pleurisy is a painful disorder. His temperature was also rather high but on the other hand the fact that the pleurisy had not increased while his strength was being maintained, was in favor of the royal patient. The physicians in their morning bulletin had said that the spread of the pleurisy might be expected, and hence their report last

NEW NOBEL PRIZES WORTH MORE MONEY

France, Germany and Norway Divide 1928 Awards Issued in December.

STOCKHOLM, November 27 Canadian Press. — For the 28th consecutive year the Nobel prizes have just been awarded by the Swedish Academy, the Academy of Science, and the Academy of Medicine. This year Norway received one prize in literature, France one in literature and one in medicine, and Germany two in chemistry. The prize in physics was held over.

On December 10 each Nobel prize winner will this year receive a sum of about $42,060, as compared to $32,478, 1927. Originally each prize was worth $40,511 but the value shrank to $30,802 in 1923, the lowestt so far. In 1926 the prizes were worth $31,094 each. The increase in value this year is due partly to the remision of some of the Swedish taxes and partly on account of improved business conditions.

Since 1901, the first year when the prizes were distributed, 140 persons have been awarded prizes aggregating a total sum of about $3,975,000. Twenty-six of the prizes were awarded in medicine, 33 in physics, 25 in chemistry, 26 in literature, and 28 for peace work.

A survey of the nationality of the winners show that 31 of the prizes have gone to Germany, 21 to France, 20 to the British Empire, 9 each to Sweden and the United States, 7 each to Switzerland, Denmark and Holland, 5 each to Norway, Austria and Italy, 4 to Belgium, 2 to Poland, and one to Russia.

Goes to Canada.

One of the prizes in medicine went to Canada, when Dr. F. G. Banting, of the University of Toronto, with whom Dr. McLeod was associated, received the award in connection with his sterling work of the problem of diabetes, and discovery of the now famous insulin treatment for diabetes patients.

Only six women have been prize-winners and out of these Madame Curie, Paris, got half a prize in physics and later one in chemistry. The others were Baroness Von Suttner, Austria (peace), Selma Lagerlof, Sweden, Signora Grazie Deledda, Italy, and Sigrid Undset, Norway (literature.)

The Nobel prizes were instituted by Alfred Nobel, the Swedish engineer and the inventor of dynamite, who died in 1896, bequeathing his whole fortune to the Nobel Foundation. All prizes are awarded in Sweden, with one exception, the Peace prize, which is decided upon by a committee of the Norwegian national parliament. The cheque which accompanies the specially engraved diploma for this prize is, however drawn on a Stockholm bank. The prizes are given out every year on December 10th, Nobel's death anniversary. At this solemn ceremony the winners are expected to be present.

CATTLE, GRAIN AND PRODUCE

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

TORONTO, Nov. 27.—A slack and weaker feeling is very much in evidence on yesterday's large run at Union Stock Yards. This pronounced slow trade is especially noted on poor quality stock. Over 1,400 stale cattle were included in the cattle for sale yesterday, which were unsold from last week.

Only a few finished butchers were sold; the majority have not been bid on at all. Choice steers and heifers that were weighed up were turned over at steady prices. Medium and common are draggy.

Cows are selling unchanged so far, though lower tendencies of trading may yet affect sales. Choice sold at $7.50 to $8.25. A great number of canners and cutters are being sold, and they are turned over the quickest of any class here.

Bulls that have been weighed up were marked steady. Choice light butchers at $7.50 to $8.25. Bolognas $5.25 to $6.

Calves are selling unchanged from last week at $15 to $15.50 for the best.

There is doubtful feeling on lambs. Closing prices last week were $12, but bids to-day were 50 cents cwt. lower at $11.50. Some time will elapse before a settlement is reached.

Hog bids are priced at $8.75 f. o. b. selects, with salesmen holding out for $9.

Recipts: Cattle, 6,827; calves, 631; hogs, 1,061; sheep, 5,854.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., Nov. 27 (Canadian Press).—The export trade in grain here yesterday was of very limited character owing to the fact that United Kingdom and Continental buyers did not respond to the offers made by local exporters.

The trade in cash grain in the domestic market was fair and prices showed no important change.

The inquiry for Spring and Winter wheat flour was moderate and values were unchanged.

The undertone to the market for millfeed was firm under a good demand. Standard grades of rolled oats were steady with a fair trade passing.

An active trade was done in fresh and storage eggs, and prices were firmly maintained. Receipts were 658 cases.

Potatoes continued in good demand. New Brunswick Green Mountains sold freely at 50c to 55c per 90 lbs. in bulk; Prince Edward Island Cobblers at 70c; and Prince Edward Island Green Mountains at 80c.

Beans were advanced ½c per lb; Canadian beans sold at 9½c per lb; yellow at 8½c per lb, and yellow eyes at 9c per lb.

The butter trade was quiet, but prices for all grades were well maintained. Receipts were 100 packages.

An easier feeling developed in cheese and prices were reduced ¼c per lb. Receipts were 645 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, Nov. 27.—All grain scored advances in prices yesterday and in some quarters a reason suggested was increased notice being taken of prospective farm legislation. Curtailment of the United States wheat visible supply total, unexpected upturns in wheat quotations at Liverpool, and comparative smallness of country offerings of corn to arrive were likewise construed as factors favorable to grain bulls.

Closing quotations on wheat were firm ⅛c to ⅝c net higher. Corn finished ⅞c to 1⅝c up, oats showing ½c to ⅝c advance, and provisions unchanged to a rise of seven cents.

Particular attention was given to the fact that the Liverpool wheat market yesterday instead of undergoing an expected decline went in the opposite direction, notwithstanding that world shipments for the last week were the largest on record and that the amount of wheat on ocean passage is in excess of either a week or a year ago. However, Liverpool dipatches said importers there were contracting ahead for wheat. Besides, some estimates yesterday of Australian wheat yield were as low as 140,000,000 bushels, a total 20,000,000 bushels under estimates from either sources.

Top prices of the day in the wheat market here were reached after announcement that the United States wheat visible supply as a whole had decreased 645,000 bushels in the last week, despite big primary receipts. Incidentally, too, the fact was pointed out that Canadian country marketings of wheat for one day were 3,226,000 bushels against 3,509,000 bushels a year ago. Meanwhile, commission houses were found to be steadily absorbing wheat future deliveries here, especially whenever a soft spot in the trading was met with. On the other hand, reports of favorable weather for the Argentine harvest were virtually ignored and so too was continued apparent slackness yesterday of export demand for wheat from North America.

Friends of higher prices for corn disregarded better weather and the fact that arrivals of corn in Chicago yesterday totalled 614 cars. Country offerings, though, were only moderate, and although the corn visible supply increased 1,219,000 bushels the aggregate is only 5,025,000 bushels compared with 20,124,000 bushels last years. Oats borrowed strength from corn.

EGG MARKETS.

OTTAWA, Ont., November 27. — Canadian Press. — Increased shipments of eggs from B.C. are helping to relieve the shortage of fresh eggs in the east.

Toronto. — The local egg situation is unchanged.

Montreal. — With local storage stocks getting low trading in storage eggs in a jobbing way is increasing. Storage eggs are selling on spot here at extra 42-43c; firsts 39c, seconds 32-34c.

Winnipeg. — Fresh egg production here is still on the decline. Storage stocks are moving fairly well and are selling to the retailers at extras 48c, firsts 43c, seconds 32c.

Calgary. — Local poultry dealers have issued prices on turkeys. They are as follows: Live No. 1 turkeys, 12 lbs., and over, 25c; 10-12 pounds, 23c, 8-10 pounds, 21c; 6-8 pounds, 17c; No. 3 old Toms, 17c.

Vancouver. — Egg receipts here are showing an increase and there have been heavier shipments to the east, with prices tending lower. Cars loaded on Saturday were offered to Montreal in Toronto at extras 55c; firsts 50c, pullet extras, 42c.

Chicago spot unchanged. November, 30 3-4c December 29 7-8c.

BUTTER AND EGGS.

TORONTO, Nov. 27.—Butter locally was holding a steady position yesterday, and from a wholesale jobbing angle business was reported to be on the quiet side. Only a small volume of finest creamery changed hands and this was mostly for immediate requirements. Values for sales were well maintained, however, at last week's levels of from 40¾c to 41c per pound, for No. 1 pasteurized creamery solids, with undergrades changing hands with outlet narrow at a cent a pound less. The longer future of the butter market is dependent upon demand from all sources and inside and outside factors which may affect the volume of supply.

The cheese market was again pursuing a course bearing all the now familiar earmarks of quietness. From information gathered on spot there was no radical change in prices for the small amount of cheese passing from hand to mouth requirements. Dealers continue to quote 21½c to 21¾c per pound for No. 1 large, colored, paraffined and Government graded, delivered Toronto.

Prices for fresh eggs were being well maintained on the opening market for the week at customary firmness. There is still an acute shortage in current production from nearby centres. Demand is holding up well for eggs of all grades, and storage withdrawals are satisfactorily coping with domestic demand.

For Prospective Members Who Have Not Yet Joined

GREENE'S CHRISTMAS RADIO CLUB

On Saturday the last of the 5 remaining Rogers Batteryless Radio Receiving Sets, offered to Club members on our easy club plan, were taken, and we found our appropriation used up with four weeks yet to go before Christmas. Getting in touch with the factory and explaining the need of a further supply, if at all possible to secure it, we were promised to be delivered some time before Christmas. We are very glad that we are now able to extend the limit of 50 members to include this additional 18 Sets as we are sure it will prevent disappointment in that many cases.

18 More Rogers Sets

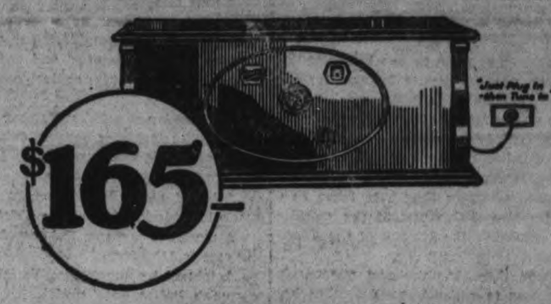
But don't delay a day if you want one of these Rogers sets, as the factory has now set our limit.



ROGERS BATTERYLESS RECEIVING SETS

Our Club members are given many valuable advantages. Every set is complete at the price quoted, with tubes. Members may erect their own aerial or our experts will install the Set at a moderate charge. Payments are very easy, $2.00 down and $2.50 a week. No interest if payments are made promptly.

The Rogers Sets are taking the radio public in Canada by storm. Its popularity is well deserved, and being a Canadian product of such outstanding merit, the demand has reached colossal proportions in Canada.

We cannot hope to increase our allotment any further before Christmas, in view of the factory shortage, so "'Nuff sed."

$2.00 to Join

Don't overlook the fact that our Club members have a second option in the reliable, high-class and thoroughly efficient

Day-Fan

A large number of these delicately receptive Sets have been chosen by Club members, and we are ready to give immediate delivery to 8 or 10 more, as the Sets are right on hand in our store, and, as hundreds can testify, the Day-Fan is absolutely dependable.

There's one good reason why it's good policy to buy a Day-Fan, that is the price. We are selling these peerless outfits at a very much lower price than ever before. Quality at the same high notch as ever, but the cost to our Club members is decidedly less.

Time is getting short and if the present demand keeps up for a few days more, our entire reservation will be exhausted and our Christmas Club closed. Act at once. Demonstrations any evening at our store.

THE WOLF MENACE.

An official of the Fish and Game Department is quoted as saying that hunters in Ontario this year have not encountered packs of wolves.

Apparently the department has not heard from all parts of the country.

Certainly the experience of hunters in the Apsley section has been that there are numerous wolves there, and that they are rapidly destroying the deer in that part of the Province.

The Examiner has published the experiences of several parties, and the sum total of the information received is that great havoc among the deer is being occasions, to such an extent that the assistance of the department will be sought in driving out this menace.

If conditions are not as bad elsewhere it is a most fortunate thing, for hunters are unanimous in declaring that if steps are not soon taken to cope with the wolves in the district mentioned it can soon be wiped off the map so far as its hunting possibilities are concerned.

It would be good business for the Government to investigate the situation and decide upon action that will give the deer at least a fighting chance.

READY TO HELP.

At yesterday's meeting of the Peterborough Rotary Club, President W. R. Morris called attention to the city's Old Home Week, and expressed on behalf of Rotary a willingness to co-operate with the movement.

"Whether they want us to serve either as individuals or as a club, we are behind them in this enterprise," Rotary's president declared amid the applause of the members.

That spirit, The Examiner believes, is typical of the general attitude of the people of Peterborough toward Old Home Week, and it is a spirit that is bound to carry the enterprise through to a triumphal success.

In these columns we have been devoting considerable space to discussing the reunion, because of our conviction that it will be a splendid occasion both for Peterborough and its former sons and daughters, and also because of the magnitude of the work that has to be done to bring the event to a successful culmination.

Now is the time to give the movement such impetus that it cannot fail, and for that reason we have been keeping this outstanding event before the people, feeling that it is only necessary to do so to ensure the desired results.

There are many signs that the necessary enthusiasm is on tap, and that the result can be awaited in confidence.

PETERBOROUGH'S WAR TROPHIES.

There may be varying opinions as to whether or not Confederation Square was the proper location for the captured German guns presented to Peterborough by the Militia Department as war trophies that had been earned by the gallantry and determination of the soldiers from this city and district.

There should be, however, no difference of opinion as to the unsuitability of where they were taken as a resting place for trophies that represent the sacrifice and suffering and symbolize the bravery of the Canadian overseas forces.

To calmly remove those trophies and presumably throw them away was to commit an act that has aroused not only the returned soldiers of Peterborough, aroused the public generally to a high pitch of indignation and it should occasion no surprise that the ex-service men have been quick to rescue the captured guns and place them for the time being on the Canadian Legion grounds.

The question of whether or not they should be restored to the place where they have remained ever since their presentation to the city eight years ago will have to be fought out in the City Council.

It was a much too important matter to have been decided by a sub-committee of the Council whose deliberations were never made public.

It involves much more than the disposing of three old guns.

It brings to attention a controversy that has been fought in the Old Land over the same point, a controversy that saw the ex-service men who wished war trophies to remain on display triumphant all along the line.

To have such a contentious question disposed of at a hasty conference about which the people had heard nothing was a short-sighted policy, the folly of which must have been evident when last night's demonstration was at its heighth.

So far as the citizens generally knew, there was no public demand for the removal of the captured guns.

For eight years since they were accepted by Mayor A. A. McIntyre on behalf of the city they had stood in Confederation Square, telling to the world their story of the victory of the Allies and testifying to the part our own Peterborough soldiers had played in that victory.

No serious proposal to have them removed had been mooted publicly.

The matter had never come before the whole body of the City Council.

And yet, with no hint of a public demand for such action, without the Council having a chance to divide on the question, without any consideration as to what was involved in the presentation of these trophies to Peterborough in the first place, these guns for whom Peterborough soldiers fought and in the capture of which Peterborough soldiers may well have lost their lives are seemingly tossed out as so much old iron.

The ultimate disposition of the guns must be threshed out in Council.

WEATHERMAN TO RETIRE.

The retirement on Jan. 1 of Sir Frederic Stupart, director of the Meteorological Service of Canada, will remove from office a man who has given long and meritorious service to the public. For approximately forty years he has been engaged in the important duty of studying and forecasting weather conditions, bringing into operation all scientific data available for the improvement of the service. From his stone building on Bloor street go forth twice daily the weather bulletins and forecasts upon which the Dominion so greatly relies. Farmers and business men in many activities depend in large measure upon weather predictions for their course of action, and as sources of information are enlarged and the means of diffusing the forecasts extended the value of the service grows.

The "Weatherman" may be subjected to banter. He may be classified with many unofficial competitors, such as the radio, the uncertain voice and annoying static of which are referred to as heralding a storm. He may have to contend with the old man with "rheumatics," who considers himself a weather prophet. He may even have the opposition of the old Scottish farmer in Bruce who, in a drenching rain, would not admit to a neighbor that it was a wet day "until he had seen his Globe." Despite these things the Weatherman has an increasing sphere of usefulness, and in this sphere the service given by Sir Frederic to the Dominion of Canada has been among the best. He is recognized as one of the foremost of forecasters, and, considering the vagaries of the commodity with which he deals, to attain a high place as a forecaster is no mean achievement. It calls for high efficiency to be right generally, as Sir Frederic is.

After forty years' service he has earned a rest, and a multitude of people will hope that it will extend over many more years and will not be marred by rain, snow or high winds.—The Globe.

THE DAILY NEWSPAPER.

(From the Vancouver Province)

What is a newspaper? It depends on when you look at it and how. To-morrow, something to light the morning fire with; to-day, the link that binds the reader to the world about him.

The purpose of the drama, said Hamlet, "both at first and now, was and is, to hold, as 'twere, the mirror up to Nature." There you have the newspaper. It is a mirror which reflects the world, an epitome of 24 hours. It is a drama, if you like, but not our western drama, neatly tied into four or five packages called acts, with a development, a crisis and a catastrophe. It is rather drama in flux. It is more like those Chinese plays that run on forever and seem to contain as they run a little bit of everything.

A little bit of everything! That is your newspaper. To prove it, look over Friday's Province. What do you see?

A little bit of humor: A Royal City motorist runs over a set of bagpipes and must pay for them; a New Yorker disgusted with Hoover's victory decides to exile himself forever and leaves for Vancouver.

A little bit of tragedy: British airmen crash to death; prairie lad is crushed by wagon.

A little bit of heroism: Chief officer of liner loses his life in effort to rescue a steward.

A bit of color and pageantry: Kyoto in festive array for the enthronement of the Emperor.

A bit of the miraculous: Dumb child suddenly speaks to his school fellows; New York patient sees with another man's eye.

A bit of history: Hudson's Bay Company's claim to minerals it held two centuries ago denied.

A bit of memory, a touch of pathos: Buy a poppy for remembrance.

A bit of melon-cutting: General Motors splits its shares.

A glimpse of terror: Mount Etna in eruption; another Pompeii.

A little flim-flaming: Citizen loses $102 in card game with a stranger.

A little irony: Sawmill worker makes arrangements to retire to life of comfort and ease; with three hours to go, a log throws him against a saw and that is the end.

A suggestion of politics: Ramsay MacDonald is angry with Stanley Baldwin; Ottawa talking of tariff; Government work at Sumas stops; Mr. Manson looks on defeat of his party as a blessing.

A bit of absurdity, a touch of bureaucracy: Canadian soldier declared to have no claim to pay.

A morsel of revenge: Poincare begged to come back and form a Ministry.

A token of appreciation: New Westminster pioneer to receive Native Sons' medal.

Yes, a newspaper is a little bit of everything. The stuff of life is in it. The drama never ends. What is catastrophe for one is triumph for another, and the play goes on.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

The men who helped to capture those German guns in the first place are now fighting to keep them.

Whatever may eventually be done with the war trophies presented to Peterborough by the Militia Department, the temporary resting place given them yesterday was not the place for them.

When Mayor McIntyre, eight years ago, talked of the meaning the German guns would have for future generations he failed to visualize a picture of them as the centre of last night's demonstration.

Well, anyway the Regina football team will have a chance of seeing something of the East.

Many Ontario cities nominated their municipal candidates yesterday, and will have the turmoil well out of the way before the Christmas rush commences.

A Thought

GOOD AND EVIL

There shall never be one lost good!
What was, shall live as before;
The evil is null, is naught, is silence implying sound;
What was good shall be good, with, for evil so much good more;
On the earth the broken arcs; in the heaven a perfect round.
—Robert Browning.

RICHES

To have what we want is riches; but to be able to do without is power.
—George MacDonald.

GOD'S MINUTE.

God said, Ask what I shall give thee.
—I Kings, 3:5.

O Lord, our Father, we lift our hearts in love and gratitude to Thee. Thy constant mercies come with the morning light, and fall upon us with the evening shadows; without them we could not live. The only return we can make to Thee, for Thine own sake, is to love Thee and to praise Thee. All else we must give to others, whose needs are like our own. Help us to know, also, that when we worship Thee, we ourselves are most benefited, by minds exalted and hearts purified in coming into Thy holy presence. May every day make Thee more real to us, until at last no other friends shall be so near. Give us to know Thy will concerning us, so that we shall not grope our way through life, but follow Thy plan. While we would thankfully enjoy every creature comfort bestowed upon us, keep us from setting our hearts too much on things that perish in the using. Help us to know our weaknesses that we may have sympathy for all who fail and sin because they do not lean on Thee. Enable us to so live as not to spoil a single day or grieve a single heart by deeds that might never be undone, or words that might never be recalled. And this we can do only by His help Who is our Saviour, and through Whom we ask it. Amen.

BROKEN

A Story of Revenged Love, by Ruby M. Ayres

CHAPTER XLII

"Julie!" Chittenham said pleadingly.

She looked up, but made no answer.

"You'll see me again?" Chittenham said. "You'll let me come tomorrow and see you and tell you what has happened?"

"What can have happened?" she asked, and her mouth quivered into a mirthless smile. She moved to the door and opened it. "Please go," she said again faintly.

Anger flashed into Chittenham's eyes. "You are turning me out?"

She answered without looking at him, "I have asked you to go."

He was much taller than she, but when he went to her and put his arms round her she had the feeling that he did not really hold her—with all his passionate love and desire he was not really master of her slim body that seemed to steel itself against him.

"Don't be cruel, Julie! Kiss me good night at least."

"No."

He drew a harsh breath. "I could make you if I chose. I made you kiss me last night, Julie."

She said nothing; she hardly seemed to be listening, and he let his arms fall from about her.

"I shall see you tomorrow," he said again, hoarsely.

Still there was no answer, and after a moment he went out into the little hall and opened the front door.

He was so sure she would call to him, perhaps run after him. He was so sure that in a moment she would be in his arms, her lips crushed against his—he counted the seconds feverishly by his heart-beats.

But Julie did not move, and she gave no sign.

Chittenham looked back.

"Julie!"

He waited a moment, but the silence remained unbroken, and he went out of the flat, shutting the door behind him.

It seemed to Julie that she stood for hours, leaning against the wall, her body so tired that it was too much effort even to move over to the fire and a comfortable chair. Her head ached miserably, and yet her brain had never seemed more wide awake. She could not even control her thoughts. Some power outside herself seemed to be driving them on at racing speed.

"Giles has gone—and this time he will never come back. Sadie Barrow is his wife—and he's going to stay with her. He'll never hold me in his arms again, never kiss me any more. It's all ended. Why did I let him stay last night? Why did'n't I send him away? I knew it was too great a happiness to last. Gone! Well, I've got to get over it, that's all. If he doesn't care, why should I? And I don't believe he does care. It's all nonsense talking about honor. I can't see that he owes any duty to Sadie. He said they'd never been anything real to each other. Oh God, why did I let him go? He would have stayed if I'd asked him to, and now he'll never come back. Not that it matters—not that anything matters. I've got Lawrence, and he'll be kind. I've got him to turn to. Oh, I'm so tired!"

With a supreme effort she dragged herself across the room to the fire. It had burned down and she replenished it with shaking hands. She felt as if already a lifetime had passed since Chittenham came to the flat, and yet only a minute ago he had been there with her, so close that she had but to put out her hand to touch him, and now he had gone back to Sadie, back to his wife!

It was as if someone turned a knife in her heart.

His wife—Sadie with her shrill, high-pitched voice and cheeky smile: Sadie, who had a right to the joy of his arms and the passion of his lips. Julie had liked Sadie, but now she felt that she hated her. Tomorrow Giles would come back and the agony would begin all over again—the same futile arguments which led nowhere, the same protestations of love which meant nothing, which could never reach fulfilment.

"I will never willingly see him again," Uulie told herself passionately. "He has deceived me twice. I will never forgive him as long as I live."

She got up almost violently as though driven by the sudden reaction of thought.

She would send at once to Schofield; she would not lose a moment.

She went to the 'phone and called his number, but it was only after a long time that the hotel people could give her any news of him.

He was out at the moment, they said, but he was certainly returning that night.

There was a little pause—then: "Mr. Schofield is leaving London early tomorrow morning."

"Leaving?"

Julie felt as if her last anchor had been torn from her—the waves of misery and utter loneliness seemed to beat up afresh all around her. The voice at the other end of the 'phone asked politely if a message could be taken.

"No—oh no, thank you!"

Julie hung up the receiver and turned away. Lawrence was leaving London—leaving her! She was seized with exaggerated panic. What was to become of her? Even Bim was weary of her; there was no place for her in the world. But Lawrence had loved her, must surely still love her. She remembered the despair in his eyes when she told him she would not marry him.

If she could only see him for a moment she was confident that everything would be all right—to see him, just to see him! She felt like a child left alone in the dark, straining every nerve to get to the one person who can take away dread and the desolate sense of loneliness.

She took off her loose gown and dressed again with shaking fingers. She was still very cold, but her face and head felt burning.

She would put herself beyond Chittenham's reach. Tomorrow when he came he should find it too late.

If Lawrence would take her away tonight, she would go with him. She was tired of hoping for things that never came true, afraid of a love that brought with it only pain. She went out into the wet, chilly night and took a taxi. She drove straight to the hotel where Lawrence was staying. No, he was not in yet and they could not say at what hour he would be returning. It was past nine o'clock then.

"I'll wait a little while and see if Mr. Schofield returns," Julie said.

She sat down in the lounge. It was very quiet and deserted. A bell-boy yawned from his seat on a high stool and a porter stood at the foot of the staircase reading a racing paper. Outside, the rain started again, pattering down heavily on the pavements and against the plate-glass of the lounge windows. Julie closed her eyes wearily. She wished Lawrence would come. In her state of miserable agitation she longed for his sane honesty; she felt that it would be a comfort to hold his hand and meet once more the simple adoration of his eyes.

The minutes ticked away, and later she supposed that she must have fallen into a stupor out of which she was roused with a start by the sound of a chiming clock and a swirling draught as the heavy swing door into the lounge swung open to admit a man.

Julie started up eagerly, but it was not Schofield, and her heart sank. The porter was looking at her curiously, and from his high stool the bell-boy was staring with strained, sleepy eyes. Julie walked across to the porter.

"I cannot wait any longer. I will leave a note for Mr. Schofield."

"Very good, madam."

He took her to a desk and gave her paper and a pen.

Julie wrote a few hurried lines.

"I didn't mean it, Lawrence dear. I want you to come back to me. Please ring me in the morning.

JULIE."

It was a relief to have written that, and she half smiled as she thought how unnecessary it was to have added those last words. He would not ring her, he would come round, she was sure; he would come very early, perhaps even tonight if he were back in time, and then in the morning they would go away and make some sort of happiness together.

Julie tried hard not to think beyond tomorrow, but although she was so tired and felt ready to drop she could not sleep. She lay awake for hours listening to every sound. A footfall in the street outside sent her starting up in bed, her nerves jerking like overstrained wires.

Was it Giles come back to her—or Lawrence? Her heart-beats seemed to choke her.

But the footsteps passed by and silence fell once more.

In the early morning Julie dozed off to sleep, only waking swhen she heard the maid let herself into the flat and move about in the kitchen lighting the fire.

Presently she brought tea and a note.

"It was lying on the mat when I came in, miss," she said.

Julie glanced at the handwriting, then sat up, her pulses jerking. It was from Lawrence Schofield. She was conscious of a warm glow of pleasure.

He loved her—it was something to be happy about in a world that held no real happiness. He must have brought it himself late last night. Perhaps after all it had been his footstep outside which she had heard.

She broke open the seal; the envelope felt unusually bulky. She drew out its contents—her own note which she had written last night in the hotel lounge, torn across and across into minute pieces. That was all.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 28, 1928

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

Good and evil planetary influences are strong today, but adverse stars seem to dominate.

Women are well directed under this planetary government which is supposed to aid them in carrying out their plans.

It is an auspicious wedding day, but care should be exercised to avoid future differences of opinion or tastes.

Importers, merchants and all who cater to the finer or artistic side of life should profit greatly at this time when there will be a demand for what is beautiful.

Art will rule in America more widely than it has in the past and the wealthy will bestow large legacies on educational institutions where talent is developed.

Dress is to be even more exploited as one of the great interests in modern life and artists will do much to improve the modes, it is foretold.

The Moon's eclipse of yesterday is now read as rather ominous, because it brings Saturn rising and indicates troubles and corruptions in government matters.

Again war in Europe and the Far East is prognosticated by the seers who counsel great wisdom in conducting international business.

Russia is to undergo changes that are read as most beneficial to the people and promising to outside interests, it is foretold.

All the signs appear to presage for 1929 events of tremendous import to the world and exacting to those who bear heavy responsibilities.

Persons whose birthdate it is may have a year of change and exacting experiences. Much good may develop if widsom is brought to bear on all personal crises.

Children born on this day probably will be exceedingly independent in nature. These subjects of Sagittarius usually see life from a different point of view than is common. They are often dominated by one idea and are able to do much through concentration.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., Nov. 27. Canadian Press.— William Mackenzie, 42, of this city, was drowned in Lake Huron, on Sunday, from the lighter Reliance, while the vessel was being towed to Port Huron by the wrecking tug Favorite. The tow line parted in a storm and while Mackenzie was trying to get a new line on he became fouled in it and was thrown overboard.

Uncle Wiggily

A Bed-Time Story by Howard R. Garis

UNCLE WIGGILY'S BEANIKLE

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

Once upon a time, not so very many years ago, there was a large, green string bean who lived on a vine in the garden with many other string beans. It was Uncle Wiggily's garden, close to the rabbit gentleman's hollow stump bungalow.

In the spring Uncle Wiggily had planted the beans. The sun warmed them, the rain wet them and in the brown earth where they were planted they found things to eat so the bean vines grew and grew and grew until they blossomed. Then the blossoms dropped off and there came in their places long, string beans.

"Ah, I shall have a fine crop," said Uncle Wiggily one day when he was walking in the garden with Mr. Twistytail the pig.

"Yes," grunted Mr. Twistytail, "the beans will soon be large enough to "Ha! Ha! What's this?" laughed the rabbit.

pick. You can boil them and pickle them."

"True enough," said Mr. Longears.

Now this one Big Bean on the vine heard what the rabbit and pig gentlemen were talking about and it asked another bean:

"What does Uncle Wiggily mean by saying he is going to pick and boil and pickle us? What's that?"

"Why, don't you know," said a Lima Bean on the next vine. "That is what we grow for—to be picked and eaten."

"Oh, how dreadful!" cried the Big Bean as I shall call him so you may know him from the others. "I don't want to be picked! I don't want to be eaten or pickled! And, what is more, I'm not going to be!"

So the Big Bean hid himself among the leaves, crouching down so low that when Uncle Wiggily picked the other vegetables the rabbit missed the Big Bean.

Summer passed and the vine began to wither and dry up, but still the Big Bean, hiding there, was not picked. He was all alone.

"I saved my life by being smart!" said the Big Bean. "Uncle Wiggily didn't get me. Ha! Ha!"

But soon the weather grew colder. At night the Big Bean shivered when the dried vine rustled in the wind. But the other beans was safe in cans within Uncle Wiggily's bungalow, snug and warm.

"Perhaps I made a mistake hiding out so Uncle Wiggily could not pick me," thought the Big Bean. "I never knew it would be so cold."

Then came winter with freezing rains and snow. One day after a rain the weather was so cold that everything froze into ice and, being wet, the Big Bean was turned into an icicle. Inside a casing of ice the Big Bean was as stiff as a lead pencil.

"Alas! This is the end of me!" sighed the Big Bean. "I am frozen stiff! Soon I shall be no more."

That morning Uncle Wiggily, walking in his garden, saw the bean covered with ice glittering in the sun.

"Ha! Ha! What's this!" laughed the rabbit gentleman. "Here's a beanikle. That's what it is—a beanikle."

"What's a beanikle?" asked Baby Bunty, who was hopping through the snow-covered garden with her uncle.

"A beanikle is a bean that has been turned into an icicle," said Mr. Longears. "This bean hid under the leaves so I couldn't find it to pick it when I picked the others and now it is frozen. But I will take it into my bungalow, let it thaw before the fire and then I will give it to Nurse Jane to cook."

The Big Bean was too cold to pay any heed to what happened. So Uncle Wiggily picked it and took it into his bungalow. Putting it in front of the fire Mr. Longears watched to see what the beanikle would do when it thawed.

And as the rabbit gentleman watched the beanikle, all of a sudden the Bob Cat sneaked into the bungalow, for Mr. Longears had forgotten and left the door open. Close up to the bunny pattered the Bob Cat on his cushioned paws and he was just going to grab Mr. Longears when, all of a sudden, the beanikle burst! It was so near the fire that the ice melted, turned to steam and blew up. Bang went the beanikle!

Straight toward the Bob Cat flew a large piece of the bursting beanikle and it hit him on his soft and tender nose.

"Wow!" yelled the Bob Cat and out of the door he ran. "I'm shot!"

"Ha! Ha!" laughed Uncle Wiggily. "It's a good thing I brought that frozen beanikle into my bungalow. It shot the Bob Cat."

"But it's the end of the Big Bean," said Baby Bunty.

"Yes," said Mr. Longears, "it's the end of the beanikle." But the bean was happy, even though it had exploded, for it had saved the bunny from being clawed and scratched by the Bob Cat. So this teaches us that even beans are of some use in this world.

Lyrics of Life

By Douglas Malloch

INSENSIBLE

Grieve not, although you grieve so much,
And have your doubting, and belief,
For I would rather know life's grief
Than have a heart grief could not touch.
The heart that God forgot to string,
That nothing wakes to some refrain,
Will never know the depths of pain,
And never know some sweeter thing.

For I have looked in many a face
On life's long road, so rough, so steep,
And there were some with furrows deep,
And some whose brows showed never a trace.
And these, the last, I found were sad
With sadness like the chill of steel,
Souls too insensible to feel
The sweetness of the grief they had.

For half asleep through half a world
They walked, and neither lost nor kept,
And with some beauty never wept.
Nor shouted when some flag unfurled.
And I would rather feel like this,
Know stars and daggers, joy and strife
Than never take the blows of life,
And always give a loveless kiss.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY BOYS JOIN GANGS

By Meheas E. Thompson, Ph.D.

(Author, The Springs of Human Action)

It is as natural for a boy to join a gang as it is for him to eat. Eating is of course prompted by hunger. Organizing into gangs is prompted by a craving equally primitive—the self-assertive and social impulses.

This is further illustrated by the type of gangs that normal boys will form. Most boys' gangs are organized on the model of a predatory society—pirates, robbers, etc. They find or build a shack, dig out a cave or adopt an empty house to which they bring their plunder. Petty thieving is likely to be one of their activities. Melons, fruit, eggs, are generally taken from places where they would be willingly given if asked for.

Some observers of such traits have come to the erroneous conclusion that there is a criminal instinct cropping out in such acts. If these are the signs of an instinct for crime then all men are born criminals, for the very best as well as the worst behaved boys in any community have the same tendencies to play pirate and desperado, to organize into gangs and play pranks of all sorts.

The fact of the matter is that the natural, normal impulse of physical activity, self-expression and self assertion crops out in the exercise of independent action and of doing things on one's own initiative and responsibility. The pirate and the predatory bands of robbers are imitated by boys not because they are criminal in their make-up but because these things represent a more primitive state of society and because they demand greater physical exertion, native daring and skill, and are therefore more thrilling than ordinary games.

Ordinarily boys' gangs dissolve automatically as the boys grow older. Where they do not do so it is because of arrested development on the part of the boys or because the policeman and others have kept up the interest and aroused the spirit of adventure in the gang by unwise opposition.

The gang is in part a protest against adult domination. It represents the revolt of youth and indicates the cropping out of the spirit of independence. In a sense it is the beginning of co-operative effort in organized society when the burden of citizenship shall fall on the shoulders of youth.

The gang and the gang spirit merit sympathetic supervision rather than condemnation, and ruthless suppression.

Argentine Crop Reports Strengthens Wheat Values

CHICAGO, Nov. 27.—(Canadian Press).—Reports of hot winds in Argentina tended to lift Chicago wheat prices early to-day, not withstanding Liverpool quotations were lower. Corn values went higher on account of prospects of rain and snow throughout the corn belt. Opening unchanged to ⅜ off, wheat later scored a general advance. Corn started unchanged to ⅜ up and subsequently showed rise all around. Oats sympathized with corn.

Trading Is Irregluar On New York Exchange

NEW YORK., November 27. Canadian Press. — The main price tendency in to-day's stock market was again upward although the market developed more irregularity than in most recent sessions, due to the rather general desire to take profits before the Thanksgiving day holiday. Copper and railroad shares were in the forefront of the advance with a sprinkling of high priced specialties marked up 5 to 12 points by the pool operators.

Banks called $40,000,000 in loans, presumably to meet the holiday and month end demands, and the call money rate advanced from 7 to 7 1-2, and then to 8 per cent.

There was nothing in the day's news to explain the renewed accumulation of copper stocks although the belief persists in some quarters that a further advance in red metal prices is likely before the end of the year. Anaconda touched 115 for the first time and American Smelting, Kennecott, Greene Cananea, and United States Smelting moved up 3 to 4 points, the last named also touching a new high. International Nickel ran up 12 points to a new peak at 224 5-8.

Among other industrial and railroad issues to sell at year's best prices were American Metals, American International, Allied Chemical, Columbia Gas, Julius Kayser, Goodyear Rubber, Nash Motors, Stewart Warner, White Sewing Machine, Pere Marquette, Erie Common, New Haven and Chicago Great Western common and preferred.

Midland Steel Products preferred broke eight points, Radio 7, Coty and Curtiss 4 each, and New York Central, Atlantic Refining, Commercial credit and Otis Elevator, 2 points or more, but all receiving good buying support on decline, and made partial recovery by early afternoon.

Prices On Standard Average Slightly Lower

TORONTO, Nov. 27 (Canadian Press).—The Standard Mining Exchange market settled down to-day after yesetrday's sensational buying. The number of transactions was lower and prices were slightly downward. Noranda recovered during the morning after it had opened at 64.00 and at noon registered a net gain of fifteen cents at 65.75. Hudson Bay continued its soaring and rose 40 cents to 21.50. Its highest point during the morning was 21.75. Lake Shore was down 25 cents at 18.25, while Mining Corporation gained 15 to 3.95. McIntyre dropped 25 cents to 22.25. Teck-Hughes was up 5 at 8.35. Malartic 13 down at 90, Nipissing 10 at 2.95, Sudbury Basin 10 at 8.00, Towagmac 20 at 2.90, and Wright-Hargreaves 1 at 1.96. Abana held the lead in transactions among the unlisted securities, and at noon stood at 4.07, a gain of 22 cents. Jackson-Manion was down 1 at 23, and Capital Rouyn ¾ at 11¾. Mandy Mines advanced 5 to 1.45.

NORANDA.

No news of importance developed over the week end as regards Noranda minewise. It is the concensus of opinion of market traders, brokers and the Street in general, that Noranda will go considerably higher—but how high is the question. Information received by us on Saturday from our field man in Rouyn which was given out on Saturday morning, suggests that news of a sensational nature is forthcoming in the near future. Rumor has it that a process report will be isued in December by officials of the company. It is believed that Noranda is a hold until news of a definite nature is forthcoming.

The possibility of a smelter being erected at Cobalt to treat copper and other ores was mooted at the Cobalt Board of Trade banquet recently. A. K. Roberts, in the chair, said the scheme had not gone far as yet, but mining men "had not entirely scouted the idea. Dr. E. F. Armstrong declared that the board's executive was "not working on a fictitious basis." He said that Cobalt ores, worthless two years ago, to-day were valued at $192 per ton, and two mining engineers had told him that unless they got something to handle zinc "they would be ruined." Captain Jaffreys, of Haileybury, said that he had a man ready to finance a smelter at Cobalt and another member suggested that they should get assistance from the Provincial Government.

It is rumored that a progress report will be issued in December by the officials of Noranda and that until that time definite news would not be available. Unofficial advices are to the effect that a new three-foot high grade copper vein was encountered during the sinking of the new shaft. This was entirely unexpected as it was thought that the site chosen was definitely barren of ore save for the deeper horizons. Another rumor has it that news of great importance will be forthcoming shortly. The stock continues to supply the fireworks on the stock exchanges as has been the case for several days past.
